HALT 7 BILLION BOND BILL

SEEK TO FORCE EXTRA SESSION FROM WILSON

G.O.P. Members Bolt Decision of Party on Filibuster.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., March 2, 1 a. m.—The first amendment to the loan bill, proposing that the vignette of former President Roosevelt be placed on the new securities, was voted down, 37 to 23. All of the Republicans, except Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, voted for the amendment, and all the Democrats, except Senator Reed of Missouri, voted in opposition. Senator Owen of Oklahoma, Democrat, said if the amendment would not jeopardize the bill he would favor it.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., March 1.—After being in session continuously for more than twelve hours the house recessed just before midnight under an agreement to meet tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 1.—[Special.]—In a turbulent conference that ended in a row, attended by threats by Senator Sherman of Illinois to resign from the senate, Republican senators tonight abandoned the project of a concerted party filibuster to defeat the $7,000,000,000 bond issue bill providing for the forthcoming Victory Liberty loan.

Impressed by fears that failure of the bond bill and the measure appropriating $750,000,000 for the railway administration might produce a financial stringency, if not a panic, and disturbed by forebodings of political evil if Mr. Wilson should make good his threat to fasten upon them the responsibility for any unfortunate results, the Republicans weakened on their plan to ditch such important legislation as would compel the president to summon the new Republican congress into extraordinary session immediately.

Penrose Starts More Trouble.

As soon as the Republicans surrendered the bond bill was laid before the senate and debated on its merits until 11 o'clock, when Vice President Marshall, convinced that it was about to be passed, went home. Soon thereafter Senator Penrose, who led the defeated movement in the Republican caucus for a party filibuster, obtained the floor and proceeded to produce some obstruction in his individual capacity.

Senator Sherman, who bolted the caucus in high dudgeon at the lack of courage of his associates to fight the president's demands for eleventh hour legislation, was standing by ready to give aid to Penrose and Senator France of Maryland was piling his desk high with ponderous tomes, from which he promised to read at length through the hours of the night.

La Follette Ready to Help.

"I am willing to speak till I drop," said Senator France, in threatening to carry out individually the filibuster which the Republicans had refused to countenance as a party move.

Senator La Follette, who had spoken for four hours earlier in the day and filibustered the oil and coal land leasing bill into the ditch, reappeared considerably refreshed and making ominous preparations to "submit a few observations." He did not attend the party caucus.

Senator Penrose held forth at length on Democratic extravagance, being helped out in consumption of time by Senator Reed of Missouri, Democrat, who brought up the question of the dilatoriness of the war department in discharging soldiers in the cantonments.

"Army in Prison Camps."

"Our army camps are fast becoming prison camps," proclaimed Senator Reed. "I ask the senator from Pennsylvania whether he knows why our boys are being kept in these camps?"

"They are probably being kept there till Secretary Lane gets his swamp lands reclaimed to provide them with homes," replied Penrose.

As the night wore on, with senators slumbering in the cloak rooms, the discussion in the chamber turned to the question of the administration's

NURSES STRIKE FOR 'RIGHTS' AND SIX GET 'LEFT'

Food in the Oak Park Hospital Cause; 18 Return.

A four hour strike of the twenty-four nurses of the Oak Park hospital, conducted by the Sisters of Misericordi, led to the expulsion of six of the strikers, it became known last night.

Miss Olive Hay of 44 Washington boulevard, Oak Park, spokesman for the expelled nurses, said the trouble originated because of protests against the food served the nurses and a petition for more sanitary conditions in the nurses' home at 600 Maple avenue.

Among other allegations, she said mice had been found in the bread served them.

Food Their Chief Complaint.

Mother Superior St. Lawrence expelled the six nurses, Miss Hay said. They are, besides herself, Inez Sims, Harriett Caskey, Anna Hayes, Geraldine Nitz, and Flora Wachoevich. Some of them are without funds, Miss Hay said.

Miss Hay's story is as follows:

"Our food was poorly cooked and many times consisted of sardines and tomatoes served in the can. We had few vegetables and condensed milk was used, although fresh milk was available from nearby farms. For Sunday dinner we were served with fried liver and boiled potatoes, bread, but no butter. The food was our chief complaint.

Twenty-four Sign Petition.

"The twenty-four nurses signed a petition, which I presented to Mother Superior St. Lawrence last Friday. An interview was refused and all of us quit. That was at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Fifty patients were left without attention. The mother superior then visited us, and eighteen of the nurses returned to work at 5 o'clock. The six of us, who, the mother superior said, were 'ringleaders,' were notified of our explusion.

"Our trunks are still at the nurses' home and we have not been allowed to remove them. We intend to call for them in a body Sunday. If we are not allowed to remove them we will ask aid of the courts."

Mother Superior's Statement.

Mother Superior St. Lawrence made the following statement:

"The nurses were not satisfied with some things and went on a strike. Their charges about the food in general and the condition of the home are not true. If the press does not protect an institution of this kind we will have to stand on our own ground. You should not print such a story as this. It is in my power to punish the girls as I see fit."

She would not say whether or not the nurses expelled would ever be permitted to return and complete their nursing course, or what punishment, if any, would be meted out to the nurses who returned after the four hour strike.

Nation's Fighters May Keep Their Uniforms

Washington, D. C., March 1.—[Special.]—Soldiers, sailors, and marines honorably discharged from the service since Nov. 11, 1918, or who may hereafter be discharged, may keep their uniforms and personal equipment, to be worn after the first three months only on occasions of ceremony, and are granted mileage at 5 cents per mile from place of discharge to their homes, under a bill signed today by the president.

This action reverses previous orders that non-coms and privates must turn back their uniforms to the government within three months after their discharge.

IRISH, ROILED, TO GET HEARING BY CONGRESS

Committee Fails for Three Days to Get Wilson's Ear.

Washington, D. C., March 1.—The delegation of prominent American citizens of Irish descent appointed at the recent Irish race convention in Philadelphia, won its fight today for action by the house rules committee to give immediate right of way in congress to a resolution instructing the American delegates at Paris to urge Ireland's cause before the peace conference.

After hearing the delegation, which was headed by Justice John W. Goff and Daniel F. Cohalan of New York, the rules committee agreed to report out a rule making the resolution in order in the house before adjournment.

Fail to See President.

Later the delegation, which arrived in Washington on Tuesday, called at the White House to see President Wilson and personally present to him resolutions and memorials adopted at the Philadelphia convention. They failed to see the president, but were told that he would receive them in New York next Tuesday night after he speaks at the Metropolitan Opera house on the league of nations.

Tonight John P. Grace, former mayor of Charleston, S. C., and a member of the delegation, gave out a statement saying:

"All during the war it was presumed that among the small nations America was fighting to establish in security was surely Ireland, to which, as Washington and the patriots of America acknowledged, they owed more in the fateful hours of the revolution than to all other foreign powers combined; but when the committee from the Philadelphia convention got to Washington it met with a strong series of forbidding difficulties.

Waited Three Days.

"Twenty-one men from as far west as the Pacific coast and from New England and the south solemnly left their important affairs and gathered in Washington Tuesday night, according, as they supposed, to an appointment at the White House on Wednesday to receive them. Wednesday passed, Thursday passed, Friday passed, and practically the whole of Saturday and they have not seen the president yet. They had great difficulty even in seeing his secretary.

"Word had come to them through many supposedly authentic channels that they would be seen at this hour or that hour, or on this day or on that day. They approached the subject through senators and attachés of various degrees of importance at the White House and elsewhere, but there was an impenetrable barrier.

Demand for Showdown.

"At last the committee, in indignation, made up its mind that dignity, if nothing else, required a showdown; either the president, through his buffers, was trifling with the time and the rights of American citizens, or some one was failing properly to put the matter before him. Whatever was happening, days were passing and he was about to sail for Europe, with the case of Ireland absolutely untouched.

"Meantime, the press carried reports that, at the White House dinner, he had excluded Ireland from the program. This was speedily denied by Mr. Tumulty, but at once reaffirmed openly on the floor of the senate.

"The committee went to the White House at 12:30 today. Received by Mr. Tumulty, it was told that the president was a very busy man. Judge Goff said that of course he knew this, but this was a tremendous issue for those interested. Mr. Tumulty said he was as much interested in the issue as anybody. He said he had been pressing the matter to the president's attention and expected to her from him almost any moment. Judge Goff said that as a matter of courtesy the committee would return at 3 o'clock for a definite answer.

Returned for Assurance.

"Meantime, Mr. Tumulty had the fact communicated to the committee that if it returned at 3 o'clock it would be informed that the president would receive it, not in Washington, but on next Tuesday night in New York, after his speech at the Metropolitan Opera

WILSON NAMES PAGE TO FILL KOHLSAAT SEAT

Peoria Man Picked for U.S. Circuit Court Vacancy.

Washington, D. C., March 1.—[Special.]—George T. Page of Peoria, Ill., president of the American Bar association, was nominated by the president today to be Circuit judge of the Seventh judicial circuit, succeeding the late Judge Christian C. Kohlsaat of Chicago.

The nomination of Mr. Page has been expected here for some time, following a recommendation to the president by Attorney General Gregory that he be appointed to the vacancy, which has long existed.

The attorney general went to Illinois about six weeks ago to investigate candidates who had been suggested for the nomination. Upon his return he concluded that Mr. Page was best fitted for the high office, and so reported to the president.

Mr. Page was recently in Washington, as president of the American Bar association, in conference with Secretary of War Baker and Judge Advocate General Crowder with reference to reform of military justice advocated by the bar association. His activities were instrumental in securing a review of many cases of such injustice. At that time Secretary Baker agreed to coöperate with a committee of the bar association on the formulation of a new code of military justice.

The appointment of Mr. Page carried with it no political significance. While a Democrat he has never taken part in factional politics and his appointment was for other than political reasons. His appointment is satisfactory to the regular Democratic organization.

NEW REVOLTS OVER GERMANY; LEADER QUITS?

Scheidemann Is Said to Have Resigned; Trade Tieup.

BULLETIN.

BERLIN, March 1.—[By the United Press.]—A new revolution is threatened in Munich as a result of the refusal of the soviet congress there to declare Bavaria a soviet republic. After a resolution providing such a declaration had been rejected, Lewin and Musham, leaders of the extremists, and four other delegates resigned and indicated their intention to begin a new revolt.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, March 1.—[By the Associated Press.]—A further revolutionary movement in Germany is imminent, according to a report reaching London through Holland today. It is added that Chancellor Scheidemann has resigned.

BERLIN, Feb. 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Maeroker, commander of the troops guarding the national assembly at Weimar, was attacked by a mob in Erfurt today and robbed of a portfolio containing important documents bearing on the plans of the government for dealing with the strike situation in central Germany.

The general was attacked in front of the barracks in Erfurt and was beaten severely before he could be rescued. The shoulder straps were torn from his uniform by the mob.

Reds Plan New Berlin Rising.

The minister of the interior, it is declared authoritatively, has ordered a house to house search in Berlin for hidden weapons and munitions, to begin March 1. Government troops and the police will coöperate in the search.

Two hundred thousand are idle in Berlin alone because of the general strike.

The Spartacans are reported to be planning another outbreak for March 5, when the newly elected Prussian diet meets.

The national commissioner of coal and supply declared today that the strike in central Germany threatens the supply of electric current in greater Berlin. Railroad passenger traffic for points in central Germany has entirely ceased.

Fear Reign of Terror.

BERNE, March 1.—The situation in Germany is described as most critical everywhere in messages received here today. The general strikes are extending more and more, especially in central Germany, where disorder is increasing.

Fears are felt by the authorities that a reign of terror is about to begin in Erfurt, Gera, Greiz, and Halle. It is reported also that the bolshevik danger is growing in eastern Silesia.

Martial Law in Bavaria.

PARIS, March 1.—[By the Associated Press.]—The soldiers' and workingmen's congress at Munich has declared martial law for all Bavaria, according to a Zurich dispatch to the Matin.

Government troops are marching from three directions upon Halle and Merseburg, Prussian Saxony, says a dispatch to the Havas Agency from Basel, quoting the Gazette of Frankfort.

According to the Gazette's Berlin correspondent, more than 130,000 volunteers have enrolled throughout Germany to aid the government.

Soviet Rules Brunswick.

COPENHAGEN, March 1.—A soviet republic has been proclaimed in Brunswick, according to a dispatch from Berlin under date of Friday.

Representatives of all the Spandau state establishments have decided upon a general strike on March 5 as a demonstration against the government and in sympathy with the movement in central Germany, the dispatch adds.

These representatives demand the establishment of a communistic state and that all the state churches be thrown open for meetings.

Gunboats to Ludwigshafen.

MAYENCE, Feb. 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—Two gunboats of the Rhine fleet have steamed up the river from Mayence for Ludwigshafen, south of Mannheim, where they will be stationed indefinitely, owing to the recent Spartacan uprising at Mannheim.

Carter Harrison Not to Run; Tells "Tribune" in France; Sticks by the Red Cross

Immediately after the mayoralty primaries last Tuesday night "The Tribune" cabled its Paris bureau to interview ex-Mayor Carter Harrison on his attitude and intentions toward an independent candidacy for mayor.

One of the Chicago men in "The Tribune's" Paris bureau—Spearman Lewis—at once made an engagement to see Capt. Harrison at Toul on Thursday night. The interview was transmitted to Paris and reached Chicago by cable last evening.

The ex-mayor's statement that he would remain until the conclusion of his term of enlistment April 1, and that he could not be a candidate at this election is first hand information to Mr. Lewis, who is a long time acquaintance of the ex-mayor, and who is thoroughly familiar with political conditions here. The statement disagrees with reports published yesterday regarding Capt. Harrison's intentions to sail at once for home, but it coincides with a letter from Capt. Harrison, made public yesterday by Philip McKenna.

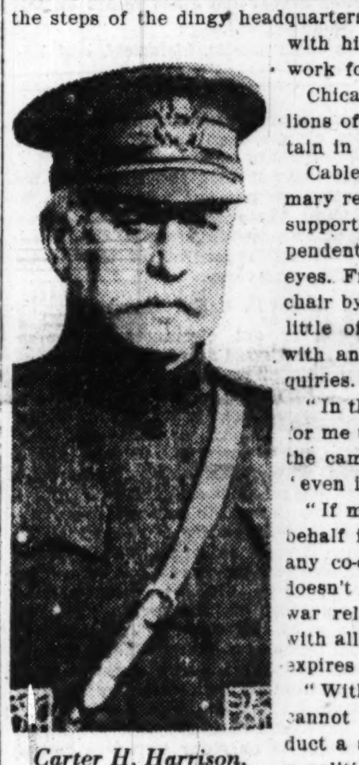
TOUL, France, Feb. 28, by Paris, March 1.—He swung off the driver's seat of his weatherbeaten camionette like a Santa Claus. He bounced up the steps of the dingy headquarters at Toul with the joy of a man in love with his job—and with big days of wonderful work for the doughboys back of him.



Carter H. Harrison.
[Copyright: Press Illustrating Service.]

Chicago, Thompson, and Sweitzer were millions of miles away to Carter H. Harrison, captain in the Red Cross with the A. E. F.

Cablegrams just received telling of the primary results in Chicago, and the desire of many supporters to run Mr. Harrison as an independent candidate, hit him right between the eyes. From door to coat rack and then to the chair by the little sheet iron stove in his crude little office, and the former mayor was ready with answers to the "Chicago Tribune's" inquiries.

"In the first place, it is not humanly possible for me to get back to Chicago in time to make the campaign for the April election," he began, "even if I so were inclined.

"If my friends undertook a campaign on my behalf it would have to be conducted without any co-operation from me, for the Red Cross doesn't permit its workers to mix politics with war relief, and I am in war work in France with all my heart and head until my enlistment expires on April 1.

"With 4,000 miles of silence between us I cannot see how it would be possible to conduct a successful campaign. I never heard of a political miracle that could achieve success under similar conditions.

"If a man were elected under such circumstances he, of course, would be forced into acceptance, for no greater compliment could be paid any citizen, but it cannot be done this year in Chicago.

Knows of Only One Harder Job.

"The mayor of Chicago for the next four years has the toughest job in the United States, next to that of the president. Aside from the readjustment of peace, we shall have the city's income cut many millions of dollars through the loss of liquor licenses, and that is going to make very rough sledding for the next mayor.

"I do not want the job. I am afraid my Chicago friends don't realize that in opening the door to Europe and paging 'Harrison—call for Mr. Harrison,' they find me under very definite obligations to the war relief organization. It took me a long time to break in," and just a twinkle of an eye betrayed Mr. Harrison's recollections of the battle of Washington, "and I purpose to finish out my six months. I have never been so happy in my life.

"I have spent all my money answering cablegrams of my enthusiastic friends. I am afraid they will have to look closer to home for an available candidate if they are looking for an independent.

"Now, let's go over to the Red Cross mess, have supper, and forget all about politics. They are a fine lot of fellows over there and I want you to meet them."

Healthy and Happy in His Red Cross Job.

It wasn't the Carter Harrison that you have known at home who finished up the day's details here in a shabby little office, topped his white hair with a rabbit service cap, bustled into his trench coat, and helped you into his little car at the curb. Driving an open car throughout the winter in France, protected by neither windshield nor curtain; serving the sick and convalescents in fourteen hospitals; taking them entertainers, chocolates, candy, and bandages, has put new light in his eyes, new kindness in his big heart, new health in his body, and new pride in his service uniform.

While others stayed at home and debated, Harrison was serving the boys at the front. And if the voters don't know the joy that this puts into a real man's heart there isn't the slightest use of trying to tell Chicagoans why Carter Harrison would rather serve out his Red Cross enlistment in France than he would to cut it short and run for mayor of Chicago at the April election.

The Letter to McKenna.

In his letter to Philip McKenna, received yesterday in Chicago and written in Toul on Feb. 6, Capt. Harrison says:

"Dear Phil: I have just received your letter of Jan. 12 in which you asked me to wire home that I would be a candidate for the mayoralty this spring. This is something that I cannot do without breaking faith with the Red Cross. I signed up with the organization for six months; my time does not expire until April 1. The Red Cross rules positively forbid a member of the organization being a candidate for office. Were I to announce myself a candidate I would either be asked to resign or be fired.

"As I have written home, the office of mayor, with the financial conditions facing the city for the next few years, is not attractive to a man who has already received about all the glory out of it that the office has to give. I cannot get away from my duties here with what I consider honor to myself until my time of enlistment is passed. I can't imagine that the people are anxious enough for me to elect me in my absence.

"I would not give my experiences of the last four months for the mayoralty twice over. Remember, Phil, I have had the mayoralty five terms. I have got some little reputation, that might go glimmering in the last term were I to have it."

Circulation of the Harrison petitions is being continued, but they may not be filed in view of THE TRIBUNE cablegram.

CUT FOE ARMY TO 200,000; DOOM U-BOATS

Foch's Peace Terms Restrict German War Supplies.

PARIS, March 1.—[By the Associated Press.]—Marshal Foch presented today to the council of the great powers the military terms to be incorporated in the peace treaty. These will be considered Monday with the naval terms already submitted to the council.

The military terms provide for the disarmament of Germany down to 200,000 men—twenty divisions of 10,000 men each, including fifteen divisions of infantry and five of cavalry. Severe restrictions are placed on the manufacture of all classes of war materials, and the military and commercial use of the airplane is limited to the minimum.

Beyond Marshal Foch's presentation of the terms today they were not discussed.

End All Submarine War.

The naval terms now before the council provide not only for the complete suppression of Germany's submarine equipment, but also for the termination of all submarine warfare by all nations throughout the world, thus ending the use of the submarine in naval warfare.

The provision for dismantling the fortifications of Helgoland and Kiel canal has been made the subject of reservation by Admiral Benson, representing the United States, whereby this shall not be a precedent applicable to American canal and harbor defenses, such as Hell Gate, Cape Cod canal, and others.

The proposal for the destruction of the large German warships is approved in the report by the British and American naval authorities, but the French still make reservations against the destruction of these ships.

Settle Indemnity Terms.

The peace conference commission on reparation has virtually completed its study of the indemnity which Germany must pay to the allied and associated powers and the manner in which it shall be paid.

The study has been based more on what Germany is capable of paying rather than on what the opposing powers lost in the war. Germany will have to make an immediate payment, while the remainder will be scattered over a period of years, it is understood.

Paris Paper Prints Summary.

L'Information published the following summary of what it says will be among "the principal clauses of the peace preliminaries":

An interallied commission to be established for inspection and supervision of all German troops and factories.

Fourteen German cables to become allied property.

Germany to pay to the allied finance commission from $2,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 annually for a period of thirty to fifty years, the money to be raised by special taxes and by customs revenues.

The present military occupation of the Rhine to be maintained.

Demarcation lines, based on ethnic and strategic considerations, to be fixed for the separation of Germany, German-Austria, and Poland.

Statement from Council.

The official statement on today's session of the supreme council, issued this evening, says:

"The representatives of the allied and associated governments met at the Quai d'Orsay today at 3 p. m.

"Marshal Foch submitted the report of the military representatives on the supreme war council regarding the military conditions to be imposed on the enemy.

"Signor Crespi, in the name of the financial drafting committee, submitted the list of questions requiring solution, which were referred to the financial commission.

"M. Clementel, on behalf of the economic drafting committee, explained the economic questions requiring solution in the peace treaty, which were referred to the economic commission.

"The next meeting will take place on Monday, March 3, at 3 p. m."

Present Two Reports.

Two reports were presented today. One was from the financial commission of which Louis Klotz, French minister of finance, is chairman, and Albert

Strauss and Norman Davis are the American members. The other was from the Economic commission, of which Albert Clementel of France is chairman and Bernard M. Baruch, Vance McCormick, and Dr. A. A. Davis the American members.

The most important heading of the financial commission's report is entitled, "reapportionment of the war debts of allied countries on a fair basis." According to the French point of view the huge war debts have fallen unduly on France. It is maintained, therefore, that a certain portion of these allied war debts should be pooled instead of being carried alone by France. Thus far the proposal has not been considered favorably by the British, American, or Japanese members.

The most important subject mentioned in the economic report relates to equality of trade opportunities. This does not affect tariffs or customs among the various nations, but seeks to end trade discrimination, unjust state monopolies, dumping methods, and favored nation treatment.

Alsace Asks Justice.

The superior council of Alsace and Lorraine has asked the government that Marshal Foch be given authority to secure the execution of a part of the armistice agreement with Germany affecting Alsace-Lorraine which is not being complied with.

It is requested that the marshal exact the handing over within a month to the Strasbourg branch of the reichsbank all the securities taken from Alsace and Lorraine by the German authorities.

U. S. Action Vital, Balfour Says.

Speaking to the British correspondents tonight, Arthur J. Balfour, British secretary for foreign affairs, said:

"By the end of March we shall at least be in sight of a preliminary peace, which will be the greatest stride towards universal peace. As a representative of the British government, I am in position to say that what is going on in America at this moment is more important for the success of a general peace than what is being done in Paris today."

Mr. Balfour added that the league of nations would not attain its fullest fruit unless the United States took an equal share in the great tasks after the peace.

Japan Cool to League.

HONOLULU, March 1.—The newspaper Nippi Jiji today printes a cable message from Tokio quoting Premier Hara as declaring in answer to an interpellation in the diet that the constitution of the league of nations as formulated at Paris was incompatible with Japan's ideas. The premier, the dispatch adds, said that the constitution must be modified before Japan would find herself able to join the league.

PLAN WILSON'S RETURN

PARIS, March 1.—[By the Associated Press.]—As a result of an exchange of cable messages today between President Wilson and the American delegation plans were completed for the president's return to Paris and for the early assembling thereafter of the peace congress, with German delegates present.

President Wilson at first planned to have the George Washington land him at Antwerp, then to visit Brussels, pass through the devastated regions of Belgium and France, and from there proceed to Paris for the resumption of the work of the conference. He desired to accomplish this in the understanding that Premier Lloyd George would be in Paris.

Col. House in a talk by telephone with Mr. Lloyd George at London, elicited the fact that the premier would be obliged to return to London by March 22. Accordingly the president's landing at Antwerp and his visit to Brussels were given up.

Will Land at Brest.

He will land at Brest on March 13 or 14 and come direct to Paris. The British prime minister will reach Paris about the same time and, with the others of the council of the great powers, they will take up the preliminary peace treaty, which will then be ready.

It is expected these sessions will last until March 22, when Lloyd George will return to England and President Wilson will go to Brussels and the devastated regions.

The peace treaty probably will reach such a definite stage during the sessions in which President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George will take part that a decision may be reached for the assembling of the peace congress, with Germans present, between April 1 and 10.

Neighbors of Lloyd George.

The Wilsons gave up the Murat palace, it was said tonight, because they felt that longer tenure would be an abuse of hospitality.

Their change of residence will make them neighbors of Premier Lloyd George, whose Paris residence likewise faces the Place des Etats Unis, a tiny square between the Etoile and the river. The Wilsons' house, known as the Hotel Bischoffsheim, is now occupied by M. and Mme. De Croissett.

ARRANGE WILSON AND TAFT JOINT SPEECH PROGRAM

New York, March 1.—President Wilson, Democrat, and former President Taft, Republican, the two greatest American exponents of the league of nations, will forget political animosities when they appear jointly before a picked audience at Metropolitan Opera house here Tuesday night.

President Wilson will arrive from Washington at 8:30 p. m. on a special train and will proceed immediately to the Metropolitan, where Mr. Taft will be waiting. Mr. Taft will arrive from Cleveland at 6 o'clock and will be welcomed by a number of his personal friends.

According to present arrangements, Mr. Taft, who is to be introduced by Gov. Alfred Smith, will make the first address. He will be followed by the president, who is expected to begin talking about 10 o'clock.

KNOX DECLARES WORLD LEAGUE MAKES FOR WAR

Claims It Is a Menace to All the Ideals of Americans.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 1.—[Special.]—Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania, former secretary of state and a Republican member of the foreign relations committee, told the senate today that the league of nations constitution held out higher promise of future world war than any document in the history of recorded times. Every article of the document, he said, specifically answered "No" to the question, "Does it abolish war?"

Far from abolishing war, Senator Knox maintained that the proposed league recognized the legality and possibility of war and, furthermore, in certain cases, required war and war that in every instance would be potential world war.

"Forcing a Rival League."

The Pennsylvania senator further maintained that the proposed league would:

Inevitably result, through the outlawry of the central empires, to force the formation of a second league of nations which would bid for adherence of neutral states, and divide the world into two great camps preparing for a greater struggle of life and death.

Destroy the sovereignty of the United States, override the constitution by delegation of power to declare war and determine the size of armies to be utilized in distant parts of the world, take from the American Monroe doctrine its life and threaten the national independence and life of the republic.

Would Make War Criminal.

Senator Knox earnestly pleaded that consideration of the league of nations at this time be postponed and suggested that America wait to participate in the formation of an international league which would declare war to be an international crime. He said that this league must contain all the nations of the world and must punish as world criminal all nations which go to war except in self-defense.

Such a league, with an international court, would carry a minimum loss of sovereignty, relieve the United States from European broils, preserve the Monroe doctrine, reduce causes of war, and save America from European aggression and intrigue.

Peril of Present Program.

Referring to the constitution of the present proposed league, Mr. Knox said:

"Do its provisions abolish war and make it hereafter impossible? There is not an important article in the document which does not specifically answer that question 'No.' And, further, the scheme provided holds out a higher promise—nay, assurance—of a future world-wide war, greater than any which has gone before, than any other document in the history of recorded time.

"The covenant provides for three sorts of states: first, 'signatories' of the covenant; second, protocol states, and, third, outcast states, which, I take it, are the central powers and their allies.

"Now it is unnecessary to labor for an argument to show the inevitable result of outlawing the central states will be to drive them more closely together for mutual self-protection, and that this in turn will make the formation of a second league of nations almost an assured certainty.

"We would thus have, in no distant future, two great leagues of nations, which will become two great camps, each preparing for a new and greater life and death struggle.

Must Not Make Slaves.

"Our only escape from this result under this plan would be through the exercise of such a tyrannical despotism over the peoples, over the central powers as we, with all our traditions and ideals, must not become a party to, for it would be violate of all of those human rights for which our fathers fought and which our own constitution guarantees.

"Moreover, to keep peoples in such a state of subjection as would be necessary to obviate the result above pointed out, would require such an expenditure of effort, treasure, and blood as never would be permanently tolerated by our people.

"Thus the plan proposed, instead of being a plan by which the permanent peace of the world would be assured, becomes a plan under which a constant warfare or a potential great world wide conflagration becomes an assured fact."

He said that the proposed plan was nothing except tyranny and that history has shown nothing except disaster for a coalition which attempted such a thing.

Insists It Makes for War.

In support of his claim that the present program makes for war instead of peace, Mr. Knox said:

"Without attempting to spell out from this instrument the full number of cases in which war is mandatory, I confine myself to three:

"First—By this document we, as one of the high contracting parties, obligate ourselves to preserve, by force of arms if necessary, the territorial integrity and political independence of all states members of the league.

"Second—If any of the high contracting parties breaks or disregards its covenants under article 12 (the covenant dealing with resort to arms) then, as a member of the league we must fly to arms to protect the covenants.

"Third—If any nonmember of the league, either accepting or not accepting the obligations of membership in the league for the purposes of the dispute, acts in such way as would constitute a violation of article 12, if the state were a member of the league, then we must go to war to protect the covenants of the league."

He insisted that the United States would have but one voice in nine in deciding these issues and that we might be forced into war by the executive council regardless of the merits of the controversy.

Might Be Called Anywhere.

Pointing out circumstances under which the United States might be called upon to send an army to some remote part of the world, Senator Knox said:

"It seems a matter of certain deduction that, as parties other than ourselves are to determine the size of the army of occupation which we shall send, the methods and nature of its operations, the length of time it shall remain there, the rules and principles by which it shall govern the peoples of the occupied territory, and the kind and extent of the upbuilding work which shall be performed by the protecting state, then somebody else besides ourselves must decide how many billions (for we speak now only in such terms) we shall wring from our own people by taxation and spend in the territory over which we have been made mandatory, perhaps against not only our own free desires but the will of the protected peoples themselves.

"Thus this covenant will, if it becomes operative, strike down most vital provisions of our constitution, and here again it fails to meet the test."

America Is Powerless.

On the issue of destruction of American sovereignty involved in acceptance of the league plan, Senator Knox said:

"Hold in mind that we are to give up the power to say when we shall have war, when peace, what shall our army number, how many vessels of war shall we have, how, when, where, and under what conditions shall our army and navy be used, when shall our treaties be binding, what shall our treatment of commerce be, how great shall be our gift of funds to other powers, and therefore how great the tribute we shall pay—consider all these and you cannot but say that our sovereignty has in matters of national life and death been destroyed.

"I come now to the last of my tests—will this plan, if put into operation, threaten our national independence and life?

"Judged by all the standards of the past, by history and by experience, we must answer that it does."

Indorsed by Hardwick.

Senator Hardwick, Democrat of Georgia, paid a glowing tribute to the speech of Senator Knox, declaring that it would "live in the history of this discussion as one of the most luminous, forceful and convincing analyses that any mortal man could make of the questions involved."

"The senator from Pennsylvania and I," he said, "differ as radically as two men can and are as far apart as the poles on most questions of ordinary politics, but I confess it is a matter of regret to me that the country cannot have at Paris in this emergency, the services of such distinguished, able and well equipped statesmen as the distinguished senator from Pennsylvania, for instance, Mr. Knox, instead of having unknown and untried people like Col. House, for instance, and 'Barney' Baruch, whoever he may be."

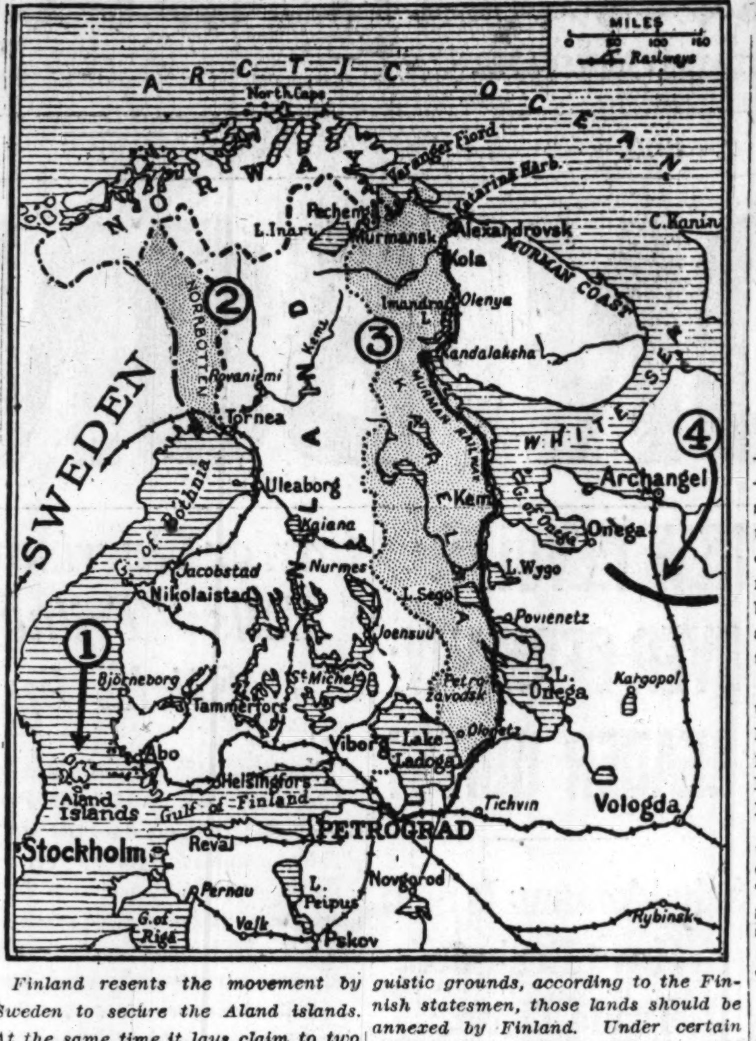
FINLAND'S DEMANDS AT PEACE TABLE



Finland resents the movement by Sweden to secure the Aland islands. At the same time it lays claim to two thick slices of territory on either side of the present boundaries of the new republic.

1—The Aland islands.

2—All that territory, know as Russian Carelia, east of the eastern border of Finland.

3—The district of Norrbotten, west of the present boundary, lying north of the Gulf of Bothnia. Finland asks only that this district vote whether it will remain with Sweden or be given to the Finns.

4—The present fighting front of the United States and allied forces on the Archangel front.

On nationalistic, historical, and linguistic grounds, according to the Finnish statesmen, those lands should be annexed by Finland. Under certain conditions, it is said, Finland would be willing to give up the Aland islands, as they mean little, in natural resources or in population. If they are ceded to Sweden, Finland will do it willingly only under the following conditions:

(1) That Sweden pay proper remuneration for the improvement of navigable straits and the construction and maintenance of lighthouses.

(2) That the islands remain unfortified territory and remain open for fishing and commercial purposes.

(3) That Sweden consent to a plebiscite in Norrbotten and cede the district to Finland if the vote goes that way.

IMPRACTICABLE USES OF SURRENDERED GERMAN WARSHIPS

LONDON, March 1, via Montreal.—Concerning the fate of surrendered German warships, Reuter's Limited has been given the following official information:

First—That it would take three years to break up the ships, and the junk would bring only about $2,000,000.

Second—That any country taking over the ships would be faced with insuperable obstacles to find spare parts.

Third—The ships now are obsolete.

Fourth—Their use as merchantmen is impossible owing to their enormous coal consumption and the difficulty of adapting their interiors to merchant use.

Fifth—The idea of sinking the ships for breakwater purposes has been proved impracticable by experiments made at Scapa Flow.

Sixth—If the ships are divided, some basis of division must be found. It has been suggested that they be divided according to losses in the war or on the basis of the present naval strength of the powers.

France and Italy Accept More Saving of Daylight

New York, March 1.—The daylight saving plan will be effective in France and Algeria from March 1 to Oct. 5, and in Italy from March 2 to an undetermined date, the Commercial Cable company announced today. In each case the legal time is advanced one hour.

COSSACKS CLEAR NORTH CAUCASUS OF BOLSHEVIKI

Lithuanians Rout Reds Near Vilna; Russians Butcher Hostages.

EKATERINODAR, Russia, Feb. 22.—[By the Associated Press.]—Delayed.—The volunteer army of Kuban Cossacks, which made a clean sweep of the bolsheviki in the northern Caucasus, continues the pursuit of the remnants of the bolshevik force. The bolsheviki scattered in all directions after the capture of Vladikavkaz by the Cossacks.

Further details have been learned of the manner in which the bolsheviki last December killed more than 100 prominent hostages, including Gens. Russki and Radko Dimitrieff of the Russian army and several women.

The hostages were taken in motor trucks to Piatigorsk, southwest of Georgievsk, and placed against a cliff. They were shot down with machine guns by bolshevik sailors. Those who showed signs of life when the machine guns ceased firing were hacked to death with cutlasses.

Lithuanians Pursue Reds.

STOCKHOLM, March 1.—Lithuanian troops, closely pursuing bolshevik forces, have passed the line of Schaulen, Sjeduva, Vieves, and Varena, which towns are in Lithuanian hands, according to dispatches received here from Kovno. Lithuanian advance forces have reached Toakti, about thirteen miles east of Vilna. Owing to their defeat, the bolsheviki have requested a suspension of hostilities, but the Lithuanians have refused, it is reported.

Gen. Krasnoff, the Cossack leader, has occupied Saratov, on the Volga river, and Voisk, seventy miles northeast, according to reliable reports reaching here.

Run Short of Locomotives.

The railway situation in Russia is most alarming, the soviet economic council in Petrograd has been informed by the bolshevik commissary of ways and communications, says a Petrograd dispatch. Only 4,500 locomotives are fit for service, the commissary declared, whereas two months ago the government had 20,000 locomotives available, half of which were in good condition.

If the present condition of affairs is not ameliorated by the middle of April, the commissary predicted, the Russian interior would then be completely deprived of means of communication.

Reds Seek Women's Aid.

WARSAW, Feb. 27 [delayed].—The Russian soviet government is carrying on a popular campaign to secure the support of women throughout Russia, according to refugees reaching here from Moscow.

Mme. Radek, wife of Karl Radek, the chief bolshevik agent in Germany, is taking a prominent part in trying to attract the attention of the large mass of women by having women take positions in the ministries and colleges. Premier Lenine is declared to have made this remark to Mme. Radek:

"If bolshevism fails it will be because we could not get the mass of women interested."

King Confers Honors on British War Heroes

LONDON, Mach 1.—King George held an investiture today at Buckingham palace and conferred eight Victoria crosses and many other military honors.

The hero of the occasion was Maj. William George Barker of the Royal Air force, who received not only the Victoria cross but the distinguished service order with bar, and the military cross with two bars. Maj. Barker brought down fifty German machines. His last exploit was over the Mormal forest on Oct. 27, 1918, when, surrounded by Fokkers, he downed four, although wounded. He lost consciousness twice during the fight.

GREAT BRITAIN TO REDUCE ITS ARMY TO 952,000 MEN

LONDON, March 1.—The British army at home and abroad, exclusive of the force in India, now numbers 2,500,000 men and is being reduced to 952,000, according to a White paper issued by the government today.

The army of the Rhine, including troops in France and Belgium, will consist, after demobilization, of 23,600 officers and 380,000 men.

The armies of the middle east will be as follows: Italy, 600 officers and 10,000 men; Bulgaria, Turkey and the Caucasus, 4,850 officers and 75,000 men of the British army and 1,150 officers and 19,500 men of the Indian army; Egypt and Palestine, 3,750 officers and 56,500 men of the British army and 2,750 officers and 40,000 men of the Indian army; Mesopotamia and northern Persia, 1,750 officers and 28,950 men from the British army and 4,600 officers and 59,000 men from the Indian army.

The home and colonial establishment, including troops in Russia, will consist of 15,000 officers and 225,000 men. At the present time, 1,150,000 men of the British army are being demobilized, and also 73,000 men of the Indian army and 325,000 men from the dominions.

FIND U. S. TROOPS IN ITALY WELL GARBED AND FED

Washington, D. C., March 1. — A cablegram from the American military attaché at Rome to the war department today announced that the Three Hundred and Thirty-second American infantry had been ordered concentrated at Genoa. The regiment has been divided between Cattaro, Fiume, and Trieste.

Gen. Bear's report, which supplements one recently sent by Maj. Gen. Treat, follows:

"Have not seen battalion at Cattaro. I commenced inspection and investigation other two battalions. Soldiers well fed. Clothing better than most organizations we have seen in France. Third item (referring to charges made in congress that the American soldiers in Italy had been forced to steal food) ludicrous. Meat excellent quality. Some salvaged clothing issued after drive, but has been turned in. New lot clothing received contains large proportion salvaged blouses and some trousers not fit for troops returning to America. Not issued to soldiers at present. Item relative to officers (referring to charges that American officers in Italy drank to excess) untrue. Men paid to date here, and pay to entire battalion en route. Will complete thorough investigation."

Brother of Slain Amir to Take Afghanistan Throne

LONDON, March 1.—Inayatulla Khan, eldest son of the late Habibullah Khan, Amir of Afghanistan, who was assassinated Feb. 20, it is learned, has agreed to the succession to the throne of Nesrullah Khan, brother of the late Amir.

No disorders have resulted from the assassination of the Amir and all Afghanistan is quiet so far as is known. The motive for the murder of the Amir has not yet been determined.

Reuter's Limited says it may be assumed that the de facto ruler will be recognized by the British government.

Princess Helena of Serbia Eludes Bolshevik Claws

GENEVA, Friday, Feb. 28.—Princess Helena of Serbia passed through Geneva yesterday for Paris, where she will join her brother, Prince Regent Alexander of Serbia. Her husband, Duke Jean Constantinovitch of Russia, was murdered by the bolsheviki before her eyes at Perm and the princess, with her two children, barely escaped the same fate. They fled to Copenhagen in disguise.

SCANDINAVIANS FEEL SLIGHTED IN LEAGUE PLAN

Think They Should Have Been In at Formation.

BY FRAZIER HUNT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 28, via Paris, March 1.—The Swedish attitude toward the league of nations is like that of the small boy who has to sit at the second table—he's going to eat but his feelings are hurt. Sweden and other Scandinavian countries will join the league all right, but they feel that they should have been asked to help form the league's program and should have been included in all the initial discussions.

"It might have taken a little longer, but certainly there would have been better feeling if all neutral nations, regardless of their size, had been asked to take part in its formation, a prominent Swede told me today. There is no question about us not coming in, but it would have been much better if we had been privileged to have been in from the start."

During the last few days I have talked with scores of men of all classes about the league and have found unquestionably a strong undercurrent of sentiment that will sweep official Sweden into the league.

Are for World Peace.

Many believe the league is not perfected, but say it is pointed right and that they will support anything that will help guarantee future peace in the world. Recently a society was formed to promote Sweden's entrance into the league. The people will back these movements and the great masses of the public will hide their injured feelings and enter the international body as soon as the door opens. There is, of course, a certain element that is belligerent. They are supersensitive of points of honor and overzealous for national rights.

"Scandinavian nations feel they have been left absolutely out in the cold," one of them said to me. "The league in its present conception is nothing but an armed alliance between the five big allied nations to control the world. We have had nothing to say about its formation and no voice in its destiny. We have only two choices—we can come in under the regulations we have had no hand in making, or we can stay out. To some Swedes it looks like an all powerful allied combination. Germany, Russia, and we small neutrals are on the outside looking in. 'The less haste the more speed,' might have been a good motto to follow."

Fear Crushing of Germany.

This man represents the aristocratic pro-German type of Swede. There are many of them here among the government officials and the army people, while the masses are clearly and particularly pro-American. But a great majority do not want to see Germany crushed.

Old hatreds of Russia translate themselves now in a desire to see the great empire split up into a number of small nations—Finland and the Baltic republics forming safeguards, while Poland, Ukraine, and other portions of old Russia will break the power that has always loomed over Sweden. For the same reason of protection they want reconstructed a strong Germany and they feel now that the allies are very severe on Germany.

America as Champion.

"We well understand the reasons why the French are revengeful and England is suspicious, but we think America should insist upon more generous and liberal treatment of Germany," a liberal Swede answered to my inquiry. "Still it would be a grave mistake to crowd Germany too far. Bolshevism is bred in hunger, discontent, and uncertainty. At least allow Germany to recoup so she will not face ruin and throw the country into chaos."

RHENISH STATE CONSIDERED AS HELP TO FRANCE

Might Induce Clemenceau to Accept League Covenant.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, March 1.—As a sop to prevent France from trying to kick over the league of nations covenant because it does not provide for international military police forces, the creation of a Rhenish republic or buffer state along the left bank of the Rhine is seriously being considered.

Although prior to the drafting of the league of nations covenant it was never contemplated that France would regain her 1870 frontier, I learn from high authority that the incorporation of the Sarre basin and possibly the entire 1914 boundary is not unlikely, with long term French military control over all German territory southwest of the Rhine.

Would Welcome Opportunity.

Immediately after the armistice the Rhenish separatist element manifested a desire to be created into a separate state because, as German newspapers charged, they wished to escape participating in the payment of indemnities. But the separatist claims soon died down, and the French are now asked to show if the Rhenish provinces would form a republic.

The French reply that if the Rheinish provinces realize that they must either form their own independent state or be administered by France they will quickly seize the opportunity of self-government, especially if France offers the industrial and economic advantages of preferential customs and duties. And France is willing to offer these inducements to prevent Prussia from maintaining military jurisdiction along the left bank of the Rhine.

Wanted as Buffer State.

A Rheinish republic would be permitted the small army necessary for policing but would not be allowed to construct or maintain fortresses or other military works of any character. France has signified her willingness to adhere to the present covenant of the league of nations without raising up the question of an international army to preserve peace, I am told, if safeguarded against future German aggression by a neutralized left bank of the Rhine and a German army reduced to less than 300,000 troops.

Americans are chiefly interested in stifling the question of the maintenance of an international policing army owing to the known hostility of congress, and, according to a highly placed informant, are willing to accept the French plan, with a single reservation, however, that the neutralization of the Rhenish provinces be not made eternal but merely over a long term of years, or until Germany has a chance to prove conclusively her change of heart and an absolute rejection of her aggressive attitude.

Cite Italy-Slav Situation.

French military experts point out the fact that the present Italy-Jugo Slav controversy offers a splendid example of the need of a league of nations police force, as, while the Italians are maintaining a huge army and have not demobilized, still the troops are dissatisfied.

Furthermore, it is argued that the Serbs would not hesitate to open hostilities against the Italians, but would undoubtedly recede from their present firm position if the American, English, and French contingents marched against them.

WILSON LONGS TO BE PRIVATE CITIZEN, BUT—

Luncheon Guests Say He Might Be Induced to Seek Third Term.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., March 1.—[Special.]—The expressed expectation of President Wilson to return to private life in 1921 does not close the door completely to his renomination for a third term, in the opinion of many Democratic national committeemen who heard his utterance at the White House luncheon yesterday.

In the view of these leaders the president merely made it clear that he is not seeking a third term and at this time contemplates retirement at the close of his two terms. If, however, circumstances should develop a widespread demand for the renomination of the president he might be induced to accept.

In any event, these committeemen say, Mr. Wilson will not be eliminated from consideration as a possible candidate unless he unequivocally announces that he will not accept a third term nomination under any circumstances.

Feels Like Bursting.

What the president said about this matter grew out of his remarks concerning the opponents of the league of nations in congress. He said that a president is at a disadvantage in such a situation, for he cannot with propriety speak his mind fully in reply to the attacks of his critics. He said he felt some times as if he would burst with his pent up feelings and that fortunately the tenure of the president is not indefinite, else no president would be able to endure the strain.

However, the president proceeded, he looked forward with eagerness to March 5, 1921, when he would be able to resume the writing of history, intimating that he could then say without restraint what he would like to say now.

Pays Respects to Foes.

According to the gossip at the capitol today the president did not appear to be suffering from any undue restraint in expressing his opinion of the opponents of the league of nations. One Democratic committeeman who attended the luncheon quoted the president as saying that he despised the character of the opponents of the league and loathed their pygmy minds, that he would have to consult the dictionary to find words adequate to express his detestation of them, that their heads were so small they only served as knots to prevent their bodies from unraveling.

The same authority, who is a consistent defender of Mr. Wilson and is an advocate of the league, quoted the president as asserting that if he could have his way he would hang these men on a gibbet as high as heaven and that it would not be erected in the direction of heaven, either.

Denies Violent Language.

The circulation of reports of this violent language attributed to the president was the sensation of the day in the congressional cloakrooms.

Secretary Tumulty denied the version emphatically, but refused to state what the president did say.

The committeemen agreed that the president uttered a forceful plea for the elimination of politics from consideration of the peace league question. He urged the Democratic leaders to return to their states and call meetings of the Democratic state committees for the purpose of obtaining indorsements of the league constitution and also suggested that they ask Republican leaders to call similar meetings of the Republican committees for the same purpose.

The president said he was in the fight for the league to a finish and that he did not intend to call an extra session of congress and permit the league to be talked to death in his absence.

Reports that President Wilson told the committeemen he would not accept a nomination for a third term were denied today at the White House.

POLES WILL BAR JEWISH STATE, DIET IS TOLD

WARSAW, Feb. 28.—[Delayed.]—The Jewish question is being agitated in the Polish diet and there are signs of a division among the Jews. In the debate yesterday Nathan Levinstein of Lemberg, a former member of the Austrian parliament, pointed out to Noah Prilucki, leader of the Jewish Nationalist party, that it could not be expected the Poles would permit a Jewish state within the Polish state.

M. Korfanty outlined he Polish national policy, which, he said, promised equality to the Jews.

The delegation sent by the allies to Lemberg met Petlura, the Ukrainian peasant leader, and discussed the armistice between the Poles and the Ukrainians and were favorably impressed with the situation. A commission of the allies that has gone to Posen will meet a German delegation at Bromberg to discuss a renewal of the armistice conditions relative to Germany and Poland.

The Polish diet has adopted M. Korfanty's motion providing for the calling up of six classes of recruits for one year.

Send Guards with Food Shipments to U. S. Men

COBLENZ, Friday, Feb. 28.—[Delayed.]—[By the Associated Press.]—Owing to reports of recent attempts to interfere with food shipments to American troops in unoccupied sections of Germany, the number of guards on all cars containing rations has been increased. Five cars of provisions for American troops in Berlin and at the twenty Russion prisoner camps left Coblenz for Berlin today, each car being in charge of ten soldiers, all of whom were armed. There were, in addition, ten men riding in the cars.

SIXTY-FIVE YOUNGSTERS IN BLOCK BID FOR RECORD

Sout' Lincoln Avenue Claims Three Families of Eight Children Each in Block and Submits Evidence.

Oak Park's claim to city blocks with many children was bettered yesterday when Albert Fraser, 6622 South Lincoln street, asserted that his family of eight youngsters was only one of three such sets in the same block. Further investigation showed that Lincoln street, from Sixty-sixth to Sixty-seventh street, furnishes homes for sixty-five youngsters, ranging from bottle size to high school age. And that's not all. Every family in the block boasts of being American born on both sides.

LIEUT. BARTHOLF, GLENCOE, A BEAR FOR HUN FIGHTING

Returned Airman Was Always About When Trouble Came.

BY C. V. JULIAN.

New York, March 1.—[Special.]—Lieut. Herbert Bartholf, airman, of Glencoe, Ill., who returned here today on the transport Turrialba, is a wonder at being about when trouble starts.

He started for the war on the Tuscania and on the way across a German torpedo sunk the ship and Bartholf floated about on a life raft for five hours before he was rescued. That was the last time he ever permitted the German to bring the war to him.

On Oct. 5 last, the Glencoe flyer saw five German planes and attacked them single handed. He shot one of them down and got away unscathed.

On Nov. 4, while on a bombing expedition, he saw eight German planes and attacked them single handed. He shot down another one. All of which is recited in the citation for the D. S. C., which Lieut. Bartholf wears.

Lieut. Cameron Back.

Others from Chicago and vicinity who reached here today were:

Lieut. Allen Cameron of 819 Lakeside place, member of the Chicago Board of Trade, who has been serving with the French as an instructor in aerial gunnery.

Capt. William Troxell of 5532 Greenwood avenue, for twenty-three years a member of the old First Illinois.

Capt. Raymond Gillogly of Newman, Ill.

Lieut. Curtis Cady of Brinfield, Ill.

Lieut. John Hansen of Princeville.

The Turrialba was one of three transports to reach here today. The others were the Sobral and the small steamer Carrillo, with fifty-nine casuals aboard. The Turrialba brought back ninety-six casual officers.

Illinois Men in Units.

On the Sobral were the following detachments: First and Second battalion headquarters, sanitary and ordnance detachments, supply and machine gun companies, and Companies A to F, Three Hundred and Sixty-seventh infantry, a total of 43 officers and 1,693 Negro troops; One Hundred and Forty-ninth machine gun battalion, including 10 officers and 356 Negro troops; Casual Company No. 250 of New York, 1 officer and 94 men; Casual Company No. 1,202 of New York, 2 officers and 154 men, and two small casual companies of Ohio and Illinois troops.

Three Members Added to Women's G.O.P. Committee

New York, March 1.—Appointment of the remaining three of the nine members of the Republican women's national executive committee, was announced here today by Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, as follows: Miss Maude Wetmore, Newport, R. I.; Mrs. Thomas J. Carter, formerly of Montana, now of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. John G. South, Frankfort, Ky.

No Effort to Pass Bill Giving Up Wire Control

Washington, D. C., March 1.—No effort will be made in the house before adjournment of congress to pass the resolution ending government wire control on Dec. 31 next. Representative Pou, chairman of the house rules committee, announced today that the measure would not be pressed because action in the senate was regarded as impossible.

PEACE MEETING SENDS AGENTS TO STUDY ADRIATIC

PARIS, March 1.—Officers of high rank are being sent by the peace conference to the eastern Adriatic coast to examine the situation there.

A number of ships on this coast have been unable for many weeks to unload their cargoes of food and supplies intended for the relief of the inhabitants in the interior of the country. The excuse of the local authorities that the trouble is due to lack of labor to handle the cargoes, if sustained by the examination, will be immediately met with curative measures, as it is considered that hunger conditions are the prime incentive of bolshevism and of collisions between the Italians and Jugo-Slavs.

The regiment of American troops which has been scattered in small detachments in coast towns along the eastern Adriatic is now being concentrated in Italy. The movement was ordered before President Wilson returned to the United States and is declared to have no connection with the strained relations between the Italians and the Jugo-Slavs.

The Americans are being concentrated under their own commander, it is said, for purposes of security and administrative economy.

DISCHARGE 3,000 AT CAMP GRANT IN LAST 48 HOURS

Camp Grant, Ill., March 1.—[Special.]—The total discharges here yesterday and today will pass the 3,000 mark, the personnel office's report shows. Yesterday 1,577 men were discharged and today 1,570 were released. This brings the total number of discharges to date to 87,000.

Since Nov. 11 more than 70,000 men have arrived here to be mustered out. Discharge figures for Monday and Tuesday will take a decided slump due to light shipments.

The Three Hundred and Thirty-second artillery, the Blackhawk "Red Cord" unit, pased into history today with the discharge of Maj. Gerald B. Winston of Chicago and of Capts. Lewis E. Legner and Henry F. Tearney. Thirty-two officers of the Three Hundred and Thirty-second were discharged yesterday.

Harbor Workers Strike Likely to Be Averted

New York, March 1.—Marked progress toward averting resumption of the strike of 16,000 harbor workers was reported tonight after a four hour conference of the stike committee of the Marine Workers' affiliation with representatives of the New York Boat Owners' association, United States railroad administration, and army and navy transportation services.

The opinion of those attending the conference appeared to be that a definite agreement would be reached at a continuation of the conference on Monday.

Porto Rico Will Demand Statehood or Freedom

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, March 1.—After a debate of more than two days in both houses of the insular legislature, the Unionists and Republicans today agreed to join forces in insisting that the American congress make known what the future of Porto Rico is to be. It was agreed that if there can be no assurance that statehood is possible, the parties should work for independence.

DIVERT MORE SHIPS FROM WAR TO COMMERCE

Vessel Shortage Likely to Continue for 60 Days.

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Release in the next forty days of 500,000 tonnage by the war department to the shipping board as a means of relieving the commercial situation, providing the board assumes certain contracts for the transportation of materials to Europe, was agreed upon at a conference today between Secretary Baker, Chairman Hurley of the shipping board and senators from the cotton states.

Reports that because of the shipping situation return of American troops from abroad would be reduced below the 200,000 a month planned by the war department were discredited by Mr. Hurley, who declared that this country has sufficient tonnage itself to carry 140,000. He said he did not see difficulty in maintaining the average fixed or in exceeding that number.

Send Freight Cars to France.

Contracts to be resumed by the shipping board involve the transportation to France for the next six months of 3,000 freight cars. Under the contract 61,000 tons a month are to be sent.

According to Mr. Hurley, the shipping situation is serious, with $100,000,000 in freight, exclusive of cotton, now on American docks awaiting shipment. The present tonnage shortage, he added, would remain serious for the next sixty days.

Cancel New Ship Contracts.

Contracts for the construction of 550 vessels of 2,700,000 deadweight tons, at an estimated cost value of $400,000,000, have been canceled by the shipping board since the signing of the armistice. Mr. Hurley wrote that the peak of the shipping board's construction program was reached Sept. 1.

Turn Back Coast Ships.

Ships of the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation company, engaged in Atlantic coastwise traffic, tonight were turned back to private management by the railroad administration. Officials of the company accepted the relinquishment, which heretofore they have protested.

Danish Cabinet Resigns; Senate May Be Abolished

LONDON, March 1.—The Danish cabinet resigned today as the result of the complicated political situation in Denmark, according to a wireless message received here from Copenhagen. A message adds that it is believed that the Social Democratic will try to abolish the landsting, or senate.

The premier of Denmark has been C. T. Zahle. The leader of the Social Democrats in Denmark is J. A. M. Stauning.

Order Favorable Report on Palmer Nomination

Washington, D. C., March 1.—The senate judiciary committee today by unanimous vote ordered a favorable report on the nomination of A. Mitchell Palmer, alien property custodian, to be attorney general. Absence of Republican opposition foreshadowed prompt confirmation by the senate.

WOULD CHANGE NAME.

The hearing of John C. "Handsome Jack" yesterday by May Lytle Hickman asking that she be allowed to change her name to Jane Beecher. The reason for the change was not given.

GERMANS KILL ALLIED CHIEFS— IN HEAD LINES

ZURICH, March 1.—German newspapers publish three governmental dispatches from Weimar, dated Feb. 26, reporting the following:

"Italy is in the throes of a revolution and King Victor Emmanuel has been assassinated.

"A revolution has broken out in Roumania and King Ferdinand has been killed.

"President Wilson was shot by an anarchist in Boston. Several bullets entered his right side and he is in a serious condition."

Seat G. O. P. Contestant; Full Term Pay for 2 Days

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Republicans of the house found themselves in the majority late tonight and after a bitter debate, by a strict party vote of 182 to 173, unseated Representative Zebulon Weaver, Democrat, of the Tenth North Carolina district, in favor of James J. Britt, Republican.

Britt will hold his seat only two days, but the victory gives him salary and allowances for the full term.

The contest was over the 1916 election. Weaver was elected to succeed himself last fall.

Held for Aiding German Conspirator in 1916

New York, March 1.—Charged with conspiring in 1916 with Capt. Hans Boehm of the German general staff, now a prisoner in England, to obtain for him a fraudulent American passport under the name of Jelkes Thrasher, deceased, Carl T. Thomas and Max Wyner of this city were arrested today and held in $25,000 bonds each by Federal Judge Learned Hand.

Bryan, Ill in Washington Hotel, Cancels Engagement

Washington, D. C., March 1.—William J. Bryan, who has been confined to his hotel with a heavy cold, today canceled an engagement to speak tomorrow in Washington.

MADRID, UNDER MARTIAL LAW, IS REPORTED QUIET

MADRID, March 1.—Martial law was declared yesterday in Madrid and troops patrolled the streets. The city took on its normal aspect today. Shops opened and business was resumed.

Declaration of martial law was the result of rioting against profiteers, provisions and butcher shops and bakeries being attacked by mobs.

The attacks on shops occurred principally in the suburbs, but in the evening there was a movement by the people that resulted in their occupation of the butcher shops. Skirmishes, with some stone throwing, occurred between the demonstrators and the police around the markets.

The government has taken possession of all bakeshops.

King Alfonso today signed a decree suspending constitutional guaranties in the province of Lerida, Catalonia.

The workmen of the water supply company at Barcelona have struck, according to information received here, and the municipal council has threatened to resign unless help is sent.

Lord Reading Returns to His Post at Washington

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Lord Reading, the British ambassador, accompanied by Lady Reading and members of his suite, returned to his post here today after an absence of several months.

RAILROAD AGENTS TO MEET.

War reconstruction and other problems will be discussed at a meeting of the Order of Railroad Station Agents that will be held in the Great Northern hotel this afternoon. C. E. Case of Aurora, Ill., will be in charge of the meeting.

FRANCE FAVORS U. S. GUARDIAN FOR ARMENIA

Official Shows Why America Should Accept Mandate.

BY CHARLES A. SELDEN.
Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]

PARIS, Feb. 27.—[Delayed.]—Whatever may be the wisdom, or lack of it, from the American point of view, there is certainly a fascinating and romantic appeal in the idea of the United States assuming direct responsibility for the program and safety of a new state in ancient Asia Minor.

At least there was fascination in it as a member of the French foreign office, with the aid of a map, explained to me why France hoped America would accept a mandate for the actual supervision of Armenia.

France does not consider it advisable that this mandate shall go to England, because with Armenia added to Mesopotamia and her other protectorates, England would be too predominant in that part of the world.

France for America.

France recognizes very much the same sort of objection as regards herself in Armenia, for she expects a mandate for Syria. So the choice seems to fall between the United States and Italy. France would select America for two reasons. In the first place the development of Armenia calls for much capital which America can supply more readily than Italy. France wants the United States to take a mandate on this side of the world for the sake of the moral effect.

For the sake of being concrete I asked what the American mandate for Armenia would probably cover geographically and how long it would last.

"It would last for centuries," replied the French foreign office official, very frankly. "It would be a permanent trust or undertaking, because of the nature of the population. There is no large section of territory in what is now Turkey in which the Armenian inhabitants are in the majority.

How Debts Are Cleared.

"The balance of population against the Armenians is due largely to massacres. Three hundred thousand of them were massacred under the rule of Abdul Hamid. A million more were massacred during the war. But if the Turks outnumber them now even as much as 2 to 1, the Armenians own at least five-sixths of the property. They are thrifty traders. The Turks are shiftless. There is a simplicity about the Turks' booking methods which accounts in a large part for their numerical superiority of population. When the debts of a Turkish community become too heavy they kill their Armenian creditors to wipe out the account.

"It is to put an end to such proceedings as that, as well as to develop Armenia politically, socially, and economically, that mandatory supervision by the United States or some other civilized power is absolutely necessary.

"Some 80,000 square miles in the rectangle ending at the Russian frontier would give Armenia a real country, with many considerable interior towns."

44 of 55 Court Martial Cases Approved by Board

Washington, D. C., March 1.—The special commission of the judge advocate general's office which is reviewing court martial records with a view to reducing excessive sentences has reported on fifty-five cases.

Secretary Baker announced today that the commission's recommendations in forty-four of the cases had been approved. In sixteen of these sentences were remitted entirely and the soldiers restored to duty.

The secretary said the maximum sentence to be served by any of the other of the forty-four men is five years, and the average two years, against the twenty year sentences originally imposed by the courts.

Maj. Gen. Williams to Report to Pershing

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Maj. Gen. Clarence E. Williams, chief of ordnance, was today ordered by the war department to report to Gen. Pershing in France for the purpose of inspecting the operations of the ordnance department in the American expeditionary forces. He will also make inspection of ordnance activities in England.

OVER 7 MILLION BATTLE DEATHS IN GREAT WAR

Gen. March Compiles Statistics of World Conflict.

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Battle deaths during the war among all participants, so far as available statistics show, were given today by Gen. March as 7,354,000. This represents only men killed in action or who died of wounds.

In the list prepared by the general staff Russia led with a total of 1,700,000, Germany was second with 1,600,000, and the United States last with 50,000.

Approximate figures for other nations were:

France	1,385,000	Belgium	102,000
England	706,700	Roumania	100,000
Austria-Hungary	800,000	Serbia and Montenegro	100,000
Italy	460,000	Bulgaria	100,000
Turkey	250,000

Rainbows High in Honor List.

Of the total of 3,918 distinguished service crosses awarded for gallantry in action to American soldiers, Gen. March announced, 664, or more than double the number given to any other division, went to the Second regulars. The First division of regulars came next with 300 crosses. The Third regulars, with 233, came third.

The Twenty-sixth (New England national guard), the fourth in the list with 229 awards, led all national guard and national army divisions. The Forty-second (Rainbow) came next with 205 and then the Thirtieth with 177. The Twenty-seventh division (New York National guard), now on the high seas returning home, received 139. The Seventy-seventh, also a New York division, received 146.

Infantry Lead in Numbers.

The other divisions in order, from the thirtieth, which was the sixth in precedence, were as follows: Fifth, 163 awards; twenty-ninth, 150; seventy-seventh, 146; twenty-seventh, 139; thirty-second, 134; ninety-first, 134; eighty-ninth, 97; seventy-eighth, 95; seventy-ninth, 80; thirty-third, 76; fourth, 66; twenty-eighth, 58; ninetieth, 57; eightieth, 42; eighty-second, 34; seventh, 30; thirty-seventh, 25; thirty-sixth, 24; ninety-second, 21; eighty-first, 19; thirty-fifth, 17; sixth, 10; eighty-eighth, 1.

In the various branches of the army the infantry, General March said, naturally led with 2,942 decorations out of the total. The air service was second wtih 251 awards, medical corps third, with 238; artillery, 183; engineers, 149; signal corps, 50; tank corps, 36, and the remaining awards divided among the other branches, with Y. M. C. A. attachés receiving 3.

Demobilization of the army had released up to yesterday 1,301,959 officers and men, Gen. March said. Of the total 77,542 were officers. Demobilization orders now have reached a total of 1,571,000.

Apply for Reserve Service.

Applications from officers for commissions in the reserve now total 21,324. There are fiv colonels, fourteen lieutenant colonels, and 378 majors included in this total.

Applications for commissions in the regular establishment have been filed by 12,005 men.

Hurry Home Disabled Soldiers.

Disabled soldiers of the A. E. F. slated for discharge are being sent home as fast as shipping is available, the war department announced today. "No delay is countenanced, even if the soldiers' records are not complete, as supplementary records are made as patients are received," said an official statement.

U. S. Military Mission Finishes Polish Inquiry

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—[Delayed.]—The American military mission that has been visiting Silesia for the purpose of investigating the counter claims of Poles and Germans regarding the nationality of the population and also inquiring into general conditions there has finished its labors and returned to Berlin. It will proceed directly to Paris to report to the peace commissioin.

D. G. REID SUED FOR SEPARATION BY MRS. REID III.

Cause for Action Against Financier Not Made Public.

New York, March 1.—Daniel G. Reid, the financier of 907 Fifth avenue, who is chairman of the mayor's committee of welcome for the homecoming troops, was sued in the Supreme court today for a separation by Mrs. Margaret Carriere Reid, his third wife, formerly an actress.

All facts concerning the ground for the suit were withheld today because the only paper on file is a summons served on Mr. Reid at the Pennsylvania station on Friday. Mr. Reid refused to accept the summons. Mrs Reid's attorney, Robert H. Elder, declined to discuss the case before the complaint is prepared, and Mr. Reid would not authorize any statement and could not be reached.

At Mr. Reid's Fifth avenue residence it was said that Mrs. Reid had not been there for some time and that it was not known at the house where she is. She could not be found at the country place, Richmond Terrace, at Irvington.

Marriage Long Time Secret.

Mrs. Mabel Carriere Reid became the third wife of the financier in 1906, two years after the sudden death of his second wife, Miss Clarice Agnew, who was also an actress.

Mr. Reid refused to give out any facts concerning his marriage to Miss Carriere, for whom he had maintained a friendly interest for several years while she was in "The Chinese Honeymoon," "The Runaways," and just before her marriage in the "West Point Cadet," in which she had an important rôle. They returned from Europe, where they had been seen together for several months before Mr. Reid admitted the marriage, but they came over on different boats to disarm suspicion and would not admit the marriage at the time.

Second Wife Also Actress.

Mr. Reid's second marriage to Miss Clarice Agnew was also contracted with great secrecy. His first wife died some years before his second marriage. His only surviving child is Rhea Reid Topping, who became the wife of Henry J. Topping, son of John A. Topping of the Republic Iron and Steel company, in 1910. Mr. Reid transferred his city residence at 875 Fifth avenue to his daughter in 1916. To the memory of a deceased son Mr. Reid erected a hospital in his native city, Richmond, Ind., and also erected a church there in memory of his parents.

Mr. Reid's fortune is estimated at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000. With William B. Leeds he organized the Tin-Plate trust. He later became the controlling director in the Rock Island railroad. He has been noted for his generosity regarding war charities.

Lolita Armour Will Have Santa Barbara Residence

Los Angeles, Cal., March 1.—Ground has been broken at Santa Barbara for a residence to be built for Miss Lolita Armour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour of Chicago. It will cost $150,000, it is said. This cost will include magnificent landscape gardening of the grounds, but not the furnishings, it is asserted. The new home of Miss Armour will be completed practically in every detail before next winter, contractors announce.

WILLIAMS RAPS M'FADDEN FOR 'AMBUSH ATTACK'

Washington, D. C., March 1.—In a letter tonight to Representative McFadden of Pennsylvania, who recently in the house attacked Controller of the Currency Williams and introduced a resolution for an investigation of his office and conduct. Mr. Williams declared the member was in the position of having taken a shot at him from safe ambush "and skulking away too hastily" to know what injury had been done.

Mr. Williams asserted Mr. McFadden, as cashier and president of a bank in Pennsylvania, had been under rebuke and criticism of the treasury department for more than twenty years.

Mr. McFadden tonight issued a statement saying:

"The statement of John Skelton Williams proves the truth of my assertion that he is an unfit public officer. The statement which he makes is false and his attack upon me only seeks to cloud the real issue."

HOUSE REPEALS LUXURY WAR TAX

Washington, D. C., March 1.—The house today passed and sent to the senate the resolution providing for the repeal of the luxury tax clause of the war revenue bill. It imposed a 10 per cent tax after May 1 on higher priced wearing apparel and many other articles.

Chairman Kitchen of the ways and means committee stated the tax, which would bring in about $100,000,000, had been put in the revenue bill originally to encourage thrift during the war, and now that the war was over it was no longer necessary.

Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, Republican, stated the luxury tax was obnoxious to the entire country and that a storm of protest had arisen.

The $11,000,000 fortification bill was made ready for the president's signature today with the senate receding from its amendment providing $3,000,000 for the manufacture and test of coast guard cannon.

VALOR HONORS URGED FOR 12 IN 149TH ARTILLERY

Capt. Bodine Leads List as Deserving of U. S. Medal of Honor.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

COBLENZ, March 1.—Twelve members of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery have been recommended for decorations for gallantry in action, with which the United States rewards the heroes of its army. They were selected from a field of more than sixty credited acts of extraordinary courage by Col. H. J. Reilly, commanding officer. The formal brief accounts of their conduct contained in the official communication reveal thrilling deeds of heroism, which heretofore, because of the censorship during hostilities, were known only in the regiment.

Capt. Bodine's Heroism.

Capt. William A. Bodine, Battery A, is recommended for the medal honor. He was in a trench sector on the Lorraine front on March 21 when his battery was subjected to a continuous and destructive fire. Capt. Bodine twice exposed himself on top of burning emplacements.

The distinguished service medal is recommended for First Lieut. Cornelius E. Lombardi of the headquarters company "for exceptionally meritorious service in a most responsible position forward with the infantry as liaison officer during the advance across the Ourcq to the Vesle."

"Lombardi not only showed great personal courage on all occasions," the recommendation says, "but by his coolness and ability kept the regimental commander informed of the position of our own front lines and enabled the regimental commander to direct fire on enemy machine gunners."

D. S. C. Urged for These.

Recommendations for the distinguished service cross follows:

Capt. John O. Reddington, Battery C—"Near Jonchery-sur-Suippes on July 15 he voluntarily left his trench and went 300 meters under heavy shell fire to aid Private Paul Sutton, who was wounded."

Capt. Harry F. Johnson, Supply company—"Near Beuvardes, on July 30, to rescue a dying man, he entered under shell fire a burning ammunition dump."

Private Alvin G. Robinson, headquarters company—"At Bulson in the Argonne on Nov. 9 he reconstructed the telephone central of the Second battalion immediately after a shell had destroyed the switchboard, killing five and wounding twelve."

Repairs Broken Lines.

Sergt. Fred T. King, headquarters company H—"Near Jonchery-sur-Suippes he repaired in less than two hours twenty-four breaks in the telephone line across the River Suippes to the French artillery."

Private Daniel J. Shouse, headquarters company—"Repaired thirteen breaks and subsequently twenty-four breaks in the same important telephone line."

Private Bernhard of Cummings, Battery C—"Voluntarily left trench to go 300 meters to aid a wounded man, Private Paul Sutton, and, although immediately wounded, he insisted Sutton be aided before himself."

Corporal Lawrence B. Gibbs Battery E—"Went to rescue of Sutton."

Goes to Aid Wounded.

Private Michael M. Jonesi, Battery D—"Near Flaville, in the Argonne, on Oct. 14 he voluntarily left his gun pit to go to aid Private George W. Howard, who was seriously wounded. While carrying Howard he himself was severely wounded."

Sergt. Edward C. Lesch, Battery A—"On the Lorraine front, on March 21, he led his gun crew in extinguishing blazing camouflage and ammunition abreast of a dugout hit by a shell. 'Let's put it out,' he called. The others hesitated. 'It would be murder,' one said. 'Murder, hell!' answered Lesch."

Rolf Hedemark—"A general prisoner, formerly a private in Battery A, convicted and waiting to be sent to the rear from the Baccarat sector, in Lorraine, in June, left a dugout unknown to any one and cooked a hot supper in the kitchen close to the battery, which was under heavy shell fire."

FEDERAL TESTS SHOW CHILDREN ARE ILLITERATE

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1.—[Special.]—An alarming percentage of illiteracy among certain groups of working children is disclosed in figures made public today by the children's bureau, United States department of labor. These figures are based on the experience of the bureau in issuing federal certificates of age to children going to work in five states where state certificates were not acceptable for the purposes of the former federal child labor law.

More than one-fourth, or 5,294, of the 19,546 children between 14 and 16 years of age to whom certificates were issued by the children's bureau could not sign their names legibly.

In the five states where federal certificates were issued by the children's bureau 18,379 white children between 14 and 16 years old were certificated. Only 742 of them had reached the eighth grade in school. Of 1,166 colored children to whom certificates were issued, only forty reached the eighth grade. In other words, 95 per cent of the white children and 97 per cent of the colored children had not reached the eighth grade in school.

Republic of Uruguay Goes Under a Commission Rule

MONTEVIDEO, March 1.—With the inauguration today of Dr. Baltasar Brum as president Uruguay begins a commission form of government for the republic, the commission being formed of the president, elected by the direct vote of the people, and nine commissioners appointed by the two houses of congress.

In addition, the president will have the usual cabinet of nine members, of whom he will name three and the commission six.

A coalition government is assured, as the commission contains three members of the political party opposed to the president.

GRANT TACTICS OF U. S. STAFF CRUSHED BOCHE

Collapse Laid Largely to Yank Insistence on Hammer Blows.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Feb. 28.—The successful prosecution of the allies' 1918 campaign to victory on Nov. 11 was largely due to American insistence that pressure against the enemy be kept up incessantly, despite inclement weather and heavy losses.

By an investigation through military channels I learn it was only a few weeks before Ludendorff demanded an armistice that the allied high command realized the German army was smashed. As late as Oct. 10 Marshal Foch was demanding that the American expeditionary force should number 100 divisions (nearly 4,000,000 men) in France by April 1, 1919, for an "American offensive" which was expected to administer a body blow to the enemy army.

Insisted on Hammering.

From July 18, when Gen. Mangin passed to the attack between the Marne and the Aisne rivers, eliminating the Chateau Thierry salient, until the armistice, the American general staff stood solidly and insistently for sustained hammering tactics against Hindenburg's hosts. Following the freeing of Paris from the German menace from the east by throwing back the enemy along the Aisne and the Vesle, Gen. Pershing presented to Marshal Foch plans for reducing the St. Mihiel salient, which had been worked out in the autumn of 1917, for during the early part of 1918 American engineers were building American strategic railways along both faces of the salient, toward Verdun and Pont-à-Mousson, for possible future operations.

Learn Weakness of Foe.

It was July 5 last, just after the Thirty-third American division—Prairie or Illinois—participated with the Australians in retaking Villers-Bretonneaux, east of Amiens, that the allies' intelligence service learned that the number of both belligerents' effectives was practically equal—about 180 divisions each—due to the German losses during the three initial offensives—on the Somme, the Lys, and the Marne—and to the arrival of American reinforcements.

This factor contributed largely to the allies' confidence while waiting Ludendorff's fourth and final thrust between Chateau Thierry and Reims and from east of Reims to the Argonne, which was delivered July 15 and was immediately shattered.

Even before this last disastrous phase of the "kaiserschlacht," which ended so miserably, Marshal Foch had perfected plans for reducing the Chateau Thierry salient July 18, using the newly formed Tenth French army under Gen. Mangin's command, and including two veteran American divisions—the First and Second—and French colonials.

Three weeks later, Aug. 8, the French and British reattacked, reducing the Montdidier salient, and freeing Paris from the German menace on the north, and from then on the French merely wished to throw the enemy back so the long range Berthas could not shell the capital during the winter. For that reason Mangin's army moved north of the Aisne late in August, using the Thirty-second American division for attacking the Juvigny plateau, flanking the Chemin des Dames and Laon, in the region of which the original long range guns were emplaced.

Then Foch indorsed Pershing's plan for the St. Mihiel operation for mid-September, after which the American high command showed how, with this salient reduced and the menace from the rear removed, the way was open for a thrust into the enemy's most vital position—up the Meuse and through the Argonne, toward the Montmedy-Sedan railway, which alone linked up the German army communications. This operation was begun merely for the purpose of advancing within range of this trunk line railway so heavy artillery could harass the enemy transport throughout the winter and perhaps leap forward and cut the line in the first offensive of the spring of 1919.

Hardly Believed It.

The German crash, which first became apparent toward the middle of October, could scarcely be credited, I am told by staff officers who are in a position to know. But it was not realized even then how far gone the German army was, as plans immediately were laid and operations figured out for Mangin's Tenth army, which it had been intended to rest during the winter, to be rushed to the Luneville sector for another offensive, scheduled to begin at 7 o'clock the morning of Nov. 14.

Twenty French divisions and six American divisions were to have taken part, and the plan was to drive northward through Chateau Salins, outflanking Metz from the east, while the First American army on the Meuse front wheeled on an axis, fighting its way northeasterly.

Planned Great Capture.

It was this operation by which it was expected to capture two entire German armies and leave an enormous wide open gap of front, through which cavalry could be poured, rolling up the German line toward the northwest.

I learn one of the principal reasons the Americans insisted on pushing the campaign through to victory in 1918 was the belief that the value of tanks would be largely discounted by the spring of 1919, as through the winter the Germans would have had time to construct wide trenches and tank traps, flood large areas, and also train tank snipers with the new anti-tank rifles. Certain French experts are said to have declared the lightly armored tanks would practically be obsolete for operations by the spring of 1919.

All allied staffs agree that the American high command's relentless method of continual attacks proved the only feasible operation for combating the Germans' defensive scheme of echeloning machine guns in depth, as eventually all the German machine gunners, who were the flower of Hindenburg's army, would be killed or captured.

A Breakfast Suggestion

Fried Sausage With Gravy. Lay slices of Jones Dairy Farm Sausage meat on a very hot iron frying-pan, and turn them as soon as they are well browned. As soon as the second side is browned they should be set into a hot oven to finish cooking.

Remove from the pan the instant they are done, and keep hot while making gravy. Add dry flour to the fat in the pan and let it brown as much as you dare to—then brown it a little more.

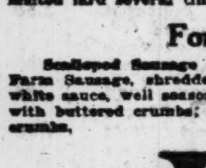
Remove from the fire while adding boiling water (one-half pint for each tablespoon of flour); stir till it is smooth and all the glaze in the bottom of the pan is dissolved, then return to the fire to boil for two minutes.

A Luncheon Dainty

Pork Loaf. 2 lbs. Jones Dairy Farm Sausage, 1 lb. steak chopped, 6 slices bread (soaked in milk), ½ onion (chopped), 2 eggs, salt, pepper and mace, grated rind lemon, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Mix ingredients thoroughly. Grease a pan with butter or lard, place loaf in it, dust over with bread crumbs and bake in medium oven. Baste with melted lard several times. When done, serve hot.

For the Home Dinner

Scalloped Sausage and Cabbage. 1½ cups cold fried Jones Dairy Farm Sausage, shredded, 1½ cups cooked chopped cabbage, 1½ cups white sauce, well seasoned. Arrange in layers in a baking dish. Cover with buttered crumbs; heat in oven until sausage bubbles through the crumbs.



JONES DAIRY FARM SAUSAGE

Made in both meat and link styles and serves as the basis for a number of easily prepared and appetizing dishes.

It contains no cereal or preservative—just choice young pork, delicately spiced, made after the same old-time farm recipe we have been following for over thirty years. Only enough is made at a time to fill each day's shipments, bringing it to your table in perfect condition.

If your dealer can't supply you, write to us at the farm and we will tell you of one who will.

The Jones Dairy Farm Products—Sausage, Hams, Bacon and Lard—come in net weight packages of perfect freshness and purity.

TELLS HOW $25 A WEEK MAN MAY PILE UP $20,000

Profit Sharing Plan of His Firm Discussed by Rosenwald.

The Chicago correspondent of the New York Times has obtained the following interview from Julius Rosenwald on the Sears, Roebuck & Co. profit sharing plan. The Times publishes it this morning:

A little more than two and one-half years ago there was placed in operation by one of the largest corporations in the United States, employing between 30,000 and 40,000 hands of both sexes, a combined savings and profit sharing plan whereby it was sought to inculcate not alone habits of thrift and reliance among the workers, but to engender loyalty and relations of the utmost harmony between employer and employé. In fact, the plan went further than this, for the participating employé became a shareholder in the corporation with a steadily growing amount of stock standing in his name.

In the light of a statement just issued by Sears, Roebuck & Co. of Chicago, who on July 1, 1916, placed in operation a plan whereby the company obligated itself to contribute 5 per cent of its net earnings without deduction of dividends to stockholders to an employés' profit sharing fund, the employé to deposit 5 per cent of his salary and in no case more than $150 per annum, the experimental stage has long been passed and the plan is an assured success.

Save Fortune in Twenty Years.

Julius Rosenwald, president of the company, and originator of its profit sharing plan, discussing its progress with a staff correspondent of the New York Times, expressed the greatest satisfaction.

"We are happy over the results of this profit sharing," he said, "not only by reason of its obvious success, but because of the independent position which it gives the employé.

"An employé earning $25 a week would have accumulated after twenty years, on the basis of the last two and half years' record, approximately 20,000. An employé receiving $50 a eek, would, at the end of twenty ears, have about $40,000 to his credit, d it is estimated that this is the inimum.

"Inasmuch as the fund is invested the stock of the company and the nd has already acquired over 20,000 ares out of the 750,000 shares out- nding of the common capital stock the company, it is not unlikely that the course of years a majority of stock will belong to the employés. Under the terms of the plan a par- ant may withdraw his accumu- d savings and profits any time r ten years. An exception to this is made in favor of female em- yés leaving to be married, who can draw their profits after five years ervice. A further exception pro- that, in case of the death of a cipant, his relatives or estate re- whatever has accumulated to his regardless of the length of ce.

Three times as many young left to be married in January, as in any previous January. forty-five young women from the fund over $19,000 an of over $425 each, with a max- of $644—undoubtedly a very able sum with which to start ping and probably unattain- e by the provisions of this aring plan.

interesting to note that since was placed in operation. July bout 500 of our young women t to be married and that the of money they withdrew from aggregated $150,000.

Added Profits of $400,000.

Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s em- vings and profit sharing pen- d has a total of $3,012,123 to its members. Of this e employés contributed $656,- alance, $2,355,824, represents ny's contributions, plus divi- the stock in which the fund d. "In addition the company still continues its anniversary check plan, and distributed among employés under this arrangement during 1918 $319,000. Under this plan employés receiving less than $1,500 a year, after five years of service, receive on their fifth anniversary a check for 5 per cent of their annual salary, on their sixth anniversary 6 per cent, and in the same ratio up to the tenth anniversary of service."

Protect Soldier Employés.

In discussing the pr on made for the returning American soldier formerly in the company's employ, Mr. Rosenwald pointed out that although no employé who has withdrawn from the fund can reënter, "we have made an exception in the case of men who went into their country's service. These men, as they return, are all given their positions with a continuous service record, which enables them to reënter the fund without penalty or loss. One thousand seven hundred and thirty-one employés of Sears, Roebuck & Co. went into the service, and as they return they are being reinstated. So far 400 employés out of 1,731 have returned and have been given their old positions."

"In the light of your experience during the last two and a half years, is it your judgment that such a profit sharing plan as you have placed in operation has had the effect of harmonizing and solidifying the relations between employer and employé?" Mr. Rosenwald was asked.

"I think that is obvious," he replied, "but probably I can better answer the question with a story. Recently an eastern publisher, a large employer of labor, sent to our office and offered one of our employés a greatly increased salary to come to him. The employé refused, giving as his reason that his future with Sears, Roebuck & Co., due in part to the profit sharing, made it inadvisable for him to leave, regardless of the difference in salary offered. This eastern publisher was so impressed with this statement that he came to Chicago to obtain full information as to the workings of the fund and has decided to adopt a similar plan in connection with his business."

WOMEN ARGUE CASE IN POLISH AND BOTH LOSE

The hearing of Miss Josephine Roebuck of Lee street, Evanston, charged by Mrs. Helen Deleskiewicz, 1606 Greenleaf avenue, Evanston, with having used improper language toward her, was called for hearing yesterday before Justice Samuel Harrison, but was continued for a week when both women showed a disposition to argue with each other in Polish instead of speaking in English.

When the case was called William A. Lister, the prosecutor, pointed an accusing finger at the defendant and called on Mrs. Deleskiewicz to tell of certain statements made by the other woman. The complainant started out in English and excitedly remarked:

"She has been tellings lies about me, and—" then the prosecutor and court found themselves listening to an argument carried on in Polish.

Maj. Peterson was a graduate of the second Fort Sheridan training camp and went to France in June 1918, as a first lieutenant. He was advanced to a captaincy in the Three Hundred and Seventeenth infantry during the second Argonne offensive. His Chicago home is at 1401 Gregory street. He is a graduate of Chicago Kent college of law, and a member of the Masons and Elks.

During the Argonne "pushes" his regiment was brigaded with the British and was cited twice by the brigade commander for gallantry.

Fruitvale President Has Salesman Arrested

Vaughn W. Connor, 4009 Kenmore avenue, formerly a salesman employed by the National Society of Fruitvalers, was arrested last night on a warrant charging larceny by embezzlement. The warrant was sworn out by Harrison M. Parker, president of the society, who said Connor had failed to turn in a sum he had collected from the sale of memberships.

Connor said the organization owed him money on commissions which had been withheld and for that reason he had refused to turn over all of the money he had collected.

ELIZABETH ADSIT BECOMES BRIDE OF C. M'A. PYLE

First Society Wedding of Spring Solemnized at St. James'.

St. James' Episcopal church at Cass and Huron streets was the setting yesterday for the first of society's spring weddings, when Miss Elizabeth Adsit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chapin Adsit of 1322 Ritchie place, became the bride of Charles McAlpin Pyle, son of Mrs. James Tolman Pyle of New York and Morristown, N. J.

Dr. James S. Stone, rector of the church, read the marriage service. The chancel was a bower of southern smilax, interspersed with baskets of snapdragons, iris, and sunset roses.

Ushers Lead Procession.

The wedding procession was led by the ushers, Herman Boker, Charles Boker, Stephen Bruce Smart, Raymond Chauncey, Latham Reed, all of New York and Charles C. Adsit Jr. Attending the bridegroom as best man was his brother, James McAlpin Pyle of New York.

The bridesmaids, Miss Edith Cummings, Miss Janet Pauling, Miss Harriet McLaughlin, and Miss Elsie Dow of Boston wore round necked, long sleeved frocks of sea blue tulle over gold tissue, with girdles of blue velvet, and picture hats of mauve tulle garlanded with vari-colored spring flowers. Their bouquets were of snapdragons, orchids, and sweet peas.

The bride, who is a petite blonde, was gowned in white satin with a collar of rose point lace and court train, with a veil of tulle hung from a becomingly arranged cap. Her flowers were gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Reception After Ceremony.

After the ceremony there was a small reception at the residence of the bride's parents in Ritchie place. Among those seen were Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Hall McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. T. Philip Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Dunlap Smith, Mr. and Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. IN MEMORIAM

Single Plume of Smoke for the Loop Instead of Pall Suggested.

A WAR memorial? Build a central heating plant for the loop district to cut down the amount of smoke in the air. And enforce the present smoke ordinances meanwhile. This is the suggestion made in the Women's City club bulletin.

It is inspired by the following poem, written by Frances Shaw:

THE SMOKE PERIL.

I am the voice of your city
Calling to you for help.
I am in peril.

For the war and its cause
I gave men and money and workers,
And sacrifices of food and warmth
As was my part.
The war is won.
Now may I make my cry?

Alas! My hope of beauty is gone from me!
A black pall of smoke is falling about me.
Shall my danger be forgotten?
Shall I be left to choke and strangle
In an endless night?

The world cried out at the destruction
Of the old dignity and beauty of Rheims.
(Deep in my heart I hoped that in some future
I might have a beauty of my own.)

The world cried out at injuries done
To innocent Belgian children.
(Deep in my heart I prayed that mine
Might be wholesome under their home sky.)
These hopes are crying aloud to you.

What boots it to widen streets,
To build bridges, and white facades
To bury them in smoke?
Can children grow to manhood in streets
Where no one can penetrate
And their lungs are black with grime?

The workers are coming back.
The women who have given themselves are set free.
There is money left.
There are kindly men, and wise and strong.
I summon them all to rescue me!
To make me worthy of that new world
For which I gave them and for which they fought.

Make me beautiful and clean.
Give me back God's sky.
Take away this choking curse of SMOKE.

GIRL AND JACKIE STIR CUPID, NAVY, DAD AND POLICE

Cupid, the police, the navy and a very angry father staged a "hide and seek" contest last night, with pretty Kathleen Budell of 302 Park avenue as the prize. At midnight Cupid was in the lead.

It seems that Kathleen took it into her 17 year old head that she wanted to marry a Great Lakes jackie, Fay B. Farris of Llano, Tex., who is all of 19 himself.

Kathleen went to Wilmette yesterday, accompanied by her younger sister, Marie. Instead of returning home she met Farris and took a train for the city.

Dutiful Marie hurried home and told papa. He at once appealed to the police, the Great Lakes station, and the marriage license bureau to prevent the (he fears) impending wedding.

COURT UPHOLDS FEDERAL RIGHT TO RULE WIRES

Illinois Appellate Bench Gives First Decision.

The right of the United States government to take over and operate the telephone and telegraph systems of the country, including companies in the hands of receivers, was upheld in an opinion of the Illinois Appellate court yesterday.

The opinion, said to be the first by a reviewing court on the subject since the telephone and telegraph lines were taken over by Postmaster General Burleson as a war measure under a joint resolution of congress, unequivocally holds that the power of the government in such cases is supreme and cannot be interfered with by the several states or their courts.

Rates Not Considered.

In the opinion the power of the government to fix rates, which is a subject of controversy in the courts of several states, is not touched upon, as the matter was not before the court.

The matter of governmental control was presented to the Appellate court in litigation involving the Central Union Telephone company, an independent concern, whose affairs have been before the local courts for six years. In July, 1917, at the request of minority stockholders Judge Dever in the Superior court ousted the American Telephone and Telegraph company and its officials from control of the Central Union company, which was placed in the hands of receivers.

Gist of Opinion.

The gist of the opinion is expressed in these words:

"The war power and all power incident to it reside in the nation's right of self-preservation, and the means of enforcing such right are left to the discretion of the nation and cannot be interfered with at the pleasure of the states or their courts."

Borah, Reed to Campaign Nation Against League

Washington, D. C., March 1.—[Special.]—A country-wide campaign in opposition to the league of nations will be started immediately after the president's departure for Europe. Senator Borah and Senator Reed will speak in New York on Thursday night against the proposed league. Senator Borah will speak in Boston on the following night. After that he will make speeches in Chicago and other principal cities of the country, extending his trip to San Francisco.

DECIDE AGAINST FILIBUSTER ON BIG BOND BILL

G. O. P. Senators Hear Sherman in Threat to Resign.

Russian policy, and Senator Johnson of California unlimbered himself for some remarks thereon.

May Force Wilson's Hand.

Even if this individual filibustering should fade out and the bills for the bond issue and the railroad revolving fund be passed, it is already apparent that the army and navy appropriation bills and numerous other measures will fail.

Appropriations for the fiscal year, beginning July 1 next, could be made by a special session of the new congress if called as late as June.

Failure of the bond and railroad bills, however, would be more serious, and numerous Democrats are of the opinion that, in that event, the president could not avoid summoning the new congress at once, despite his assertion to the contrary.

Opposition Weakens Some.

When the Republicans entered their conference it was apparent that there had been further defections from the ranks of those who insisted on defying the president. The session was a stormy one. The president's threat to hold the Republicans responsible to the country for defeating the bond bill and embarrassing the financing of the government was debated with increasing excitement.

Some of the Republicans, led by Senator Penrose, pleaded for the adoption of a firm policy of opposition to the president, asserting that the executive was attempting to railroad ill considered legislation through the senate at the eleventh hour without time for discussion.

They argued that the country should be informed of the situation and the responsibility laid on the Democrats who had failed, as the majority party, to bring in until too late for proper consideration the legislation the president now demands that the senate enact with its eyes shut.

They declared it the duty of the president to call an extra session at once and accused him of refusing to do his duty because he wants no congressional discussion of his policies while he is in Europe.

Lodge Urges Moderation.

Other Republicans, led by Senator Lodge, counselled moderation. They expressed the fear that the country would in fact hold them to blame if the bond bill should fail. Some of them dwelt on the unsettled business conditions prevailing in the country and the need of careful steering of the nation through the dark waters of reconstruction. They voiced the fear that a financial panic might develop if, by virtue of the failure of the bond bill, the government should find itself unable to meet its obligations promptly.

Finally Senator Francis of Maryland made a formal motion to filibuster the bond bill to defeat. The motion was defeated, 12 to 15.

Sherman Reads Riot Act.

Thereupon Senator Sherman arose and read the riot act to his colleagues. He denounced them as spineless, lacking in courage, and otherwise unfit to serve their country. He demanded to be informed whether they were Republicans, who had been given a vote of confidence by the people last November, or Democrats willing to be led about by the nose by the president.

"Such spectacles as this disgust me beyond measure," ejaculated Senator Sherman, "and make me despair. I do not know how much longer I can endure service in this body under such circumstances. After March 4 you may find yourselves shy a senator."

With that Senator Sherman bolted from the conference room in high dudgeon. When he repaired to the senate chamber he was still fuming with wrath and speaking his mind forcibly concerning his colleagues who had refused to filibuster the legislation demanded by the president.

Gives His Views Later.

Discussing his attitude after the conference, Senator Sherman said:

"I told the Republicans that Woodrow cracks the whip and bluffs them to a standstill, that I did not care to associate with men of no more courage than they appeared to possess, that I was going away after the adjournment of congress, and that when they assemble to organize the next congress they may find themselves lacking one vote.

"A panic was predicted if the bond bill should fail. I told them that men who talk such foolishness don't know the difference between a money bank and a snow bank. I was thoroughly disgusted and think I made that fact plain to my colleagues."

Other senators also had left the caucus before it adjourned. Among them were Senators Brandagee and Sterling.

The senate had stood in recess for an hour and a half to permit the Republicans to hold this conference. When the senate reconvened Senator Jones of New Mexico called up the revised woman suffrage amendment designed to remove the objections to suffrage on the part of southern senators. Senator Wadsworth, however, objected to consideration of the measure and under the rules it was sidetracked.

Close to a Fistfight.

A fistfight on the floor of the senate between Senator La Follette of Wisconsin and Senator Robinson of Arkansas was narrowly averted while the Wisconsin senator held the legislative program at a standstill for many hours with a one-man filibuster against the oil land leasing bill.

Senator La Follette held the floor and finally forced the Democratic leaders to stidetrack the oil land leasing bill to make way for the $7,000,000,000 bond bill after he had spoken three hours. The sidetracking of the oil bill dooms it. The measure goes to the legislative scrap heap along with many other important pieces of legislation.

By arrangement between the Democratic legislative pilots, Senator Pittman of Nevada was allowed four hours for the consideration of the oil bill. The measure has been strongly condemned by the conservationists, among them Gifford Pinchot, Senator La Follette promptly took the floor and made no effort to conceal his determination to talk it to death.

House Waits for Action.

While the senate was embroiled with legislative strife, the house, awaiting conference reports on important measures, spent five hours on a North Carolina election contest and late tonight began consideration of a tail end legislative program framed by the rules committee as follows:

Bill to appropriate $100,000,000 for soldiers' farm land.

Keating civil service retirement bill.

Representative Gallagher's resolution urging the peace conference to consider the right of Ireland to self-determination.

Burnett bill directing deportation of alien enemies.

Caraway resolution directing investigation of New York and New Orleans cotton exchanges.

House leaders were busily engaged during the evening in informal conferences with senators in an effort to extricate important appropriation legislation from the jam.

Because of a decision by administration leaders not to press the Burleson wire control limitation bill, the rules committee sidetracked this measure.

The rules committee also failed to recommend a rule for the consideration of the bill already passed by the senate providing for two additional judges for the northern district of Illinois. Representative Sabath will make an attempt to get consideration of this bill under the unanimous consent rule before adjournment.

Congress, Which Is About to Expire, Set Record in Things Done and in Amounts Which It Spent

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 1.—[Special.]—The Sixty-fifth congress, now expiring, set a record in two ways, the immensity of the things done and of the things left undone. The record of achievements shows the following:

Declared a state of war with the imperial German empire and Austro-Hungarian government.

Appropriated more money for prosecution of that war than had been appropriated previously since the foundation of the government.

Its appropriations for the first two sessions totaled $55,503,742,277, and estimates of appropriations for the session now drawing to a close total $24,599,730,966, all of which may not get through. If it should all pass before March 4 the grand appropriation total for the war congress would be $80,103,473,243.

Levy $10,000,000,000.

Passed greatest tax laws in parliamentary history, levying in two years $10,000,000,000 in taxes on the people.

Authorized bond issues aggregating $22,000,000,000, the largest bond issues by any nation in the world.

Actually appropriated for the military establishment and war department in the first two sessions $33,512,250,565 and has pending with executive pressure demanding enactment an additional appropriation for these purposes of $1,117,289,488.

Actually appropriated for naval establishment and navy department in first two sessions $3,085,132,397 and has pending an additional appropriation for these purposes of $1,685,379,553, enactment of which the administration is demanding in the closing hours.

Raise Greatest Army.

Passed the selective service military law and raised thereby America's greatest army of nearly 4,000,000 men.

Authorized expenditure of $2,884,000,000 to create an American merchant marine, designed to be the greatest in the world.

Authorized government control of railroads and of telephone and telegraph companies as war emergency measures.

Passed the national prohibition constitutional amendment, which already has been ratified by more than three-fourths of the states, becoming effective next January; in an addition passed a law prohibiting the liquor traffic for the period of the war, becoming effective July 1 next.

Made appropriations creating an American air service and authorized aeroplane mail service.

Created war finance corporation to aid war industries.

Created federal control of food and fuel for the period of the war.

Pass War Measures.

The first session of the congress was devoted to the speedy passage of big war measures. Appropriations were staggering, but they were small in comparison with those made during the following session. Total appropriations for the first session were $16,901,966,814.

During this session also the draft army was provided for and within four months after the convening of the congress the first selective army of 687,000 men was in the making.

The second session of the congress opened on Monday, Dec. 3, 1918. It was devoted chiefly to perfecting the war machine, which the United States had set up. Reaction against the rapid method of legislation during the first session began to set in, and investigations of the conduct of the legislative branch of the government developed.

Were Many Fights.

During the entire session there was a marked and constant conflict between the legislative and executive departments, with the executive departments of the government, always supported by President Wilson, uniformly victorious. This session saw many spectacular fights on the floor, the most notable being that led by Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, a Democrat and chairman of the military affairs committee of the senate. Senate Chamberlain after an investigation of the war department made a speech in New York in which he announced the "complete failure of the war machine."

President Wilson issued a sharp rebuke to the Oregon senator and there opened a fight which continued during almost the entire session. With packed galleries Senator Chamberlain answered the president's rebuke upon the floor of the senate and charged that the war department had failed in almost every branch. He was supported in his attacks by a majority of the Republican leaders, notably Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska and Senator McKellar of Tennessee.

Were Improperly Clothed.

Before and after this spectacular incident the senate military affairs committee pressed its investigation of the conduct of the war. Witnesses made startling disclosures of war department inefficiency and maladministration. It was found that with the winter rapidly approaching a large part of the first draft army was still improperly clothed.

Testimony showed that there had been great delay in procuring the proper ordnance and equipment for the American forces and the statements made before the committee were so alarming that the people of the nation became aroused. Secretary of War Baker made a defense of his administration and maintained that the American army was properly equipped and that forces were being dispatched to Europe in great numbers.

Bureaus Were Reorganized.

It was during his testimony before this committee that Secretary Baker made his statement in answer to charges of delay that all preparations were adequate for war "3,000 miles away." Despite this defense the quartermaster and ordnance bureaus were completely reorganized and inefficient officers displaced.

The investigation also led to an aircraft probe. During its first session congress had made an appropriation of $640,000,000 for aircraft and witnesses charged that some six to eight months later a great part of this money had been spent and that there were practically no American aircraft in Europe. This testimony caused a fight which lasted for many days in both the senate and the house, when administration leaders lauded the work of the aircraft production board and anti-administration members of congress charged that the entire aircraft program had been a failure.

Ordered Investigation.

President Wilson finally took a hand in the situation and ordered an investigation of the aircraft situation by the department of justice and named Charles E. Hughes, his Republican opponent in the election of 1916, as the special investigator. Meanwhile there had been a shakeup in the war department and an aircraft board was named and control of the air service of the United States passed from the hands of Brig. Gen. Squire, head of the signal corps, to John D. Ryan, a civilian.

The investigation conducted by Mr. Hughes revealed the extent of the airplane flasco and he strongly recommended the court martial of Col. Deeds, in charge of construction, but no action was ever taken and Col. Deeds eventually was given a clean bill of health by the secretary of war.

Appeals to Congress.

As a result of the investigation of the war department, Senator Chamberlain, on behalf of the military committee, laid before the senate a proposition to create a war cabinet and a director of munitions. For many weeks the fight over this measure surged on the floor, with many outbursts of hot debate, and with the administration leaders constantly supporting President Wilson and his cabinet.

President Wilson took a hand in the fight again and publicly appealed to congress to defeat the Chamberlain measure and hold up his hands. The president won by bringing forward the Overman bill authorizing him to readjust the executive functions of the government, which was passed. Then the president established an informal war cabinet, meeting weekly.

PRESIDENT HAS BUSIEST WEEK OF WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1.—Another day of strenuous work by President Wilson brought to a close what White House attaches said was the busiest week ever experienced at the executive offices.

Twenty-three bills and joint resolutions were signed by the president today at odd moments between the reception of callers, consideration of domestic questions and the making of nominations. These included two general appropriation measures, the postoffice bill, and the legislative, executive and judicial bill continuing subtreasuries in nine cities and giving civilian employes of the government in Washington a war bonus of $240. The bill authorizing voluntary enlistments in the army up to 175,000 men also was signed.

Diplomatic callers took up most of the afternoon, among these being the new ministers from Peru and the kingdom of Serbs, Slovenes and Croats, who presented their credentials. After brief conferences with Secretaries Daniels and Glass on departmental affairs the president went with Mrs. Wilson for an automobile ride.

CLOUDS, MAYBE SNOW, WEATHER MAN'S FORECAST

"Cloudy, with unchanged temperature and a light snow possible."

This was the best promise the weather man would make last night for today and tomorrow. The mercury hovered around 29 degrees above zero last night.

The storm which preceded Friday's cold snap passed rapidly down the St. Lawrence valley, accompanied by severe gales and a general precipitation in the east.

The temperature rose from 8 degrees above zero at 5 a. m. yesterday to the 29 mark, where it remained until after midnight.

DIES AS HE DRIVES CAR.

Rochester, N. Y., March 1.—Dr. William B. Jones, physician, died suddenly in his automobile while driving this afternoon.

SUICIDE RIDS HIM OF SHADOW OF UNSOLVED CRIME

Wiltrax, Once Convicted on Son's Testimony, Turns On Gas.

For fifteen years the shadow of an unsolved murder has pursued John Wiltrax.

Wiltrax escaped from it yesterday morning. He died by his own hand.

His body was found in a room at 710 West Twelfth place by Charles Wajwood, a night watchman, with whom he had been "batching it."

A burner on a small gas stove was open.

"Suicide," the police said.

The murder, which the police say "haunted" Wiltrax, was that of Paul Pasczkowski, 6 years old, a playmate of Wiltrax's son, Julius, 11 years old.

The murder was committed on April 27, 1903, the body of the boy being found buried near a saloon Wiltrax owned in Hansen Park. Wiltrax and his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Wiltrax, were arrested on the statements made by Julius.

The boy testified that his father shot his playmate and that Mrs. Wiltrax, his stepmother, helped bury the body.

The couple denied the charge, but Wiltrax was found guilty. His wife was discharged. Wiltrax was sentenced to twenty-five years in prison on July 30, 1903.

Boy Testifies He Lies.

He was released in 1904 through the efforts of Peter Van Vlissingen, who later went to prison as a forger.

Van Vlissingen professed to believe that Julius, a child of the slums, was actuated by hatred of the stepmother. He tried an experiment.

He took the lad to his home, treated him with every consideration, and avoided mention of the murder.

Within eighteen months after Wiltrax had been convicted a new trial was granted, and the boy went on the stand and told the jury that he had lied at the first trial and that his father had not killed his playmate.

Starts Another Saloon.

Wiltrax was released from jail and started a saloon at Canal and Bunker streets, but it did not pay. He gave it up and drifted about. A year ago his wife died. His son Julius enlisted in the army at the outbreak of the war and is now in France. Wiltrax did odd jobs for a living and gave up the last one he held, that of night watchman, about a month ago. Recently he drew $150 out of the bank and went on a drinking spree, the police say.

Those who knew Wiltrax said that because the murder never was solved he brooded over the fact that many persons believed him guilty—he always was in the shadow of suspicion.

Wajwood, his roommate, and Mrs. Sophie Grizwald, who lives in the building, told the police of the final end of Wiltrax.

Had Been Drinking.

"He has been coming home drunk for some time," she said. "Several days ago he stumbled on the stairs and hurt his head, but he would not let me do anything for it. I was told that he drew all of his money out of a bank and has been trying to drink it up. He was on the bed in the little room that he lived in and gas was coming out of a burner of the gas stove."

THE TRIBUNE reproduces herewith a facsimile of a check for 106,902.87 francs which on Jan. 10 was turned over to Gen. Pershing. This is in accordance with a recent announcement that all profits accruing during the war from The Tribune's Army Edition, published in Paris, would be turned over to such army funds as the commander in chief might select. The amount represents all profits of that edition of THE TRIBUNE from its inauguration, July 4, 1917, up to the end of last November, the month in which the armistice was signed.

In acknowledging receipt of the check, Gen. Pershing says:

"I cannot hope to express to you adequately the thanks of the American expeditionary force for this. You have rendered a signal service to us all in the publication of your newspaper and in your consistently generous and helpful attitude to officers and men in this war. Now you have placed us all still further in your debt by your generosity.

"I wish also to add my appreciation of the valuable service that the Army Edition of THE TRIBUNE has rendered our army in France."

DEATH RECALLS RAPID RISE OF LIEUT. BLAKESLEE

Back of the London cablegram which told yesterday of the death there from pneumonia of Lieutenant Commander N. G. Blakeslee, aid de camp to Admiral Sims, is the story of the rapid rise of a Woodstock, Ill., man in his country's service.

Commander Blakeslee was 32 years old just yesterday. Late in the afternoon, a few hours after the London cablegram appeared in print, his uncle, Frank Blakeslee, a court stenographer of Waukegan, received a telegram from eastern relatives confirming the news of the death.

Commander Blakeslee went with Admiral Sims when the American squadron was ordered to European waters during the world war, and ever since has been commander of the American navy aviation forces abroad, with headquarters in London. A graduate of Annapolis, whither he went from Woodstock, his career saw one promotion after another.

While in London he met and married an English girl of prominent family in a pretty wartime romance. She survives him. The lieutenant commander was ill only eight days at her home, which is on fashionable Grosvenor Square, London.

Four Men Found Guilty on 16 Year Old Girls' Charge

Hammond, Ind., March 1.—Four East Chicago men were found guilty today in the Juvenile court at Crown Point of contributing to the delinquency of two 16 year old Hammond girls, who told of a two weeks' orgy at East Chicago.

Florence Sickles, one of the girls, was committed to the Indiana Girls' school. Beatrice Bird was paroled to her father. The men were John Pappas, a waiter at the Blue Goose Inn; Jerry Lazaris, a tailor; Bert Petersen, manager of the Dollas hotel at East Chicago, and Thomas Dollas, owner of the hotel.

The men were fined and sentenced to the penal farm for six months, but the sentences were held up pending their good behavior.

DRINKS POISON IN PLAY, DIES.

Elizabeth Comforti, 11 years old, 1231 South Peoria street, died in the county hospital yesterday of poisoning. She and Anna Hanelan, 9 years old, 1237 South Peoria, were playing house in the laboratory of the latter's father, Dr. William B. Hanelan. Elizabeth found some poison and drink it.

EX-TAR LANDS HEAVILY ON JAW OF CIVVY RIVAL

Neil Mears was an unwelcome visitor last night when he dropped in to see Jane Bresnik, 17 years old, 4217 St. Lawrence avenue, to whom he is said to have been attentive recently, and found there Edward Klester, just discharged from the navy.

Ethel Fernberg, 19 years old, 10132 South Wabash avenue, and William Brown, 22 years old, 119 East Thirty-fifth street, also just released from the army, were also there and all was well until the arrival of Mears.

Klester, who, before enlisting in the navy, felt that he was securely entrenched in the affections of the fair Jane, demanded to know the identity of the caller. To show who and what he was Mears is said to have kissed the object of their affections.

Too much! With a shout that would have caused the whole German navy to surrender, Klester, who is over 6 feet tall and weighs 200 pounds, landed a terrific punch on the jaw of Mears, who is only 5 feet 4 inches and slender. Jane fainted.

CHICAGO PLANS TO GREET CRACK NEGRO REGIMENT

Celebration for 365th to Rival Welcome Given the Eighth.

War department orders authorizing a Chicago stopover for the Three Hundred and Sixty-fifth infantry regiment last night started Negro patriots of the Second ward in a second campaign of "welcome home" preparations.

The "Black Hawks," as the crack Negro riflemen and machine gunners were dubbed while in training with the Eighty-sixth division in Grant, now are resting in Camp Dix awaiting orders to entrain for Chicago and demobilization. It is expected the unit will be the first of the returning Ninety-second division to be mustered out of service.

"Chicago will see a repetition of the Eighth regiment reception," remarked Col. William Nelson Pelouze after receiving the adjutant general's telegram last night.

Another Big Celebration.

"We have been flooded with inquiries about the regimental stopover and the colored welcoming committee reports all arrangements have been made for another big celebration. I have been unable to learn what day next week the Negro troops will reach Chicago. They probably will come in on Tuesday or Wednesday.

"The celebration will center in the Coliseum, as did the Eighth's homecoming. A big dinner and entertainment will be given the troops there, after their march from the troop trains and Chicago's folks will be free to visit their fighting men most of the day. A parade in full marching order through the loop will wind up the program."

Suffered Heavy Losses.

The Three Hundred and Sixty-fifth suffered the heaviest casualties of any unit in Gen. Ballou's Negro national army division. Its second battalion, composed almost entirely of Chicago men, has the distinction of having captured Bois Frehaut, the key to Metz, in the fighting Nov. 10. One hundred men in the regiment have been cited for bravery in action. The regiment was led by Negro juniors under the command of senior white officers.

One thousand gunners of the Sixty-ninth coast artillery were welcomed to Chicago yesterday by Red Cross canteen women. The unit touched here while en route from Camp Eustis to Camp Grant for demobilization.

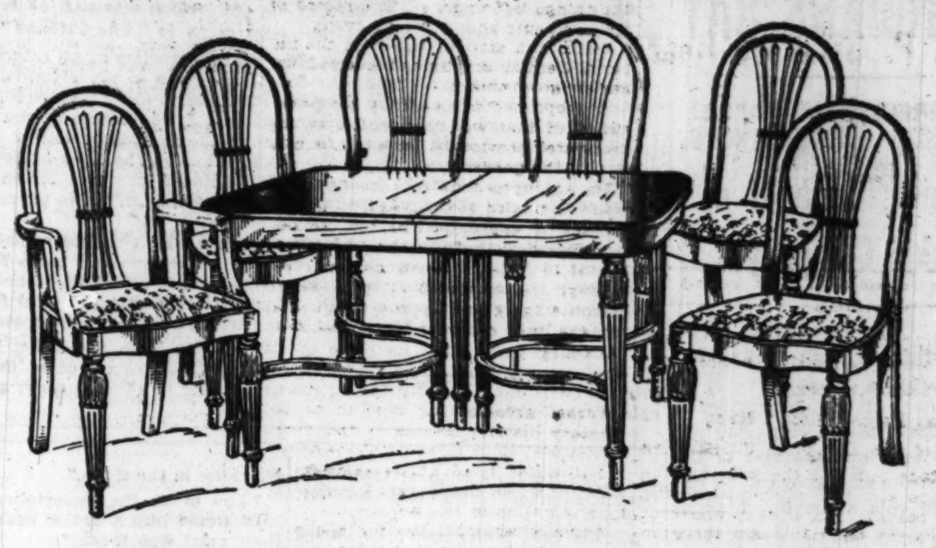
Scholle's Semi-Annual Sale of Good Furniture



Hepplewhite Mahogany Dining Room Suite

	Sale Price
Sideboard, 72 inches long	$150.00
Oblong Round End Table, 8 foot extension with aprons on two leaves	136.00
China Cabinet	125.00
Serving Table	64.00
Chairs in Tapestry, each	30.00
Arm Chair in Tapestry	38.00

THIS dining room suite is something you'll appreciate for many reasons. Of course it is a bargain from the points of quality and price; everything we are offering during this sale is a bargain in those points, but this suite deserves extra attention.

This is a wonderful example of Hepplewhite, in mahogany; the character of its design and the workmanship put into it are up to the Scholle standard in every way. Furniture of this Period is known by certain distinctive features familiar to all who love period furniture; now if these features were produced in light weight or poor quality material, the furniture would be Hepplewhite in lines, but in nothing else.

We gave this suite our own supervision during the making; our specifications provided not only for correctness in type but for solid, substantial construction that would last for many generations and be strong and serviceable to the last. It is an unusual bargain. See it!

POOR DEMAND STYLISH BURIAL, MORTICIANS SAY

Too Many Undertakers, Declares Manager of Casket Company.

[Fourth Article on High Cost of Funerals in Chicago.]

"There are too many undertakers in Chicago. About fifteen or twenty are getting the bulk and the rest of the 485 have to make what they can on two or three funerals a month. I admit that undertakers have told me there was $500 insurance in a certain case and they intended to get all of it. I have seen a street sweep put in a $250 casket with a dress suit on. I have had a woman in here with $500 insurance and four children who walked out when I wanted to sell her a cheap casket instead of a $500 one."
—From interview with W. C. De Motte, manager of the Chicago branch of the National Casket company.

Rose Rafoni came to Chicago Commons seeking aid. Her husband had died and she had three little children. She must go to work and had no place to leave them.

"Was there no insurance?" asked the neighborhood worker.

"Yes, $1,000, but all gone but $125 which the society will not pay me yet. They say other widows come first."

"Where did the money go?"

"Grocery bill and some money I borrowed and the funeral."

"What was the funeral?"

"Ah, fine funeral, cost $400."

Insists on Concrete Box.

Rose Rafoni's husband was a peddler. When he died there was five days of feasting and all the neighbors came in. The casket was banked with flowers. The widow insisted on a concrete box for the casket.

When the funeral was over and the money was gone she took her children to a friend's home on North Richmond street. She left them there while she went out to work.

"It is this way," said the Italian woman who was looking after the widow's children. "She wanted to do it. No one forced her to spend the money. The lodge sent out 200 invitations to the funeral. They got up a flower wreath for her and took $10 out of the insurance money for it.

"She said her husband was a good man and she never would have a chance to do anything more for him. She would not have been happy without a good funeral like that. Now she is willing to work."

DE COLA'S VIEW OF THINGS

Undertaker Fred De Cola is a jolly looking, well fed Italian with a merry brown eye. One could think with satisfaction of Oliver Twist apprenticed to him in his little shop at 1235 West Grand avenue. Here was no Mr. Sowerberry.

Mr. De Çola is the man who buried Rose Rafoni's husband. He says the funeral bill did not come up to the widow's estimate of $400—at least his part of it did not.

"But I can't get the records now," he said. "They are locked up. I do not rob the people. I give the poor cheap funerals and they know it. Here is a case for you."

And the jolly little undertaker opened his fur lined coat and let the way to a rear room. Oliver might have jumped with fright if he had been forced to sleep here. There were coffins ranged along the wall. In the center was a tiny white casket on a standard.

"Here is a case I took for $20—whole funeral bill," said the undertaker.

Out of There Quickly.

He lifted the lid and disclosed a white silk interior with a white rosebud of a baby there. The reporter could not think of any more questions at the moment. He agreed that it was a cheap funeral and led the way hurriedly to the front office.

"I do not believe in these big funerals," said De Cola. "The lodges and societies are to blame. Some of them have their own undertaker. He must pay some one and put it on the bill in some way. I never graft like that. I do not belong to these societies.

"But what can you do when a woman wants a fine casket? Mrs. Rafoni insisted on one that I had to hunt all over town for. If I do not sell it some one else will. There are two or three other undertakers in this neighborhood. We are out to make what we can, of course."

SYMPATHY THE BIG THING

The National Casket company has a big building at 601 West Jackson boulevard. On the second floor is a showroom where caskets in price from $50 to $2,500 may be seen. Undertakers sometimes bring their customers directly to this showroom to pick out caskets.

"They used to bring them in here at all hours of the night, rush them down right away—catch them as soon as they could," said Manager W. C. De Motte.

"What did they do that for?" asked a reporter.

"Well, you know, sympathy is the big thing in the trade."

"You mean the undertaker figured they would buy a better casket while their grief was fresh?"

"I suppose so. I lost a lot of customers during the flu epidemic. Some undertakers told the people we had nothing left but $300 and $400 caskets. I stopped that. I would not let them rob the people. The government has kept us down to the plainest kind of manufacture during the war. Now we are just getting our showrooms filled again."

"Won't Have Cheap Casket."

Mr. De Motte led the way to a plain casket covered in gray crêpe.

"The undertaker can sell this for $50," he said. "But do you suppose those poor women would have it? I have seen them turn up their noses and walk away. I have had them tell me to 'go to ——' and walk out of the place when I suggested a cheap casket.

"This has always been one of the troubles of the trade. The fact is that few people make a business matter out of casket buying. With Poles and Italians it is sentiment and the desire to outrival neighbors."

The manager led the way to a side wall where were several couch caskets, with drop sides, lined with tufted silk and with silk pillows inside.

"This is what they demand," he said. "It is just like styles in weddings and house furnishings."

He said he lost one undertaker customer because after the undertaker had sold a copper lined casket he had asked the casket company to put in a zinc lining, copper coated.

He told of the rapid advance in all prices for casket materials during the war.

"Some one complained that the manufacturers were profiteering," he said. "We went to Washington and opened our books and the senate committee was satisfied we were making only a fair profit. We operate on a cost basis and have nothing to hide. Our books are open and our meetings are all reported by stengraphers."

WILL FIXES COST OF FUNERAL

Attorney Tells Relatives They Must Not Spend More than $100, "as an Example to Others."

Attorney Henry W. Leman has peculiar ideas about funerals. He has embodied these ideas in his will, which was written two years ago. The following excerpt has been given to "The Tribune":

In the course of my (now forty-five years') practice as an attorney in the courts of this country, it has frequently come to my attention that many needy families, in their mistaken endeavor to show respect for their dead, have incurred ruinous funeral expenses, far in excess of the financial resources of such families, in cases of death in their family circles and not infrequently nearly all the insurance upon the lives of deceased persons in most moderate financial circumstances, provided for the support of the heirs of the deceased person, has been absorbed in payment of extravagant expenses.

I expect, at my decease, to leave an estate which will be sufficient in amount to justify the payment of what might be termed a large funeral expense; yet, as an example to those who cannot afford the present exorbitant expenses attending death, I hereby direct that the total funeral expenses to be incurred by my death and burial shall not exceed $100.

Attorney Leman has an office in the Chicago Title and Trust building. He declares he will contest undertakers' bills in all estate cases that come into his office in the future, forcing the undertaker to show in court a reasonable service performed.

THIEVES ROB SHOE DEALER.

Detroit, Mich., March 1.—Two thieves stunned Nathan Haplen, shoe store proprietor, in his shop and departed with $2,700 in cash and Liberty bonds, he reported to the police today.

SPECIAL EDITION GIVES TRIBUTE TO 'MARSE HENRY'

Louisville, Ky., March 1.—More than 200 men and women of distinction will pay tributes to Henry Watterson, editor emeritus of the Louisville Courier-Journal, in a special edition of that paper tomorrow to be known as the "Marse Henry edition."

The contributors include Premier Lloyd George, Arthur James Balfour, Andre Tardieu, American Peace Commissioners White, Bliss, Lansing, and House, Gen. Pershing, Admiral Sims, Melville E. Stone, former President William H. Taft, Charles E. Hughes, Vice President Marshall, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, and Postmaster General Burleson.

Seventy-two of the country's leading editors and publishers have sent greetings to Mr. Watterson through the edition; nineteen prominent American cartoonists are represented by original sketches; twenty-three senators, governors, and congressmen, and a large number of clergymen, educators, authors, poets, and actors, all of national reputation, voice their esteem. An art supplement contains a large portrait of Mr. Watterson.

Condition of Van Loan Is Reported 'Unchanged'

SHRAPNEL

The federated committees of the army, navy, and marine kin auxiliaries will meet in room 1012 County building at 8 o'clock Monday night.

Battery E of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery's Fathers and Mothers' association will give a military ball Tuesday evening in the Hotel La Salle.

The Mothers' Aid of the Fifty-third engineers will meet next Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. H. Cobb, 2156 Sunnyside avenue, Ravenswood.

The auxiliary of the One Hundred and Twenty-second field artillery will meet at 2:30 p. m. Sunday, March 2, at the Morrison hotel.

If you are a recently returned soldier, sailor, or marine, in need of food, clothing, shelter, medical attention, or a job, read this item.

On account of the pressure of extra work upon the home service section of the Chicago chapter, American Red Cross, incident to the great influx of returning soldiers who besiege that department in need of every character of assistance, the office hours for the section have been arranged as follows:

9 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily.

10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Sundays and holidays.

Only emergencies are dealt with at night or on Sundays, however.

The Third regiment, Illinois reserve militia, yesterday opened a recruiting campaign to induce men released from active federal service to continue their training. The regiment occupies the armory at 3401 Wentworth avenue, formerly the home of the Seventh regiment, I. N. G. Each of the three battalions drills one night a week.

Chicagoan, Arrested in Joliet as I. W. W., Freed

Henry Bradley of Chicago, arrested in Joliet, Ill., with several suitcases of I. W. W. literature in his possession, was ordered released yesterday by the department of justice.

Bradley was delivering I. W. W. tracts to various cities in central Illinois. Literature of a similar nature has been barred from the mails.

Maj. Gen. George Goethals Retires Into Civil Life

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals returned to civil life today as a retired officer of the army, having relinquished his duties as assistant to the chief of staff and director of purchase, storage, and traffic, to Brig. Gen. George W. Burr, who has been his chief aid in the department.

SUFFRAGE GAINS SENATE VOTE, BUT DELAY IS LIKELY

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Favorable reports on the compromise resolution for submission of an equal franchise constitutional amendment to the states were ordered today by both the senate and house woman suffrage committees, but when Chairman Jones sought to present the senate committee's report tonight Senator Wadsworth of New York, Republican, objected and the report remained with the committee.

While conceding that a filibuster or congestion of legislation in the senate might prevent consideration of the resolution at this session, advocates of the measure expressed confidence that it would be adopted before adjournment.

Senator Jones said tonight, however, that no plans looking to the consideration of the resolution had been made.

Senator Gay of Louisiana announced today that he would vote for the compromise resolution and advocates of the measure said his vote would give them the necessary two-thirds majority.

MRS. BASS WILL HELP SWEITZER IN HIS CONTEST

More Republicans on the Lists of Members of His Committees.

Mrs. George Bass, chairman of the woman's national Democratic committee and the first woman to sit and vote as a member of the Democratic national committee, yesterday offered her services to Robert M. Sweitzer, Democratic candidate for mayor.

Mrs. Bass sent the following telegram from Washington:

"Congratulations of nomination of Robert M. Sweitzer and the rest of the ticket. Let me know if I can be of any assistance in the campaign."

Mr. Sweitzer answered the telegram, and told Mrs. Bass she could be of great assistance and asked her to come to Chicago as soon as possible. Her return is expected next week.

More Republicans in Line.

Mitchell D. Follansbee, former president of the Chicago Bar association and a Republican in national politics, was selected as president of the Robert M. Sweitzer for Mayor Lawyers' club, which organized yesterday at a meeting in the Ashland block headquarters, attended by more than 200 prominent local practitioners. George L. No "Sleeping Sickness" in Chicago, Says Robertson

Assurance that Chicago is not in the throes of a "sleeping sickness" epidemic was given last night in a statement by Dr. John Dill Robertson, commissioner of health. He attributed the supposed cases to uremic poisoning often the aftermath of influenza.

"There are no cases of 'sleeping sickness' in the city," said Dr. Robertson. "What is mistakenly termed so is probably uremia or kidney trouble, which produces a stupor. It often follows influenza."

LOST—

In the County Hospital While Relatives and Police Sought Him.

Hiram L. Zumbaugh, a barber, of 5002 Calumet avenue, was listed among the city's "missing" for two days while he lay in a ward of the County hospital. His sister, Mrs. Minnie Armstrong, with whom he lives, notified the police he had left home Thursday to go to the County hospital for a diagnosis of his illness.

When he failed to come home Friday, Mrs. Armstrong called the hospital.

"No record—didn't come here," the receiving clerk informed her.

Mrs. Armstrong then notified the police.

Last night a telephone message from the hospital asked Mrs. Armstrong to send Zumbaugh's "nightie," slippers and handkerchiefs to him.

Attaches of the hospital stated that Zumbaugh had come for a diagnosis with a letter of introduction from Dr. James Kearney and that his condition was so weak that he had been advised to go to bed.

When he showed no signs of improvement Saturday morning, they said, he was formally received as a patient and notice sent to the receiving clerk.

Woman Candidate for Alderman Talks of Schools

Mrs. Ida M. Fursman, candidate for alderman on the Labor party ticket for the Twenty-seventh ward, spoke before a meeting of her ward workers at her headquarters, 3965 Elston avenue, on the pay of school teachers.

"The minimum wage in Chicago for teachers is $775," said Mrs. Fursman. "This is not a salary or wages; it is a stipend. Teachers never will be efficient when poorly paid. As a result of this condition of things the better women cannot be induced to become teachers, and it is a matter of grave concern to those interested in the right education of children that there is a constantly lower grade of girls entering Normal school every year."

"HANDSOME JACK" ILL.

The hearing of John C. ["Handsome Jack"] Russell, recently sentenced to six months in the house of correction on a charge of infidelity preferred by his wife, Mrs. Marie Russell, set for yesterday in the Morals' court, was postponed until March 31. Russell is said to be critically ill with pneumonia.

HOYNE ATTACKS JUDGE SCULLY AND D. J. EGAN

Says They Are Responsible for His Keeping Out of Primary.

Maclay Hoyne yesterday issued a statement explaining why he had failed to submit his candidacy to the Democratic primary voters, attacking Judge Scully and Dennis J. Egan, former chief clerk of the board of election commissioners.

"Several weeks ago I announced that I would submit myself to the people of Chicago as an independent, nonpartisan candidate for mayor," he said. "For that reason, and others, I did not enter the primary, but instead devoted myself to preparing for the campaign that will go forward from now until the April election.

"I have no alliance with any political boss or group of bosses, and I have made no pledge to any boss, political party or faction. When elected mayor I will give the citizens of Chicago that which I believe they have been looking forward to for many years—an absolutely nonpartisan administration. I will appoint to city offices the best men available, without reference to their previous party affiliations.

No Honest Primary.

"Additional reasons why I am running as an independent, nonpartisan candidate and why I did not submit my name at the primary, are among the following:

"It has been said, and with considerable reason, that there has not been an honest primary election in Chicago for the greater part of the last twenty years.

"My investigations and an inquiry by the grand jury of election frauds in the last four years have convinced me that the gas and traction democracy which now controls the election machinery of Cook county, is absolutely unscrupulous and stops at nothing in the way of fraud to break down opposition to its candidates.

Scully and Egan.

"County Judge Scully and Dennis J. Egan, until recently chief clerk of the election commission, plainly had knowledge of these frauds, for I brought such frauds to their attention. Their conduct proves their indifference to such frauds.

"These officials, who should be protectors of the sanctity of the ballot, are a part and parcel of the gas and traction democracy and do its bidding.

"The gas and traction democracy, Judge Scully, and Egan have an alliance with the city hall machine.

Says He Exposed Frauds.

"Before the primary, Sept. 11 last, I filed before Judge Scully a petition containing the names and addresses of about 600 persons who were illegally on the lists of registered voters. The names included those of persons who were dead, had moved, or were otherwise disqualified. Judge Scully's attention was called to the fact that several thousand violations of the election laws had been committed.

"Judge Scully made his own investigation and then said some errors had been found in the petition and that persons who we charged had moved were soldiers. We submitted a list of all soldiers to disprove this statement.

"To this day Judge Scully has done nothing to strike these names from the register and has done nothing to punish the judges and clerks of election who permitted these fraudulent registrations."

SWEITZER VOTE SWELLED 1,000 ON TABULATION

Tabulation of the vote cast at Tuesday's primary election resulted in slight gains in the vote for all of the leading candidates for mayor and one of more than 1,000 in the total vote for Robert M. Sweitzer, the Democratic nominee. The total vote, which is shown by the tabulation, which will probably be declared official tomorrow, follows:

REPUBLICAN.	Men.	Women.	Total.
Thompson	81,783	42,411	124,194
Olson	52,603	31,651	84,254
Merriam	10,297	7,399	17,780
Thompson's plurality, 39,940.
DEMOCRATIC.
Sweitzer	70,711	39,886	110,597
Carey	33,481	14,701	48,182
Heidelmeier	1,031	290	1,321
Sweitzer's plurality, 72,415.

The count in the Twenty-fourth ward gave Ald. Roeder a lead of forty-eight votes over Joseph Pionke in the Democratic primary. In the Twenty-ninth ward the count gave former Ald. Golombiewski a plurality of 108 over Ald. Hrubec.

These are the only wards in which the results were close.

Ald. Hrubec yesterday filed a petition to a recount of the votes in the County court. Pinonke is expected to do likewise.

FIRE KILLS AN AGED MAN.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 1.—Charles Knefler, 81, was burned to death and Jacob Friebegerer was badly burned when fire destroyed a three story building on East Washington street.

INDICT OFFICERS OF MINNESOTA STRING OF BANKS

Minneapolis, Minn., March 1.—Five indictments against William H. Schafer and two against Charles F. Wyant in connection with the closing of fourteen Minnesota state banks were today returned by the Hennepin county grand jury.

Three of the indictments returned against Schaefer allege grand larceny and the remaining two charge him with having knowledge that insolvent banks under his direction and control were accepting deposits.

The indictments allege that Schafer secured by fraudulent methods $15,000 from the Hamel [Minn.] State bank, $10,000 from the St. Louis Park [Minn.] State bank, and $5,000 from the State Bank of St. Bonafacius, Minn. Oct. 14 last is named in the indictment as the date when the money is alleged to have been secured.

Borrowed from Many, But Gave Wife None; Jailed

Mrs. Tillie Anthony, 632 South Peoria street, who had her husband, Charles, arrested for nonsupport, accused him of borrowing money from all his friends, in Court of Domestic Relations yesterday. Judge Gemmill sentenced him to thirty days in the bridewell.

LINCOLN AVENUE
A Business Thoroughfare In BRITIGANWOOD

Its character is much the same as that of Clark Street or Milwaukee Avenue. Like these two streets the development of Lincoln Avenue has up to this time been "spotty"—that is, the intensive development and growth of values along Lincoln Avenue has been in spots and not along the entire length of the street. The next big development on this thoroughfare will be that which will come naturally from the building up of BRITIGANWOOD.

What Will Make Values at Britiganwood

A business district is governed by the development of the residential property in that particular zone. A high grade district, containing the more thrifty element of people, will have an entirely different business district, a more valuable business district, than a development containing shiftless people with low purchasing power and homes and property of low character and unclean aspect. The business districts of Lawrence Avenue are very prosperous ones because the people who have settled around them and have built homes and flats are a substantial, thrifty class of people. Lawrence Avenue values are high and possess great stability.

Much the same class of people will live in BRITIGANWOOD that today live in Ravenswood and Albany Park. The BRITIGANWOOD residential district is divided into zones, some of which are restricted to bungalows and others to flats of different character. The building line, cost of building and other restrictions, together with the zoning plan, is intended to and will force the development of this district so that people of certain classes only will settle in this subdivision. BRITIGANWOOD should have a population of 20,000 people in seven years and probably 30,000 people in ten years. To provide for this population there will be expended in building operations probably $25,000,000. When the district is settled there will be an annual purchasing power in the district of probably $14,000,000—that is, there should be 7,000 families in this district with a total annual income of $2,000 per family.

Lincoln Ave. Business Property in Britiganwood Will Never Be Cheaper

Temporarily there is a lull in building in Chicago. In just what month building operations will be resumed on a large scale it is impossible to say; but it will not be later than the early fall, if the opinion of experts may be relied upon. BRITIGANWOOD is ready with its complete improvements. Practically every residential lot is sold. Exorbitantly high rents will promote immediate building in BRITIGANWOOD by those who have purchased home property with the intention of getting out of the "rent" class as soon as possible. Just as soon as these building operations begin in earnest Lincoln Avenue property and Bryn Mawr Avenue property will begin to take on speculative values which in a few short years will ripen into permanent values. This property, therefore, should be purchased at once by those investors who can visualize the future of this great section and who desire the big profits rather than the smaller ones that come after the development has reached such a point as to make the speculative prices real and permanent.

Come Out Today! These Lots Are Going Rapidly!!

In order that you may see BRITIGANWOOD and to enable us to show you the relation of Lincoln Avenue to this great property you should plan to come out TODAY, no matter what is the condition of the weather.

HOW TO GET THERE—Take a through route Kedzie Avenue car and ride to the end of the line (Foster Avenue), where you will meet our automobile which will bring you to the property. Or telephone Monticello 4098 and we will have an automobile call at your home and take you out to the property. We will see that you have a comfortable trip, no matter what the condition of the weather.

NURSES SEEK TO REVIVE SLAVERY, DOCTOR CHARGES

Bill Aims to Create "Low Caste" Branch, He Declares.

The controversy between nurses and ysicians over the proper methods of lieving the shortage in nurses for the ck was punctuated yesterday by a ebate in the Journal of the American edical Association between Miss M. I. McMillan, head of the State Nurses' ssociation, and Dr. M. L. Harris, president of the Illinois Hospital associa on.

The subject of debate is a measure troduced by the nurses into the state gislature providing for "junior urses" with eighteen months' training. The physicians, who opened the ontroversy with a demand for "house-aids for the sick with a year's experience" and a bill to provide for them, eclare that the nurses are attempting keep the field closed by a "barrage restrictions."

Bars Nursing by Relatives.

Answering Miss McMillan's letter boosting the bill offered by the nurses, Dr. Harris says:

"The first paragraph of the proposed law makes it unlawful for any person except a registered nurse or a junior registered nurse to nurse the sick.

"The question of 'hire' does not enter into the bill. A person not a registered nurse could not render even gratuitous service to the sick. Not only that, but the bill would prevent sisters, deaconesses, and brothers of religious organizations which conduct hospitals from nursing the sick, either in their hospitals or in the patients' homes, and would likewise exclude from nursing all male nurses and all unregistered nurses, even though graduates, unless they chose to register—and many of them do not so elect—and all practical nurses, however great the necessity for their existence may be and however great the good that they may do.

Calls Bill "Class Move."

"The slave was chained to the galley for life, but that was centuries ago. Can it be that we are returning to that age? Is it possible that the law is to be invoked to create class—to keep a person to a particular work and to prevent that person from doing anything else?

"No matter what the junior nurse's ambitions may be, no matter what her ability as a teacher, as a supervisor, or as an executive may be; no matter what her aptitude for public health service may be, the proposed law would prohibit her doing any of these things or any other similar things.

Takes Away Care.

"No one familiar with the subject will attempt for a minute to deny that there is a large field for the well trained, well educated specialist in nursing; nor would any one think of restricting or hindering the progress and development of those who are interested in this line of work; but what the great mass of the people need and demand is a nurse who will wait on them when they are sick, and who will carry out the orders of their physician.

"The proposed bill which the Nurses' association has presented does not supply this great need, but it deprives people of much of the service along this line which they now have."

"STUFFED"

Watertown Youth Reverts to Type, but Makes Error with the Military.

A SOMEWHAT dejected patriot is Cyril Claude Feifft, 18 years old, late of Watertown, Wis., where they "stuff geese," among other things. Cyril arrived in Chicago several days ago in a second lieutenant's uniform, with a gold overseas bar on his sleeve and thrilling tales of Chateau Thierry, the Argonne, etc., with which he proceeded to "stuff" such "goslings" and sympathetic ganders as were to be found in and about the Hotel La Salle.

A federal agent listened in on a few of the thrilling tales of Cyril Claude—who looks to be 21 years or older—and "lapelled him."

At the military intelligence office Cyril admitted he had been "spoofing." He exhibited a letter from his parents dated Feb. 25, addressed to the military authorities and giving their permission for his enlistment in the army.

ASKS AMERICA TO RETAIN FAITH IN THE FRENCH

New York, March 1.—A plea that Americans continue to trust France as they did during the war was made by Edouard de Billy, deputy French high commissioner to the United States, at a dinner given in honor of the commission by the Lotos club here tonight.

Asserting that the ideas of many Americans concerning the aims of France at the peace conference are "only the products of their own imaginations," M. de Billy declared France's aims are the same that were enunciated during the war.

"France has always kept her word," he said. "If you want to discover what the policies of France will be, you have only to refer to the two declarations which have bound France for the future: First, at the moment when the armistice was signed, acceptance of President Wilson's propositions; second, the answer made by the allies to President Wilson in January, 1917, when he had asked the belligerents what were their aims, and when they replied that having been attacked, they were fighting for their independence—that they wanted neither annexation nor indemnity; that their aims were three fold: Reparation of damage, restitution of what had been robbed, guarantees for the future."

WOUNDED MAN BELIEVED SHOT IN LABOR WAR

'Sonny' Dunn's Friend Is Taken While Nursing Severe Wound.

Harry Killiam, 22 years old, was arrested in his home, 503 West Forty-second place yesterday by detectives of the Stockyards station. His arrest, the police declare, will clear up at least one of the shootings that have taken place in the last two weeks.

Killiam, who has a police record, was confined to his bed with a severe bullet wound in the groin. He declared it was the result of an accident in the saloon of George Newton, Forty-seventh and Halsted streets.

Police surgeons declared it was more than twenty-four hours old, but were unable to determine if it could have been received last Tuesday. The police believe that Killiam may have been implicated in the shooting at the plumbers' union meeting last Tuesday night.

Wife's Stories Conflict.

Killiam's wife at first told the police her husband had been hurt Tuesday night.

Later she changed the time to Thursday. Newton, the saloonkeeper, said that while he heard a shot fired in his place Tuesday night he did not investigate, as he was too busy.

Killiam is held at the bridewell hospital. Victims of holdups in which shootings occurred during the last two weeks will confront him today.

The police at first were inclined to believe Killiam was shot yesterday by a saloonkeeper who was robbed of $5,000, but the surgeon's findings upset this theory.

Friend of "Sonny" Dunne.

In the raid on the prisoner's home detectives found a slot machine which they declare is a souvenir of a holdup.

They declare Killiam is an intimate friend of "Sonny" Dunne.

He was arrested with Dunne in a stolen automobile three months ago and paid a $200 fine. Dunne was discharged at that time when he testified that the revolver found on him was placed there by another person.

"CLASSY" COUPLE GOT FOUR $150 WATCHES FOR $4

There were two of them, and the observant floor manager at Spaulding & Co., jewelers, 332 South Michigan avenue, was favorably impressed. Chic clothes, faultless deportment. Class, was his deduction.

"Something in wrist watches. Something different. We're acrobats at McVicker's and we want the best."

They were escorted to the $150 case. They looked them over, selected one, deposited $2 and left. That was on Feb. 1. They returned Feb. 10, looked the case over again, deposited $2 on another watch and left. They returned Feb. 24, looked——

But by this time the floorwalker as well as the clerks were mildly incredulous. In fact, the police were notified. In the meantime an inventory of the $150 case disclosed that four wrist watches were missing. The acrobats left before the police arrived.

They have not been found. Neither have the watches.

INTRODUCE BOYS TO GAS STOVE, EDUCATORS URGE

Let the Future Husbands Know Science of Food and Home.

The housewife who thinks her husband has nothing to do with running the home is dead wrong, educators at the final session of the division of superintendency, which ended yesterday with a meeting of the American Home Economics association at the Auditorium hotel, were told.

Miss Carlotta Greer, economics expert of the Technical High school of Cleveland, declared that "the man should know something of food selection, composition, and preparation," and "help to regulate the expenditure of money to run the table."

Would Teach Boys to Cook.

She advocated, to back up her assertion, the teaching of the art of cookery to boys as well as girls.

"Whether they marry or not," she said, "men should know enough of food so that they will not choose their meals merely for flavor."

Miss Louise Stanley, federal agent of the home economics education of the board of vocational education, Washington, D. C., said: "We have simply got to get the men interested, for they have their hands on the purse strings."

Miss Jenny Snow, head of the household arts section of the Chicago public schools, warned the home economics teachers to be practical in teaching children how to cook.

Urges Family Training.

"Teach the child to cook for a family, not to bake a muffin or to attempt to prepare the menu for a hotel by getting up a meal for the whole class," she warned.

Several hundred of the educators attending the convention went to the Great Lakes Naval Training station yesterday, where they were given some idea of what teaching middle west young men in sailor life is like. Gobs were their guides.

Most of the 6,500 teachers, principals and superintendents who attended the convention left for their homes last night.

In response to the demand from Chicago and the Middle West for expert instruction in

MODEL ACCUSES BURNHAM GUM MACHINE HEAD

Quaker Miss Tells of Feasting, Dancing, and Losing Fight.

Recounting the adventures of the purple evening it will be meet to introduce the dramatis personæ before the taxicab speeds us into the domain of wine, woman, and song. The d. p.:

Sanford A. Burnham, 50 years old, president of the Burnham Gum Machine company; married, has several children.

Miss Anna Rogers, 24 years old, artist's model and stenographer; graduate of a Quaker college in Oregon.

E. L. Wenzel, manager of the Hotel Washington, 167 West Washington street.

Another girl, name not disclosed; barristers, bailiffs, etc.

The time was yesterday. The place was the Court of Domestic Relations. The events related occurred the night of Oct. 4. Miss Rogers, who caused Burnham's arrest, is on the witness stand.

Wanted a Typewriter.

"I went to the Washington hotel to ask Mr. Wenzel, whom I knew, to allow me the use of his typewriter. He consented and then asked me to go to dinner with Mr. Burnham and the other girl. I did," she testified.

"Mr. Burnham came in his automobile. We drove to the north side for the other girl. We returned to the loop and dined in a State street restaurant. I had every confidence in Mr. Wenzel. Mr. Burnham kept talking about his daughters.

"We visited a number of cabarets and drank considerably. At 1 in the morning we left Colosimo's and drove to Burnham. We danced several hours and returned to Chicago. Mr. Wenzel suggested that I and the other girl sleep in one of the rooms of the Washington hotel.

Awakes in Struggle.

"I was tired and consented. I was soon asleep. I awoke to find myself struggling with Mr. Burnham. The other girl had gone. I was bruised and beaten."

Mr. Burnham's attorney, George W. McGurn, interrogated Miss Rogers as to her reason for taking what he termed a "joy ride," if she had scruples against it.

"They said the ride would do me good," she replied.

"What were you drinking?"

"Claret—on my physician's orders."

Paid Expenses, She Says.

She testified that after the party she went to Michigan to nurse a sick friend and that Mr. Burnham paid her expenses and took her to the train.

"When I returned," she said, "I called him on the telephone at a number he had given me and found it to be a saloon. They told me he was ill with influenza. Later I called him at his home.

"'Impossible,' he said when he recognized my voice, and hung up the receiver."

The case was continued until March 6, when Attorney McGurn announced that several hours more would be required to complete cross-examination.

Scant Hope of Recovery of Bishop Emery E. Hoss

Muskogee, Okla., March 1.—The condition of Bishop Emery E. Hoss of the Methodist church south, who has been critically ill here for two weeks, is gradually growing worse. His family and physicians entertain scant hope for his recovery.

On His 80th Birthday Gets Death Sentence

Bowling Green, Ky., March 1.—The Court of Appeals today affirmed the death sentence of A. A. Garman, who was 80 years old today, who was convicted of killing A. A. Johnson, a tenant on his farm, last summer following a quarrel.

SUED FOR $20,000

Elizabeth Channon

Miss Elizabeth Channon, Red Cross ambulance driver and daughter of James H. Channon, 672 Rush street, was made a defendant in two suits for $10,000 each filed in the Circuit court yesterday by Mrs. Anna Young and her daughter, Miss Frances Young. The actions are for injuries mother and daughter allege they suffered when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a machine driven by Miss Channon.

Miss Channon and Mrs. Mary M. Springer, also a Red Cross driver, were arrested recently on the order of Municipal Judge John Stelk on the charge of violating the city parking ordinace. They were released on writs of habeas corpus.

SCOUR CITY FOR BANDIT SHOT IN $5,000 HOLDUP

Wounded in Battle with Two Men Guarding Pay Roll Money.

Police are searching the city for a wounded bandit, who with two companions held up a saloonkeeper at Twenty-second and Paulina streets at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and escaped with $5,000 after a revolver battle.

John Woods, who owns a saloon at 1800 West Twenty-second street, and William Brien, his companion, were returning from the Kaspar State bank, 1900 Blue Island avenue, with $5,000 to be used in cashing pay checks. A Packard touring car, containing three men, followed them for a block. Two men stepped out of the car and followed Woods and Brien on foot. At Twenty-second street they closed in on the victims.

One Bandit Shot.

Brien and Woods drew revolvers as one of the men seized the bag containing the money. They fired and one of the trio dropped to the sidewalk, holding his hands over his heart. His companions dragged him into the machine and sped south in Paulina stret. Brien believes he wounded the robber fatally.

The description of the three is said to tally with that of three men who held up the cooperage shop of Joseph H. Kirk, 3113 Emerald avenue, earlier in the morning. They forced Kirk and his wife to stand in a corner while they took $450 from a cash drawer and then jumped into a touring car and escaped.

Robbed While He Gives Bonds.

Four bandits, also using a large auto, escaped with $40 and several bottles of whisky from the saloon of William Dolan, 8106 Vincennes avenue, yesterday morning while Dolan was in the South Clark street court filing $2,500 bonds pending charges of accessory to a robbery and holdup Jan. 9. Dolan had left his door locked, but the burglars used a "jimmy."

Four bandits last night held up the saloon of Joseph Hellman, 3292 Archer avenue, took $50 from Hellman and Mrs. Hellman; $60 from Charles Schroeder, 3358 Archer avenue, who also happened to be in the saloon—for a drink. The highwaymen took eight quarts of whisky and two boxes of cigars.

Then they locked Hellman, his wife, and Schroeder in a room. A policeman dropped into the saloon about an hour later and released them.

FATHER CHILLY, BUT MAY WARM BOY 'VAMP' OF 14

"Bonnie Lauder," or Howard Flentke, the 14 year old boy, who thedabarraed for two days in Chicago in his sister's clothes, left yesterday for his home town—Evansville, Ind. Howard was arrested Thursday, following a secies of exciting flirtations, which ended when he slid down a bannister at the La Salle street station.

"I have nothing to say for publication," said Howard's father, August Edward Flentke, who came to Chicago yesterday to take Howard home. "We don't care for any more of this unfavorable publicity."

Howard looked a bit different than he did on Thursday. He had exchanged his sister's clothes for male garb. He appeared to have enjoyed his masquerade.

Find 12 Empty Money Bags in Stolen Auto in Oak Park

With the finding of twelve empty money bags, such as used by banks and paymasters, in an abandoned automobile at North Ridgeland and West North avenues, Oak Park, yesterday, the police believe that bandit gangs implicated in recent holdups and pay roll robberies are in hiding in the suburb. The car, which bore an Illinois license number 35929 for 1919, is owned by Otto Weisheit, 1621 Warren avenue, and was stolen from West Madison and Halsted streets Thursday evening.

Wabash Avenue and Washington Street

$20,000,000 IN BUILDING HELD UP BY FEW MEN

$7,000,000 in Property in North Michigan Ave. Is Kept Idle.

And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pith and moment,
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.
—"Hamlet."

BY EYE WITNESS.

Building projects that would aggregate $20,000,000 are being held up, land worth $7,000,000 is lying idle, and work that might be sweeping forward and giving work of the highest class to returning soldiers is being indefinitely postponed, all because a minority of property owners whose holdings lie along North Michigan avenue between the river and Chicago avenue cannot see its way to signing up with the majority an agreement fixing the destiny of that thoroughfare.

Twenty have signed; ten are holding back.

Offers to Build Hotel.

As a consequence this kind of thing happens:

Murray Wolbach, who owns two important parcels of land on the new North Michigan avenue—one at Grand avenue, and one at Erie street—took a big hotel man to his Grand avenue corner and said: "I will build you a hotel there as good as the Blackstone, and better, if it has to be better, in order to be the best in America."

The hotel man was impressed but in the course of the tentative dickering he asked, "Is all the abutting property protected against the invasion of factories?"

"Much of it is, but some of it isn't," Murray Walbach had to acknowledge.

"Then I can't be sure," said the hotel man, "that within a year or so a factory with stacks belching smoke into my finest rooms wouldn't go up next door to me."

The negotiations have hung fire ever since. They will continue to, and so will others equally important, until the thirty owners of property on the newly widened avenue get together.

Twenty Sign Ironclad Contract.

Twenty owners and firms controlling nearly 2,000 feet of the total frontage of 3,355 feet on both sides of the street between the river and Chicago avenue have signed an ironclad "protective agreement" covering nine typewritten pages, and closing every loophole of evasion and equivocation. Of that agreement this is the nub:

"WE DO MUTUALLY COVENANT AND AGREE each with all the others, each covenanting and agreeing for himself and for his heirs, executors, administrators, successors, lessees and assigns respectively, that for and during the period of twenty (20) years from and after the first day of May, A. D. 1918,

"(1) No portion of said property described in 'Exhibit A' and no portion, on any of said properties, of any building except the portion of the building below the boulevard level floor thereof shall, at any time, be used or permitted to be used for any of the following uses or purposes, to-wit: factory, machine shop, public storage warehouse, public refrigerating warehouse, livery stables, stable, barn, garage, automobile repair shop, station or store for selling, delivering or supplying oil, gasoline, kerosene or other like commodities to the public, laundry for the public, undertaker's establishment, or showroom or salesroom for the sale of (a) automobiles, (b) motor trucks, (c) motorcycles (d) boilers or (e) heavy machinery."

Also Prohibit Saloons.

Further provisions of general interest are that no pool or billiard room, and no saloon, shall be permitted on the above designated premises except in connection with a hotel, restaurant, or club, and that no hotel containing less than seventy-five rooms shall be erected on the premises covered by the agreement.

On the widening of the new North Michigan avenue and the connecting of it with downtown by a bridge, the taxpayers of Chicago will have expended nearly $12,000,000 before the work is completed. It is so far completed that the work of building and rebuilding along the entire new frontage of the widened street—it is now one of the widest in the world—could begin immediately.

Much of it would begin immediately if the projectors of the plan for making the street an upper Fifth avenue, comparable to New York's finest shopping district of that name, could get the agreement fixing and protecting the destiny of the street fully signed or even 70 per cent signed. This they expected to bring to pass by March 1. But at present what they have actually on paper are signatures covering sixty-one feet in excess of half (1,927½ feet) of the total frontage of 3,355 feet. In other words, 1,988½ feet are now protected in so far as they can be protected without the signatures of the owners of the remaining 1,866½ feet.

$7,000,000 in Land Idle.

Meanwhile land conservatively valued at $7,000,000 lies vacant or earns beggarly sums from the glaring billboards which disfigure the neighborhood for blocks around.

It is calculated that today this North Michigan avenue frontage is a financial joke of the following grim character:

Forty-five per cent of it is earning from 1 to 2½ per cent.

Five per cent of it is earning 3 per cent.

And 50 per cent of it is earning nothing at all.

Some real estate appraisers go further and declare that, in the sense of a commensurate return, nearly 80 per cent of this frontage is waste.

Property Owners Who Signed.

Following are the property owners, together with their holdings, who have caught the vision of the street's possibilities and signed the "protective agreement":

Have Other Possible Pledges.

In addition to these actual signatures, the committee forwarding the project has conditional pledges from owners controlling between 700 and 800 feet more. To render the agreement effective the committee feels that it must sign up 70 per cent of the total ownership.

"This is no real estate deal," say the Wolbachs, the Boweses, the Winstons, and others most active in the project, "but a public proposition. All Chicago has expended millions to open up great possibilities for North Michigan avenue, and it is not only the duty but also immensely to the interest of property owners, to whom the community has given this chance to work it into a reality. North Michigan avenue cannot be made to fit into the scheme of the superb City Plan of the Chicago Plan commission unless the property owners fix the destiny of the street and save it from the long, squalid period of transition from a one time residence street, which it will never be again, to a high class shopping, club, theater, and hotel street."

Business Men Debate Raising $100,000,000 Fund for Various Improvements to Keep Chicago on the Map

How can Chicago obtain upwards of $100,000,000 for needed public improvements?

For nearly three hours nearly forty men hunted in vain yesterday afternoon for the answer. This followed a luncheon at the Hotel La Salle and the guests included representatives of the Association of Commerce, the Chicago Plan commission, and the chairmen of nine council committees.

They are certain that the city must have more cash for lasting constructions. They had presented to them a tentative program stretching over five years and involving an estimated expenditure of $82,523,500. This came from the municipal department heads in reply to a request from Louis T. Jamme, head of the civic industrial committee of the Association of Commerce.

Some of the program indicates care in its preparation, while other parts do not. The staff of the finance committee in a summary of the departmental plans asserts in a memorandum attached that "before any part of this (consolidated) plan can be carried on the debt incurring power of the city must be increased."

Summary of Program.

The conferees did not find a way to do that. A summarization of the programs falls into the following large items:

Extension of city lighting system	$13,765,000
Improving eight streets	25,310,000
Straightening river and Calumet harbor improvements	16,000,000
Street end bulkheads	100,000
Big sewer	180,000
Playgrounds and parks	533,000
Beaches, pools, and recreation centers	5,713,000
Forestry	276,000
Central police station	1,750,000
Construction of bridges	6,000,000
New fire houses	1,250,000
New bridewell buildings	790,000
Contagious disease hospital	1,000,000
Public comfort stations	500,000
Waste disposal plants and equipment	3,362,500
Total corporate	$77,523,500
Western avenue pumping station and tunnel	5,000,000
Total corporate and water	$82,523,500

It is estimated these improvements will add $1,023,000 a year to the operating expense of the city.

Street Lighting Plans.

The program for new street lights provides a construction period of five years. The expenditures per year, together with the number of lights to be added, follow:

	Lights.	Cost.
1919	11,700	$2,000,000
1920	23,300	4,000,000
1921	17,600	3,000,000
1922	17,400	3,040,000
1923	10,425	1,725,000
Totals	80,425	$13,765,000

During the first three years of the program the scheme contemplates the replacement of all gas and gasoline lamps in the city and the last two years are for the extension of the electric lamps. When the total are in operation it is represented the operation expense will be increased $304,000 annually.

The item of $25,310,000 for improving streets covers the seven streets recommended by the Chicago Plan commission. The detailed estimate cost of each has been printed in THE TRIBUNE. To these the plan now is to add $1,240,000 as viaduct cost to the city in the Twelfth street widening, and also a supplemental assessment on Michigan avenue of $2,000,000.

In addition to straightening of the south branch of the Chicago river about which the public generally is informed, it is also proposed to straighten the north branch "in the vicinity of the crossing of Clybourn avenue and the St. Paul railway." Then the development of the Calumet river and lake, as per ordinance of June 25, 1917, is another water project. The three together are "conservatively estimated" at $16,000,000.

The big sewer is a drain from the west fork of the south branch of the Chicago river to the drainage canal. This will cost $180,000, but will also necessitate the construction of some new bridges and will eliminate others.

The bridge program of $6,000,000 contemplates the following amounts for the spans designated:

Clark street	$900,000
Crawford avenue	500,000
La Salle street	900,000
One Hundred and Sixth street	900,000
Polk street	950,000
Adams street	900,000
Van Buren street	950,000

These totals are in addition to the two bond issues which have been approved by the electorate. It is claimed that the increase in prices makes the $6,000,000 necessary, and that estimate is based upon present costs.

Bridewell Improvements.

The proposed $790,000 for the house of correction provides for two new cell houses, a new heating and power plant, improvements on the bridewell farm costing $200,000, and $90,000 devoted to other smaller improvements.

The contagious disease hospital wants a new wing for patients and a nurses' home, totaling together $1,000,000.

The $1,250,000 for the fire department is predicated on the plan of replacing five stations each year for the five year period.

The waste disposal program sets aside $1,300,000 to buy clay holes for dumps, $1,200,000 to purchase 300 trucks at $4,000 each, $105,000 for fifteen auto flushers, $280,000 for eight garages, $100,000 for loading station on Goose island, $75,000 extra for incinerator at same place, $100,000 for new loading station at Oakley avenue and the river, $100,000 for fleet of scows, and $102,500 for other smaller improvements.

Legislation Necessary.

Both Mr. Jamme and Charles H. Wacker of the Plan Commission have been conferring with lawyers with a view of having them devise a scheme for getting the necessary money. Legislation is necessary to increase the bonding power of the city. Possibly a constitutional change is required.

Simon O'Donnell Named on Building Committee

Simon O'Donnell, head of the Building Trade council, has been appointed to represent labor on the committee of twenty-five organized to promote building activity, Joseph K. Brittain, chairman, announced yesterday. A meeting of the committee will be called for this week, he said.

RAIL EMPLOYE INJURED.

Christ Larbig, 68 years old, 5132 South Aberdeen street, a car inspector for the Pennsylvania railroad, was struck by a switch engine at Bunker street and the Pennsylvania railroad tracks yesterday, and suffered the loss of his left hand, fracture of his left leg in two places, and internal injuries.

Church Auxiliary Will Run Store Through Lent

It will open tomorrow at 1901 Central street, Evanston, under the auspices of the Woman's auxiliary of St. Matthew's church. It will be operated throughout Lent and the proceeds will be added to the church fund.

Mrs. J. N. Eisenlord is chairman of the committee in charge. The other members are: Mrs. Donald H Mann, Mrs. John A. Wheeler, Mrs. Earl Gibson, Mrs. Curtis M. Hinman, Mrs. F. A. Leonard Mrs. W N Buchanan, and Mrs. Thomas K. Carpenter.

Plan Creation of Jobs for Two Million in Year

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Creation of 2,000,000 extra jobs during the coming year will be the aim of the governors and mayors' conference which opens at the White House on Monday with an address by President Wilson. This estimate by the labor department showed that with the rapid demobilization of soldiers this number of men will be out of work unless employment is forthcoming.

STEAMER FREED FROM ICE.

Halifax, March 1.—The steamer Graciana of the Furness line, working itself clear from the ice, which hemmed it in off Cape Race, arrived at St. Johns, N. F., today.

ST. LOUIS LOOKS TO RIVERS TO AID ITS AMBITIONS

Believes Water Routes Can Help It Become Greater City.

Article No. 2.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

St. Louis appears to see her opportunity. Chicago has not fully awakened. That is the present—just after the world war.

But after the civil war, St. Louis admits that it slept, while Chicago saw its chance to push ahead, and did. Now the river town wants to regain its old position, and its citizens have prevailed upon Winston Churchill to help his old town grasp its opportunities, the construction of $93,972,000 worth of public improvements.

Describes St. Louis Plan.

The plan commission tells frankly of St. Louis' ambition. It says:

"Previous to the civil war, St. Louis was the metropolis of the central west. It was the leading railroad center as well as the largest city in point of population and manufactures west of the Allegheny mountains. Being on the boundary line between north and south, the four years of comparative inactivity from 1861-65 were sufficient to divert the channels of industry and traffic elsewhere and Chicago assumed a lead which St. Louis has never since been able to overcome."

Now St. Louis is going after that lead. Its plan commission says that rivers of Europe are used as extensively as railroads and for obvious reasons America must do likewise now. It adds:

"In this respect probably no city has greater opportunities than St. Louis, particularly if that opportunity is seized in time."

Close to Production Centers.

On industry and transportation the report adds:

"St. Louis being nearer perhaps than other large cities to many of the great production centers of raw material of the country, should, if wisely directed, become an even greater center of manufacturing and of industry. In the manufacture of cotton and woolen goods, tobacco, agricultural implements and as a grain and live stock market, St. Louis has hardly begun to attain the growth its geographical position warrants.

"St. Louis now possesses a railroad terminal system reputed to be the best in the United States, if not in the world. With the completion of the municipal railroad terminal system and additional river terminals there will be unlimited opportunity for industrial development."

Cites Los Angeles.

Many Chicagoans will say that St. Louis is having an idle dream but more from the plan commission shows the extent of its ambition. In 1880 St. Louis had a population of 350,518 and Los Angeles had only 11,183. Today the latter city has more than 500,000 inhabitants and it a rival of St. Louis. The latter's plan commission explains in part as follows:

"A characteristic example of what St. Louis should do is furnished by Los Angeles, which in anticipation of the completion of the Panama canal and probable traffic resulting therefrom a plan for the improvement of San Pedro harbor totaling $40,000,000, of which between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 has now been spent.

"Various other illustrations could be given of how New York City's municipally owned waterfront properties are a lucrative source of annual income, and of recent expenditures in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Boston."

Philadelphia Votes $114,000,000.

Not one thing in Chicago is pointed out by the St. Louis plan commission as worthy of being followed, but it says that even "Philadelphia recently voted an issue of $114,000,000 in bonds for public works, which is indicative of what St. Louis must do if she would keep pace with other large cities."

One of the high lights in Winston Churchill's boost for St. Louis, printed by the city, read:

"The war has revealed to us, as nothing else could have done, the tremendous resources of our American cities. It has proved that we not only have vast sums of money to spend and lend, but that we are willing to spend and lend them for a purpose appealing to hearts and minds. If the war had gone on, we should have continued our giving and lending on an even greater scale than heretofore.

Carying Out Soldiers' Purposes.

"The people of St. Louis are now called upon to give and lend for the consummation and conservation of that for which their soldiers have fought and died, the building up of a community which, in its regard for the welfare, contentment and true happiness of all, will be a leader among communities.

"Sometimes the ties of early years, as well as the knowledge and meaning of those ties, grow stronger with the passing of time. It has been so in my case. And this being so, I cannot doubt the answer which St. Louis will make to the call of American reconstruction."

This Little Family Faces Want Because a Friend of Its Head Didn't Think a Gun Was Loaded.

DIDN'T BELIEVE GUN WAS LOADED; KILLS HIS FRIEND

"Murder" Proves Accident; Family of Victim Facing Want.

Frank Kosek, 32 years old, of 1034 West Fifteenth street was shot and killed yesterday in the factory of Altman Brothers, candy manufacturers, 1037 West Twelfth street, where he was employed.

Mrs. Frank Kosek, his widow, and his two children, Eleanore, 3, and Robert, 2 years old, are destitute at their home. The United Charities of Chicago, through their West Side Mary Crane nursery, have promised to send aid to them, as Mrs. Kosek has no money and very little food.

Joseph Silverman, 17 years old, of 731 West Fourteenth place, is locked up at the Maxwell street police station with Herman Kravitz, 22 years old, 1132 West Fourteenth street, and Arnold Matanky, 20 years old, 1530 West Thirteenth street, all being held as witnesses for the coroner's inquest.

An early report that Kosek was shot in the mouth caused the police to believe he was murdered. Later examination showed he was shot in the back.

Lieut. William Friel of the Maxwell street police station said last night it was an accident and that Silverman admitted doing it.

Silverman, Kravitz, and Matanky all declared the shooting an accident.

Friel announced finally this version of it: Kosek had a revolver and had been showing it to Silverman, who also produced one. Silverman's revolver was empty, while Kosek's remained loaded. Silverman picked up what he thought was his empty revolver, when Kosek turned back to his work, and started snapping the trigger. A cartridge exploded and the bullet entered Kosek's back.

U.S. ROAD WORK TO EMPLOY 100,000 FOR 18 MONTHS

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Full coöperation and assistance of the department of agriculture in expediting resumption and progressive road building were promised state highway departments by Secretary of Agriculture Houston, at a conference of twenty-seven state highway representatives here today.

A canvass taken during the conference showed that at least a half billion dollars will be expended on roads during the next eighteen months. This work then, it is estimated, could furnish employment for over 100,000 former soldiers and sailors.

NATION FINDS JOBS FOR MOST OF ITS FIGHTERS

More than 75 per cent of returning soldiers and sailors, who need assistance in finding employment, find jobs through the United States employment service, according to a report received today by Mark L. Crawford, federal director.

According to Mr. Crawford, of the average of 60,000 men discharged weekly from the army, 30 per cent, or 18,000, must find new jobs, and 20 per cent, or 12,000 men, are placed in employment each week through the government employment exchanges.

"These figures are based only upon placements we have been able to verify," declared Mr. Crawford. "It is estimated that at least 5 per cent of the men find jobs through the service which are not recorded because placement cards are not mailed back or for other reasons.

"There is a much higher percentage of men needing new jobs among soldiers from industrial centers than from the agricultural districts."

PLUNKETT SAYS KEEP IRELAND AS PART OF BRITAIN

Tells Irish Fellowship Club He Favors Home Rule; Opposes Republic.

Home rule within the British empire and not complete separation for Ireland was advocated by Sir Horace Plunkett yesterday at the Irish Fellowship club luncheon at the Hotel Sherman.

It was one of the largest assemblages ever gathered at this club. Even the Sinn Feiners were present in large numbers, although they knew the chairman of the famous Irish convention of 1917-18 disagrees with them on the immediate action to be taken for Irish freedom.

Both factions applauded alternately as he opposed separation and then said a kind word for the Sinn Feiners.

He said a majority of the men associated with him in the agricultural association which has done so much for Ireland in the last ten years were Sinn Feiners.

Like the Irish Convention.

The audience applauded, or the Sinn Feiners did.

"I am glad I have said something with which you agree," said Sir Horace, smiling.

They applauded again.

"But I must add," he went on, "that I do not agree at all with the political ideas of my Sinn Fein associates."

This time the home rulers, or Constitutional Nationalists, applauded.

He got along with the meeting about as he did in the Irish convention—the one man everybody could disagree with and yet respect.

"Will Have to Ask Germany."

Once, after he had said that complete separation was impracticable at this time, a Sinn Feiner interrupted to ask:

"What did we fight the war for?"

Somebody shouted:

"Put him out."

Sir Horace smiled and answered:

"He desires to know what we fought the war for. You will have to ask Germany that question."

Then the Home Rulers applauded.

Ulster Put to One Side.

But it was all good natured, and he was listened to very closely as he told of the difficulties they encountered in the convention. He said Ulster was put to one side early in the convention.

"Not because the delegates representing Ulster could not have agreed with us on a genuine Irish policy," he said, "but because the interests back of these delegates would not permit them to act as they may have desired."

Then he told how they tried to iron out the differences over customs and said that the convention suffered a fatal blow when Dr. Kelly, one of the Catholic bishops, was taken suddenly ill and was unable to resume his work in the convention.

"Strange as it may seem," continued Sir Horace, himself a Protestant, "I consider Dr. Kelly, though a distinguished churchman, the ablest mind on finances, and international finances particularly, we have in the British empire."

Blames Religious Differences.

Then everybody warmed up to the man who was so fair, as they put it.

Then he declared that if they could get rid of religious differences entirely in Ireland and Ulster could be made to see that Ireland will not be right until she has home rule, peace would come to the land at once.

It was Plunkett's notion that if Ireland can get home rule now, within the empire, an Irish parliament could proceed to establish the fundamental things and then would gradually get all they thought they were entitled to.

Against Independent Republic.

After the meeting he said:

"I don't think we can get everything as a starter. But if we could get home rule now there would be no power in the world that would ever dare take it away from us again.

"I am aware that a majority of Irish people and Irish sympathizers throughout the world are in favor of making Ireland an independent republic. I have to say that I wholly disagree with such a po[illegible]cy."

Barney Mullaney nodded his approval.

Michael Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, frowned.

"We may live to see the end of wars," Sir Horace said, "and see the world in such a state that no armament is needed. We expect that just as we do the millennium. But until that comes, when that little problem of the league of nations is settled in Paris, and not only settled, but has been tested, no country can deal with problems affecting itself without due regard to its strategic position. An Irish republic is not practical at the present time."

Then he pleaded that Irishmen the world over get together on the sound platform that the Irish problem should be settled by Irishmen in Ireland.

"If once there is brought together a parliament in Ireland," he said, "and the differences are thrashed out, an agreement will be reached. Destroy religious differences and the opinion of the world will be such that they will say, 'this question is one that must be settled.'"

Says Ireland Did Her Best.

He defended Ireland's part in the great war, although he said he would have liked to see her go in with every man and woman.

"When any one says that Ireland did not do her noble pa[illegible] in the war, then I arise to defend [illegible]," he said, amid heavy applause.

"I deprecate," he declared, "the attempt of any nation to use Ireland as a pawn in its own game. I resent it when it happens in England, and I resent it when it happens in America."

Sir Horace returned to Battle Creek last night, where he is undergoing treatment for his lungs. He will return east next week and expects to sail for Ireland in a fortnight.

Charles N. Wheeler of THE TRIBUNE introduced Sir Horace. In the absence of President Peter Peel of the club John P. McKinley presided.

IRISH ENVOY—AND A SINGER

Showing Two Who Are to Appear at Orchestra Hall Tomorrow Night.

CHICAGO friends of Irish freedom have planned an elaborate reception for Dr. Patrick McCartan, envoy of the Irish republic to the United States, who speaks in Orchestra hall tomorrow night.

The occasion is the Robert Emmet memorial. Dr. McCartan, who is a distinguished scholar, was interned in England early in the war. He was in the United States when he was elected to the English parliament last December. Being a Sinn Feiner he did not take his seat.

Dr. McCartan will expound the Sinn Fein doctrine and explain why Ireland, in his opinion, will take no settlement from Great Britain that does not carry with it complete independence for the Emerald Isle.

Charles N. Wheeler of THE TRIBUNE also will speak. Miss May Hildreth will sing Irish songs. Judge Kickham Scanlan will be the presiding officer.

Returned War Officer Candidate for Governor

New Orleans, La., March 1.—Col. Frank P. Stubbs of Monroe, La., today formally announced his candidacy for governor of Louisiana, to succeed Gov. Ruffin G. Pleasant. Col. house. The committee went back at 3 o'clock to be assured in person of this fact.

"The National Democratic executive committee, at its session this week, had unanimously indorsed the position of the committee and Chairman Cummins had an earnest interview with Mr. Tumulty, showing him the gravity of failing to treat the committee with proper respect. The committee on foreign relations of the house had reported a resolution sympathizing with the case of Ireland, but this was held up in the committee on rules on the ground that business was too pressing for its submission to the whole house.

Rules Committee Receives.

"The committee on rules, however, graciously received a delegation yesterday and, after earnest argument, decided to report out the resolution of the foreign affairs committee.

"For the last four days there has been an amazing amount of sentiment in certain quarters, under which it is now clear that whatever may be actually done, this much is certain: There is a salutary realization at last that millions of Americans, both of Irish blood and of every blood that loves justice, do not intend that Ireland shall be the only small nation in Europe condemned to live under foreign odious oppressive rule.

"The committee from the Irish race convention had finally resolved if, in the end, they were not received at the White House they would present a prepared letter to the president signed by every member.

Statement for President.

The letter that was to have been sent the president follows:

"During the week we have sought through the usual formal channels of communication to arrange with you an interview to present the resolutions adopted by the Irish race convention held at Philadelphia on Feb. 22 and 23.

"That convention was composed of 5,132 delegates representing all sections of the United States, and spoke not only for your fellow Americans of Irish birth or lineage, but also, we are convinced, for many other millions of Americans who believe as we do that the right of self-determination ought to be granted to Ireland as well as to Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Armenia, and Poland, in the recognition of whose independence we cordially rejoice.

Asks Efforts for Ireland.

"We invite your earnest consideration of these resolutions and in view of your declaration that all peoples are entitled to determine for themselves the form of government under which they shall live and that our country entered the war in reliance upon and convinced of the truth of these declarations, we ask you to secure for Ireland the recognition which you have won for the other smaller nationalities.

"We firmly believe there can be no just or permanent peace for the world until the blessings of liberty are secured to Ireland, this oldest among all the hitherto submerged nations.

"JOHN W. GOFF, Chairman,
"New York."

Among the other signers were: The Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, Washington, D. C.; E. F. Dunne, Illinois; Daniel F. Cohalan, New York; F. Henry, Philadelphia; the Rev. James Nottan Mythen, Norfolk, Va.; Frank P. Walsh, Missouri; Richard W. Wolfe, Chicago; Patrick J. Healy, Washington, D. C.; Thomas J. Breslin, New Jersey, and John F. Fenlon, Washington, D. C.

ESCAPE OF DE VALERA.

PARIS, March 1.—Provisional Irish parliament members planned and engineered the escape of Prof. Edward de Valera, Sinn Fein leader, from the jail at Lincoln, England, it was revealed today.

Sean O'Kelley, representative of the Irish republic at the peace conference, made this public in relating the details of De Valera's flight.

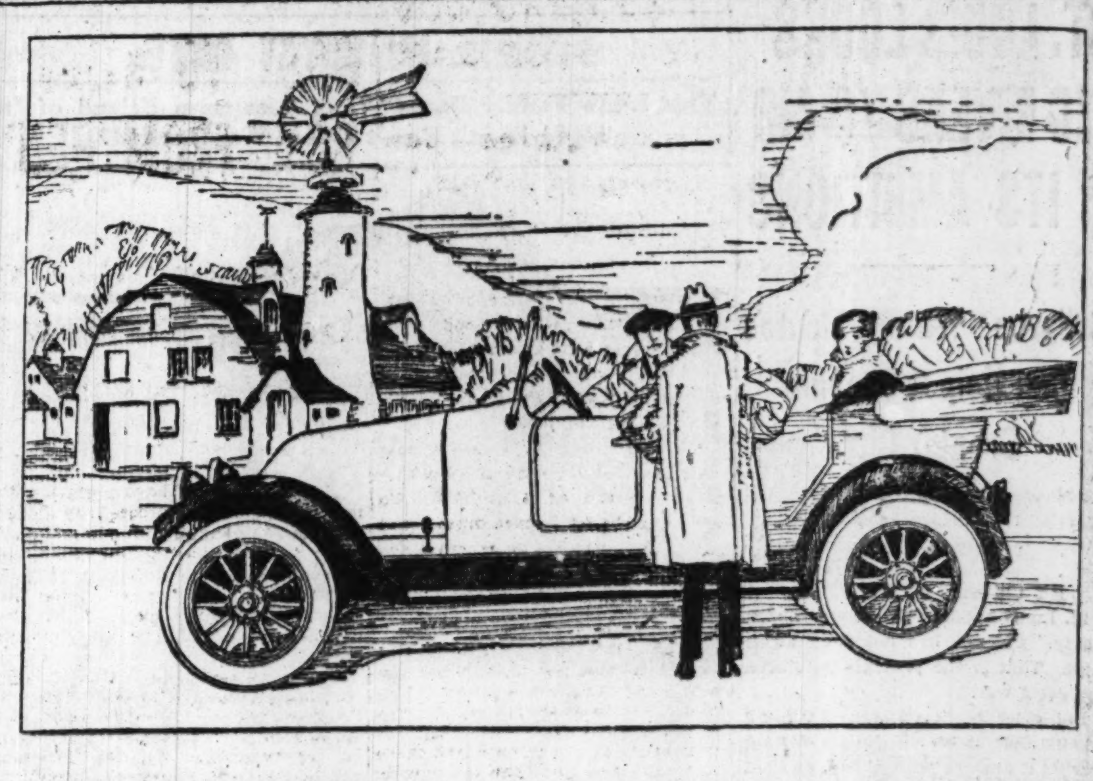
Reveals Plan in Song.

The Irish parliament appointed a committee to arrange the jail delivery, O'Kelley said. A Sinn Feiner, working in a garden near the prison, attracted De Valera's attention and revealed the plans for his escape in a Gaelic song. The wardens, ignorant of the language and being accustomed to the Irish, suspected nothing. The singer asked the prisoner to obtain an impression of the rear exit.

Two of the handsomest university co-eds were brought from Dublin and disguised as flower girls. De Valera was warned in a code note that Feb. 3 had been set for the date of his escape. On that day the co-ed flower girls started a flirtation with the guards and enticed them from the rear gate. Two men cut a path through the barbed wire barrier outside the wall.

Walks Calmly Out.

De Valera, walking through the gate, which had been opened by the false key, calmly entered a waiting auto and was driven away. Pursuit was immediately organized by the wardens, who were led astray by four automobiles, which acted as decoys, each taking a different road.



THE FRANKLIN CAR

YOU CHOOSE THE ROAD FOR A FRANKLIN DEMONSTRATION

The chances are that you know every road in this vicinity. You know which are the good ones—and which are the bad ones. You probably have in mind right now, one road that is a hard test for the riding qualities of any automobile.

Lead us to that road. In demonstrating the Franklin Car we depart from the usual practice of selecting a smooth, level road—in fact, the worse it is, the more convincing will be our demonstration.

Only in this way can we actually show that Franklin Scientific Light Weight and Flexible Construction do mean a smooth-riding, road-holding, easily handled car.

Then, too, such a demonstration brings a fuller appreciation of Franklin economy—the consistent, publicly known delivery of 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—instead of the usual 10.

10,000 miles to the set of tires—instead of the usual 5,000.

Let us drive you over any road you choose, and if you have ever gone over it in another car you will be quick to notice the difference.

mbined opposition to the election Charles E. Chadsey as permanent perintendent of Chicago schools ed to materialize yesterday. No etings of public school organiza- s were called, as far as could be rned from officers of the associa- s. Opposition board members took additional steps to combat the election promised at Wednesday's board eting. Advocates of the citizens' mmission recommendations ex- sed certainty that Mr. Chadsey be placed at the head of the system by board action.

I have not anticipated at action I shall take if named on e recommendation of the superin- ndent of schools for any position. I preciate the consideration shown me the commission, and if I should un- rtake new duties in the system, it is edless to say, it would be in a spirit absolute loyalty to the school sys- m and to its administrative head."

Officers of both the Principals' club d the Chicago Teachers' federation ated positively that neither school dy will take a hand in the election ttle nor, as organizations, throw sup- t to either Mr. Chadsey or Mr. Mor- nson.

Individual Action Only.

"We have called no special meetings a discussion of the citizens' com- ssion recommendations, nor do we tend to take any steps as a club," id President Dodge of the Principals' ub. "The question of electing a su- perintendent of schools is purely the nction of the board of education. dividual principals are showing their gard for Mr. Mortenson by backing m as their candidate for the place. That is all."

An overflow attendance is expected at the board meeting set for Wednesday afternoon at 3 p. m. It is expected that all routine matters will be shelved Wednesday to allow the thrashing out of the biggest question put up to the present board since it returned to power.

Praise for Chadsey.

High praise for Mr. Chadsey as a public school executive came yesterday from Samuel C. Mumford, member of the Detroit board of education, who declared the Detroit candidate will accept the Chicago position if elected.

"Wishing to nominate Acting Superintendent Mortenson for the position," the Detroit trustee said, "Chicago opponents of Mr. Chadsey are charging that he has kept himself before the public to force high salary from the Denver and Detroit boards. All such talk is utterly false. He came to Detroit from Denver at the same salary he was receiving, $6,000, because he thought there was a broader field in Detroit. He was raised to $9,000 after three years here, and has been sought by other cities at a greater salary. Up to the present time he has declined all such offers.

"Now, of course, he is going to a still greater field. Chicago needs him more than Detroit, and the Detroit board will make no effort to keep him. He did fine things for Denver in his ten years of service there. He has done fine things for Detroit in his seven years in this city, and he will certainly do equally fine things in Chicago."

Jury Allows $30,000 Damages for Lost Legs

Thirty thousand dollars' damages were awarded Michael Filicetti, 910 South Loomis street, by a jury before Judge Hugo Pam in the Superior court yesterday. Filicetti was represented by Attorney V. G. Gallagher.

MAY CUT BUDGET TO $23,000,000 FOR "STOP GAP"

Aldermen Agree Upon Emergency Plan for Funds.

Temporary relief for the city's corporate fund may be provided in a plan recommended yesterday by the city council committee on finance, which is struggling with the city's annual appropriation bill.

The appropriatioin bill, as it now stands, provides for expenditures this year of upward of $32,000,000. To finance this the legislature must grant the city the authority to increase the corporate fund's shares of the taxes from $1.10 per $100 of assessed valuation to $2.35 per $100.

Until this is done the city council cannot pass the annual tax levy ordinance, as it does not know what tax rate the legislature will allow. The city can't get sufficient money for current expenses without the issuance of tax anticipation warrants, and these cannot be issued until the tax rate is known.

Agree on Program.

The committee yesterday agreed on this program:

The $32,000,000 budget will be cut to $23,000,000, it being likely that the city can finance the latter on the estimated revenue of $19,000,000 and some unexpected revenue.

Ask the legislature to act immediately on taking off the March 31 limitation for the passage of the budget. If given theree months' leeway on this, the budget can be increased to take in whatever added revenue is given by the legislature through an increased tax rate.

Ask the legislature immediately to give the municipality power to issue certificates of indebtedness in lieu of tax anticipation warrants. This would allow the city to raise money for current needs while waiting for the legislature to act on the tax increase matter.

"The Only Way."

"This is our only way to have money to meet pay rolls and other needs," said Ald. A. A. McCormick. "We ought to get in touch with Gov. Lowden and the legislative leaders at once and see if the March 31 limitation will be taken off for this year."

The reductions to be made in the $32,000,000 budget will be restored when the legislature raises the tax rate, if it does.

Frank S. Righeimer, acting corporation counsel, told the committee that there was no legal bar to the council passing a budget in excess of the revenue. Mr. Righeimer said it was a hazardous undertaking but that he believed no legal obstacle stood in the way. The committee explained that this was against an established policy.

'DICK KING,' NOTED ATHLETE, WEDS AT CROWN POINT

Richard F. C. King, Harvard football star in 1915, and Miss Vera I. Ketrick, both giving Chicago as their address, were married yesterday afternoon by Judge Kemp at Crown Point.

"Dick" King broke into prominence at Harvard by his persistence in athletics. Time after time he was put aside by the coaches as an impossibility, finally to be taken in charge by Capt. Charley Brickley. The next year he made the team and leaped into fame in the annual Princeton game, which he is credited with having won for the Crimson.

King's education is said to have been as hard to obtain as his place on the team, as he was married and had two children at that time, and worked his way through school. He graduated in 1916 from the engineering school.

Miss Ketrick told the license clerk she had been divorced in October, 1911, and again in January, 1913. King said he obtained his divorce on May 13, 1918.

The first robin—wait a minute, now—the first robin of spring to be seen at the Sixty-eighth street water crib was reported yesterday by Marke Cooke, tender of the crib. CREDIT MAN

A large financial institution is looking for a high grade, thoroughly experienced credit man. We want a man who has already made good and is a success on his present job. At the same time we do not want a man who feels he has completely mastered the science of credits. Our applicant must like study and have the type of mind which will allow him readily to adjust himself to materially different credit problems from those to which he has been accustomed. Prefer a man between the ages of 25 and 35, now holding position of credit manager; a good letter writer and hard worker. The position will pay well to start and offers unusual opportunities for the future. Applications, typewritten preferred, should give in detail education, age, experience, present and previous employers. Also give other particulars about yourself to assist us in judging your qualifications. Replies will be held in confidence.

DROPS MURDER CASE TO KEEP BOYS FROM 'PEN'

Judge Facing Problem of Law Decides on Mercy; Scores Parents.

The cases of three boys charged with murder were nolle prossed by Judge Marcus Kavanagh in the Circuit court yesterday when the court had the problem presented to him of sending the boys to the penitentiary or dismissing the cases against them and turning them over to the Juvenile court.

The boys were Joseph Hesl, 9 years old; Joseph Bavlsik, 10 years old; and Stephen Duray, 10 years old. The three boys were indicted for the murder of Wadislaw Wodikes, 10 years old, in a barn in Fourteenth street on Jan. 9. The Wodikes boy was believed to have been beaten to death by the other boys with a beer bottle as he lay sleeping in the building.

Judge Kavanagh was clearly perplexed when the case was called to trial. He sent for Judge Victor Arnold of the Juvenile court and A. C. Berry, a district superintendent of schools of New York, who is regarded as an expert in boy training.

To Go to a Boys' Home.

After a conference between the men and Assistant State's Attorney Walter Stanton, it was agreed that the cases would be dismissed and the boys turned over to the Juvenile court, where they will be sent to some institution until they are 21 years old.

Mr. Stanton said that all the state desired was justice and that he would accept any ruling the court made without protest.

The Hasl boy's father and stepmother were present. Judge Kavanagh criticized them severely for their treatment of the child.

"Treated Like Wild Animal."

"You have treated him like a wild animal," said the judge. "You are in a large measure responsible for his condition at the present time."

Judge Kavanagh told Mr. Stanton that when the new grand jury convenes on Monday he will order the case laid before the jury with a view of action against the parents of the boy for contributing to his delinquency.

INQUIRY INTO PUPIL'S DEATH

Granite City, Ill., March 1.—An investigation into the death of Liela Elmore, 9 years old, 1814 State street, was ordered today by Coroner Joseph Krill of Madison county, following statements made to him by the child's parents that she was punished at school by her teacher nine days prior to her death.

The attending physician, Dr. W. W. Haven of Granite City, said a superficial examination showed her death probably resulted from an injury to her spine.

The girl told her parents she was accused of stealing some money. When she refused to admit any knowledge of the theft, her parents said, she told them a teacher punished her, then pushed her into a chair and it broke, causing her to fall to the floor.

Mrs. M. Arnsparger, principal of the school, and Miss Martha Cowan, teacher of the second grade, both denied they had punished the girl severely.

CHICAGO WOMEN HELP SOLDIERS IN THE RIVIERA

NICE, Feb. 18.—[By mail.]—A group of Chicago women are helping to make the casinos in the leave centers of the French Riviera the most popular and comfortable club for the soldier. These casinos are the centers of activity for the 4,000 American doughboys constantly on leave in the Riviera.

Miss Rita Cone, 5708 Kimbark avenue, is among the workers at the Jetty casino at Nice, which has been taken over by the Y. M. C. A. and is operated as a club. Miss Janet Dickson, 1060 Hollywood avenue, and Miss Frances Thompson of Hubbard Woods, Ill., are at Cannes, twenty-five miles west of Nice, where the magnicent municipal casino is the Red Triangle hut. At Menton, on the Italian border, twenty-five miles east of Nice, Miss Mabel Carlson, 1403 Pratt boulevard, Chicago, and Miss Ruth Calista Stephens, 717 Downer place, Aurora, are helping to make the third of the Riviera leave centers a place of joy for the soldier. Here the new municipal casino is in operation.

These women spend long hours in the service of the soldier. They are at the canteen counters at 9 in the morning and until noon are busily engaged in ministering to the perpetual appetite of the young American. The canteens are open again from 2 in the afternoon until close to supper and from 8 in the evening until 11.

Are You a Butcher, Baker, Florist, Plumber, Coal Dealer, Contractor or What Not? If You Deliver or Haul—If You Do Business in the City or in the Country, FACTS Prove That

MOTOR TRUCKS Save You Money, Labor and Time

EVERYWHERE motor trucks are supplanting horse-drawn vehicles. Between cities and towns — between city and country, over the city's streets, motor trucks speed laden with raw materials, manufactured goods and foodstuffs. Express and trucking companies, department stores, industries of all kinds, are equipping themselves with motor trucks and relegating the horse to the background.

And no wonder. Motor trucks reduce delivery costs—speed up business—increase the merchant's territory and give him added prestige in the eyes of his customers. Fine roads and streets (3,000 miles in Chicago) offer every advantage for quick and easy movement. Motor trucks are constantly being improved, while the horse today is no more efficient than he was 3,000 years ago.

10,000 Horses Less in Chicago Than in 1917

No stronger argument in support of the motor truck's superiority can be found than in the fact that in Chicago alone motor trucks replaced 10,000 horses in the year ending September, 1918; 1,879 motor trucks were added to the city's total in that same period—an increase of 14½% in trucks, a decrease of 18% in horses. This remarkable increase was scattered among small tradesmen, department stores and industries of all kinds. Further, the wholesale value of trucks manufactured in 1918 was $434,168,982, and only 27% of this total went for war work—surely a great demand for motor trucks.

Over Six Hundred Kinds of Businesses Use Motor Trucks

The value of motor trucks is not confined to a few favored businesses. Motor trucks have demonstrated their worth in hundreds of different kinds. One maker numbers among his customers over four hundred different kinds of businesses—another over six hundred. Bricks or baby-buggies, soup or soap, farm products or raw hides—it makes no difference to the motor truck. A few of the industries in which motor trucks have made a name are as follows:

Agricultural Implement Dealers, Baggage and Express Companies, Brass Foundries, Butter and Egg Dealers, Bakers, Butchers, Carpenters, Castings, Fashion Shops, Tea and Coffee Dealers, Commission Merchants, Harness Makers, Ice Cream Dealers, Lumber Dealers, Leather Makers, Laundries, Mill Work, Masons, Sewing Machines, Trunks and Bags, Coal Dealers, Contracters, Candy Manufacturers, Carpet and Rug Cleaners, Department Stores, Dyeing and Cleaning, Farmers, Florists, Furniture Stores, Groceries, General Stores, Newspaper Delivery, Music Stores, Printers, Publishers, Piano Houses, Plumbers, Stock Farms, Undertakers, Wholesale Produce.

There is no reason why your delivering and hauling should not be in this list. If your business is so small that it can give work for one truck only or if it is sufficient to require a fleet of trucks you can't afford to overlook the benefits offered by motor trucks. The business without a motor truck is in the same class as the mansion using candles for its lighting.

Facts Prove That Motor Trucks Reduce Delivery Costs

In a recent Chicago investigation 66 out of 78 motor truck users were outspoken in favor of the motor truck over horse trucks because of reduced operating costs and better service. Gleaning from their statements, we find that the average horse truck covers 15 miles daily, while a 3½-ton truck will cover 60 miles. A 5-ton truck at an increased expense of less than $100 over a two-horse truck will do 80% more work. The motor truck is 50 to 60% cheaper than the horse. In the Engineering Department of the City of Chicago a 1½-ton gas truck is now doing the work formerly done by two two-horse trucks. A well-known New York engineer has found that horse-drawn vehicles cost 200% on their initial payment each year, while motor trucks cost only 75% on their initial payment. The conclusion arrived at by hundreds of motor truck users in Chicago and vicinity is unequivocally in favor of the motor truck whether they use one truck or whole fleets.

On the farm the expense of the horse is now prohibitive for hauling purposes. Remember, it takes five acres of land to raise feed and bedding for every horse a farmer owns. Five human beings can live on this same amount of land. A motor truck replacing two teams releases 20 acres for the raising of food for human consumption and provides insurance against the labor shortage. One man does the work of several.

There Are Stewart MOTOR TRUCKS For Every Business

Facts Prove Motor Trucks Speed Up Deliveries

Speed is a prime essential in today's delivery service. Speed gets goods to you. Speed takes your goods to the consumer. Added speed on every delivery increases your delivery possibilities. A light delivery truck making 60 miles a day at less expense than a horse-drawn truck making 15 miles a day obviously serves more customers, delivers more goods and returns more profits to you.

The motor truck saves time for the farmer. He can get his breakfast at home, get to market and back again in time for his dinner, an impossible feat with horses. Motor trucks deliver promptly the products of the farm to the market, reducing spoilage and waste to the minimum.

Facts Prove Motor Trucks Increase Range of Deliveries

With a motor truck you can increase the area in which you do business. You can go farther distances to make your deliveries—you can solicit more business, new customers. You can make yourself independent of your immediate neighborhood, a particularly important asset when neighborhoods change as they frequently do in Chicago. By the use of motor trucks you increase your prestige with your trade.

Convinced that motor trucks are essential to the greater success of your business, the next step is to decide on the right make—the right truck adapted to the peculiarities of your business.

There is a Stewart Truck for the largest and smallest user. There is a Stewart Truck for your business, and you will find that it costs less to buy, less to run and less to maintain than other trucks of equal capacity. Over 200 businesses in 24 different countries now use Stewarts—some users owning as high as 50.

"In Five Years No Stewart Has Worn Out"

Remember that, please. Remember, too, please, that the Stewart Truck has been reduced to the utmost simplicity. It is made for service and not for "tinkering" with. It has 600 to 700 fewer parts. It has fewer grease cups and lubricating points—and automatic lubrication relieves you of a great deal of detail attention.

"90% of Power Applied to Rear Wheels"

That's where the power is needed and most wanted. Starting and stopping shocks are transferred to the springs instead of the tires, cutting down tire and gasoline bills and increasing the life of the car.

$200 to $300 Saved

Stewart Trucks cost from $200 to $300 less than other trucks of similar capacity and continue costing less throughout their career, because they are so simple, so foolproof, so matter-of-fact, 24-hour-a-day-ready for service that they invite no tampering and keep out of the repair shop. They are "Quality" cars through and through and prove it in the work they have done and will do.

"You Need a Stewart Motor Truck"

You need a truck that will "deliver the goods" at a minimum of expense and "wear and tear." You can't afford to experiment. You don't need to experiment, because you can find out easily what the Stewart Truck does from what it has done—we have told you that you can buy it for less money and run it for less money and a longer time than other trucks—now let us show you our truck that will solve your delivery problems.

Urbana, Ill., March 1.—[Special.]—University of Chicago's basketball team continues its unbroken string of victories tonight with a win over Illinois, 17 to 15. Williams, lanky forward of the Maroons, tossed the winning basket in the last minutes of the game.

A few minutes before Williams had been knocked to the floor and was thought to be laid out, but he certainly recuperated with a vengeance.

Contest Nip and Tuck.

The game was fast and furious from start to finish. At no time was there more than 2 points difference between the two teams. Hinkle, Chicago's right guard, scintillated with several baskets from the center of the floor. It was the largest basketball crowd here for several years. Lineup:

Michigan, 24; Purple, 22

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 1.—[Special.]—Michigan secured revenge tonight in the last conference game on its home court this season by defeating Northwestern, 24 to 22. The score at half time stood 15 to 13 in favor of Northwestern.

Williams, Michigan's right guard, played all over the court in the first half, which allowed Wilcox four baskets. Marquardt, Northwestern captain, came heralded as the Purple's greatest player, but Wilcox stepped into his shoes tonight.

Wolverines Stage Fine Rally.

Northwestern started the second half piling up five additional points to Michigan's four. Seven minutes before the close of the game Michigan took a spurt, making seven points to Northwestern's two.

Hewlett and Karpus did all that was expected of them, while McClintock held his opponent, allowing him hardly a play. The four points that Eielsen make were miracle plays. Lineup:

MICHIGAN BEATS NOTRE DAME ON TRACK, 63 TO 23

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 1.—[Special.]—Michigan put it all over Notre Dame in the dual track meet this afternoon: Score: 63 to 23.

Michigan's highest individual point winner was Johnson, with 20 points to his credit, while Gilfillan of Notre Dame came second with 11 points. Johnson tied his record of 1917 for the 60 yard high hurdles at :08 1-5. At the last minute the 60 yard low hurdles was changed to 65 yards. In 1917 Johnson did 65 in :07 3-5.

Gilfillan and Hoar of Notre Dame entered most of the events, and made between them 16 points. Gilfillan's knee did not appear to bother him much. Summaries:

Shotput—Won by Gilfillan, Notre Dame; Smith, M., second; Walls, M., third. Distance, 40 feet ½ inch.

Mile run—Won by Sedgwick, Mich.; Sweeney, N. D., second; Bouma, M., third. Time, 4:33 1-5.

New Jersey Golfers Win Final at St. Augustine

St. Augustine, Fla., March 1.—[Special.]—Final in the first division of the third annual spring tournament at the St. Augustine links was won by William Bayne, East Orange, N. J., over Albert Kay, Pittsburgh, 6 and 5. Bayne got a four on the eighteenth hole in the morning, winning 1 up. Bayne is entitled to a leg on the W. H. Beardsley cup. In the semi-finals F. B. Jackel, playing from Whitemarsh Valley Country club, defeated Dr. F. J. Watkins, Chicago, 2 and 1. W. F. Bode, Chicago, defaulted to Jackel in the finals. The third division resulted in Alex Weber of Inverness, Toledo, defeating E. A. Konantz, St. Paul, 8 and 6.

St. Louis Player Winner in Golf Game in Florida

Deland, Fla., March 1.—Jim Barnes of the Sunset Hill golf club of St. Louis won the open College Arms tournament today with a brilliant score of 282. Hagan, 289, finished the last nine in 32. Hutchinson and Brady tied at 292.

Chicagoan Gets Big Lead in $1,000 Bowling Match

Chicago gained a commanding lead on the intercity bowling match for $1,000 a side, the first half of which was played this week on Floss' alleys in Buffalo. The contestants in the match are John Gengler, representing this city, and Frank Carrauana of Buffalo, the former completing the first half on his rival's alleys with a lead of 232 pins. Scores:

The concluding half of the series will be rolled at the Bensinger Randolph alleys Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.

In the Wake of the News
By RING W. LARDNER

THE MARRIED LIFE OF EDNA AND JESSE.

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Dear Girlie:

Well, girlie, I am a "widow" I can just see how startled you looked when you read that sentence, but don't take it too "seriously." As usual I am just teasing and it seems like I would never get over the habit. What I meant was that Jesse is out of town on a business trip, has been gone since Sunday night and won't be back till a week from Saturday. So your poor little "pal" is all alone for two whole weeks almost and a "widow" for that long and no longer.

Well, girlie, I've been so lonesome I hardly know what to do with myself and I don't see how in the world I am going to stand it for eight more days. I use to think eight days was just a little over a week, but believe me it seems like more than a year under "certain conditions." I do almost nothing but mope around the house and mother says any one would think Jesse had gone to "Egypt" the way I act about it. So I said: "Well, mother, you mustn't forget that you were young yourself once."

Well, let's see what is there to write about? Monday evening I was just thinking about getting ready for bed when the phone rung and it was Ethel Burden and she asked me if I could come over and play cards. "I've got two men on my hands so you must come and help entertain," she said. Well, I didn't want to disappoint her so I asked mother if she thought there was any harm in me going and she said no so I went over and we played five hundred till almost midnight though I had no idea it was so late. One of the "men" was perfectly stunning looking with the most wonderful eyes. I got a good look at them as they were on me most of the time. He insisted on bringing me home and I had to keep talking about the "weather" every step of the way to keep him off more romantic subjects.

Tuesday night five of us went to the picture show and this same "man" was in the party again, but don't worry, dearie, as I haven't seen him since and probably never will again. Wednesday evening Marie Golden came to call with her "man" and they brought the man's brother along and we had a dandy time though he was inclined to be a little flirtatious. Last night mother was out with some friends and it was so lonely in the house with no one to talk to and I just had to talk to somebody so I couldn't think of a soul but Sergeant Davis, the Camp Grant boy who is back in Chi now and out of the service. Well, he said why not throw a party Saturday night and I asked him if he had forgotten I was married and he said: "I can't forget it, but we will make it a big enough party so everything will be O. K."

Well, when he put it that way I couldn't say no. So it looks like I wouldn't be quite so "lonely" tomorrow night, though I really don't enjoy things when Jesse isn't with me.

That reminds me I haven't written to him since Wednesday and I suppose the poor thing is nearly crazy by this time. He sends me a night letter every night he is away from Chi. Some "devotion," eh, girlie? Long may it last!

Yours, EDNA.

GRAND AMERICAN AT SOUTH SHORE WEEK OF AUG. 11

New York, March 1.—The executive committee of the American Trapshooting association today selected the week beginning Monday, Aug. 11, in which the Grand American handicap tournament of 1919 will be held on the grounds of the South Shore country club, Chicago.

A feature of the tournament this year will be an army and navy championship shoot, open to men in the United States service either during the world war or at the time of the contset.

During the second week of next November an annual national indoor championship trapshooting tournament will be inaugurated in this city.

Central A. A. U. Meet of Franklin Club April 10-12

Tom Eck, coach of the long distance runners at the University of Chicago, who will manage the first annual indoor track and field meet of the Franklin Skating and A. C. at the Coliseum, yesterday announced that the event will be held on April 10, 11, and 12. Aside from the standard list of Central A. A. U. junior and senior events, there will be contests for Catholic and city high schools, and a special mile race against time. Entry blanks will be sent to all midwestern universities and schools this week. Entries will close on April 1 with Julian T. Fitzgerald, 2812 West North avenue.

Tribune Decisions

Decisions of "Tribune" fight representatives are:

At Laporte—Harry Varnell stopped Bob Albright [3]; Jack Dice beat Sammy Freighter [5]; Benny Troubles and Young Tigo fought a draw [5].

At Philadelphia—Joey Fox beat Young Robideau [6].

BOBBY ROTH GOES TO THE ATHLETICS

Cleveland, O., March 1.—Bobby Roth, outfielder, has been traded by Cleveland to the Philadelphia Athletics for Larry Gardner, third baseman; Elmer Myers, pitcher, and Charles Jamieson, outfielder. The announcement was made by James C. Dunn, president of the Cleveland club. Myers is in France, but is expected to arrive in time to spend several weeks at the Cleveland club's training camp at New Orleans.

McGoorty to Scrap Briton Townley Abroad March 13

LONDON, March 1.—Eddie McGoorty, American light heavyweight now in the American army, was matched today to box Seaman Arthur Townley on March 13. At the same time a bout was arranged between Augie Ratner of the American army, the winner in the middleweight division in the recent inter-allied army and navy boxing tournament, and "Boy" MacCormick, for March 27.

JOIE RAY AND CAMPBELL TAKE RACES AT BOSTON

Boston, Mass., March 1.—Running in matchless form, Joie Ray of the Illinois Athletic club, Chicago, tonight repeated his victory of last year in the Hunter mile, feature event of the annual Boston A. A. indoor games. His time of 4:22 1-5 was a new record for the event, displacing the mark of 4:23 3-5, made by Oscar Hedlund of the Boston A. A. The old record had stood seven years.

Ray forced the issue from the start, with a select field pressing him in the early stages. At the finish, however, he led Joe Stout, University of Chicago alumni runner, and former western conference two mile champion, by forty yards, with Gordon T. Nightingale of New Hampshire college, third.

Campbell Wins 1,000 Yards.

The 1,000 yard run handicap was won by Tom Campbell, University of Chicago freshman star, in 2:25 1-5. Campbell started at scratch, and the speed and form of the 20 year old westerner surprised the watchers.

Defeat of Lieut. Robert Simpson, Forty-fourth infantry, U. S. A., holder of the world's records in the 120 and 220 yards hurdles events, by Earl J. Thomson, Dartmouth college student, who competed in the 1918 National A. A. U. event for the Canadian royal fliers, marked the 45 yards high hurdles. Thomson, who is present national 120 yard hurdles champion, took the lead at the start and held it easily. His time was :06 1-5.

St. Louis Flash Wins Dash.

Loren Murchison, the St. Louis A. A. youngster, who came out of the west to sprinting success in New York at the Millrose A. A. meet, continued his victories tonight by winning the 40 yard dash. He outstripped his opponents easily by a lightning start, winning in :04 4-5.

Pirates Pick West Baden in Indiana for Their Camp

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 1.—The Pittsburgh Nationals will train at West Baden, Ind., for the baseball season, according to President Barney Dreyfuss today. The Pirates will gather at West Baden March 23 and in event the weather there is too bad for baseball the team probably will go to Birmingham, Ala.

Einer Jensen Wins Another Ski Title in the Rockies

Steamboat Springs, Colo., March 1.—Einer Jensen of the Great Lakes Naval Training station today won the amateur ski jumping championship of the Rocky Mountain region by a point count of 241 and a jump of 128 feet, which he rode successfully.

GAME TO Y. COLLEGE.

In a game featured by the fast teamwork of the winners the Y. M. C. A. college swamped the American College of Physical Education last night, 58 to 23. The score at half time stood 31 to 6. Lineup:

BY JOE DAVIS.

Playing the best all round billiards of the tournament and getting high run of 85 and best single average of 15 15-19, Percy Collins of the Illinois A. C. defeated J. E. Cope Morton of the Union League club of Philadelphia, 300 to 53, in the final game of the week in the amateur balkline championship at the Chicago Athletic association. The other winners of the day were Dave McAndless and Champion Corwin Huston.

The average made by the Chicagoan is the second best made in the last three years, Nathan Hall of Boston getting 16 in 1917, when the games were at 400 points.

Plays a Safety Game.

The Philadelphia southpaw started playing a safety game, and while it stopped Collins temporarily, he finally got under full steam and gave a great display. In the ninth inning he ran 85 in a little over ten minutes. Keeping the balls running well at the top of the table, he got out of trouble at 27 with a massé, and at 32 followed with another.

Then going along nicely and making few long drives he passed his own high run of 64, and set sail after the 77 mark held by McAndless. He got the balls apart at 74 but gathered them at the other end of the table. At 85 he made a wide spread draw which left him at the foot of the table with the two balls at the other end. He missed his long two cushion try.

Morton, who plays fast enough almost to be classed as careless, seldom got the balls close, most of his counts being cushion caroms. Scores:

COLLINS — 1 23 0 0 3 2 7 0 85 2 18 39 17 5 0 9 41 12 36 — 300. Average, 15 15-19; high run, 85.

MORTON — 0 6 1 0 0 0 9 2 3 6 7 0 4 1 0 10 0 1 3 — 53. Average, 2 15-19; high run, 10. Referee—Fred Conklin.

McAndless Beats Lord.

Dave McAndless, the hope of the Cherry Circle, won his third straight, defeating Robert M. Lord of the Elks, 300 to 240, in the first afternoon game.

For a time it looked as if the Cherry Circle player was in for defeat, as Lord led, 125 to 42, in seven innings and was going finely. Save for an occasional spurt both played poorly for a time and at the thirtieth inning Lord led, 229 to 167. Lord then lead 229, but McAndless ran 31.

Two innings later on his fourth shot he scratched a count half the length of the table. Profiting by this luck, he soon had the balls rolling finely and, playing fast and with confidence, he passed Collins' high run of 64 and gathered 77, taking a lead of 44 points. He went out four innings later. Scores:

McANDLESS — 0 0 5 10 23 3 1 13 0 11 1 33 4 14 18 1 0 0 4 0 7 0 1 1 0 0 4 13 0 0 31 1 77 15 0 0 9—300. Average, 8 4-37. High run, 77.

Huston, 300; Trump, 232.

In the longest game of the tournament, which lasted three hours and consumed 51 innings, Champion Corwin Huston defeated Percy Trump, 300 to 232, averaging 5 45-51. Huston's high run was 30, Trump's best being 22. Scores:

HUSTON — 2 1 7 21 3 6 4 1 0 9 5 1 7 19 2 8 0 8 0 23 4 0 2 2 29 0 2 18 0 0 0 4 2 2 3 0 0 6 4 10 0 0 2 30 0 7 10 3 3 5 11—300. Average, 5 45-51.

Lake Forest Beats Five from Naperville School

Lake Forest university won a basketball victory over Northwestern college of Naperville by a scanty margin, 18 to 15, at Lake Forest yesterday. The decision was in the air until the final whistle, although Lake Forest's superior work in the second half kept that team ahead. Eddy starred, caging five baskets. Lineup:

FOUR of the principal objections urged against pending bills to legalize boxing in Illinois by opponents of the measures are decisions, weight of gloves, cash purses, and admission fees for spectators.

The question of decisions brings a difference of opinion even among supporters of boxing. The majority verdict is that decisions are undesirable, both from the viewpoint of possible disorder at the ringside and the wrangling over choice of referee in bouts of importance.

Weight of gloves will neither make nor break the measure. Heavy gloves tend to a more gory spectacle than lighter gloves, because a man is more likely to be worn down than knocked out. Boxers themselves prefer the lighter gloves when engaged in serious battle.

The elimination of cash purses, of course, would prevent important public contests, which opponents of the measures openly wish, while legal permission for public contests is the very object of the law. Into the same category as cash purses may be placed the "no admission charge."

The plea for amateurism of the antis is based upon college athletics, while baseball is pointed to as a clean sport. Professional baseball would be impossible without gate money. College athletics are supervised by the highest priced athletic specialists in the country.

Football, which could not exist without an admission charge, is a great sport of skill and strategy, not because the players are amateurs, but because they are coached by professionals who give their time and energy to bring football to the highest point of efficiency. Does any one suppose two prairie teams, untrained and uncoached, ever could attract the vast assemblages common at our great annual fixtures.

Amateur sport always has needed, and always will need, the stimulus of the professional. It is true of football and baseball, it is true of the gentleman's game of golf, and it is true of boxing.

NEW JERSEY DOESN'T CARE MUCH TO STAGE HEAVYWEIGHT BOUT

NEW YORK, March 1.—[Special.] — New Jersey boxing officials have no intention of sanctioning the proposed heavyweight championship bout between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey, which Tex Rickard will conduct somewhere in this country July 4. John S. Smith, chairman of the New Jersey state boxing commission, declares emphatically that under no circumstances will the proposed contest be permitted in New Jersey. In this opinion Commissioner Cann coincides. The remaining member of the commission, Commissioner Crain, is favorable to the bout being conducted in New Jersey, provided it is held in a suitable building.

Commissioner Smith declares the contest undesirable as far as New Jersey is concerned. The disparity in the ages of the principals forms the foundation for Commissioner Smith's hostility, and to this is added antipathy over the inactivity of Willard during the war.

A. E. F. SPORTS REACH MILLIONS IN FIVE MONTHS

PARIS, March 1.—[By the Associated Press. — Millions of men of the American expeditionary forces were either participants or spectators at the games organized by the Young Men's Christian association in France between Aug. 1 and Dec. 31, 1918, according to figures just published by Elwood Brown, director of the department of athletics.

Baseball ranked first with 320,000 participants and 2,500,000 spectators. Football was second with 70,000 participants and 1,375,000 spectators. Boxing was next with 190,000 boxers and 1,700,000 spectators. Soccer football, running, and other games furnished the remainder.

Since Jan. 1 athletics have become a compulsory part of the military organization, with the Y. M. C. A. physical directors actively coöperating with the army officers.

Lee Tannehill Salesman of Mirrors and Novelties

Lee Tannehill of South Bend, Ind., was in Chicago yesterday selling "looking glasses." Unless you happened to be a White Sox baseball fan in the days of 1903 to 1908, this bit of information may not interest you. If you were a fan, you must remember the way "Tanny" shot the ball across the diamond from the third corner. Well, Lee Tannehill today is selling mirrors and other advertising novelties on the road and owns a grocery store in South Bend and hopes to be a minor league baseball manager next summer.

MORGANS BEAT CHICAGO LATINS.

Morgan Park academy staged a basketball comeback against Chicago Latin school, beating the latter, 24 to 6, on the cadet floor. Good passing and excellent work by Nichols, M. P. guard, sent the cadet five ahead with a leap, and at half time they held a margin of 14 to 4. Lineup:

REFUTES TALKS AGAINST BILLS BY REFORMERS

Soldiers Want Contests Both for Recreation and for Exercise.

BY CAPT. LEWIS OMER.
[Athletic Officer Camp Grant.]

Rockford, Ill., March 1.—[Special.] —Opponents of the proposed legislation legalizing boxing forget several poignant facts which should be considered when sane, cool reasoning is applied to the question of the advisability of using boxing as a means of physical training and recreation for the men and boys who box and as a passive recreation for the people who attend boxing and yet who do not participate.

One of the stock arguments of the ministerial association is that it is all right to box, but that no charges may be made for admission and that there shall be no purses. It seems that the great bogie of the people who do not know, is professionalism, for in effect the ministerial dictum is that there shall be no professional boxing.

Professional More Expert.

It is my experience that the professional always rises to a higher degree of proficiency in any sport than does the amateur, and that in many cases the sportsmanship, which after all is the crux of the question, is as good in one as in the other. It is about as easy to get two professional prize fighters together as two college teams when one is looking for the advantage.

No sport will have the vitality necessary for success without the group of professionals behind it who are constantly giving their best thought and effort to its success rather than their second best efforts, as happens when amateurs control. It is only necessary to compare the change in efficiency in the administration in college sports after the professional athletic directors took charge, with the rotten conditions which existed when the amateur undergraduates and alumni had direct control.

Sports Allay Social Unrest.

We are passing through a period of social reform which is removing the standard source of excitement of the workingman, the saloon, and is giving nothing as a substitute. We have all seen how every city born American follows the fortune of the local baseball club even though he may not attend the games, and the same is true even of the clandestine prize fighting which exists today.

We have only to compare the British workingman, with his Saturday afternoon boxing and football matches, his whippet races, and Sheffield handicaps, where everything is professional, with the continental workmen, with their sabotage, bolshevism, and anarchy, to see that the sanity and coolness with which the British labor element meets its problems is a direct result of the training in self-control and good sportsmanship in the ring and in the athletic field.

Athletics of any kind to be widespread among the masses must be highly professionalized.

The boy who takes part never sees the physical or mental benefit, but thinks of the day when he will be on the All-Scotland or All-England team or will be the professional lightweight champion of his district. The nearest we have to this in America is in baseball.

Outlet for Boyish Energy.

State or national legalizing of boxing would multiply boxing one hundred fold because of the fact that it can be more easily acquired and needs less natural ability than does baseball, the chief outlet for boyish energy we have at present. I have no doubt in my mind as to the ability of the administrators of the law to make the sport clean.

The opponents of boxing should realize that nothing is more harmful to young men than a lack of respect for the law, yet hardly a paper can be picked up where there is not a notice of a fight somewhere in Illinois. Under the present system, fighting exists by the complaisance of the local sheriff and when we all know that there is a law on the statutes forbidding it. It would be much better to utilize the best in the sport of boxing rather than to let it exist as a clandestine sport.

This is poor training in citizenship.

Who Are Its Opponents.

The opponents of boxing are many of the professional reformers who are out of a job and trying to find a new one. The only answer that the public can give to the boys and men who are demanding physical recreation must be a constructive one. Reformers must not forget that the great problem of American men and women is above all else that of control of sexual disease. The man or boy who takes an interest in physical contests has a much better chance of living a clean life than the person who is shut off from the privileges of that exhaustion and interest that follows hard physical exercise.

Opens Field of Pleasure.

The popularizing of boxing will give to the common people another source of entertainment and exercise and one which is suited for all seasons and conditions. It should be considered that the majority of the boxing fans will be working men and boys, rather than those more fortunate youngsters who have the privileges of high school and college with its fighting game, football.

Legislation legalizing boxing will open a wide field of pleasure to the workers of the state.

OAK PARK HIGH RUNS AWAY WITH HONORS OF PREPS

Suburban Boys of West Win All but One Event at Indoor Meet.

Table of Points

Senn	16	Senn	27
U. High	9	U. High	17

BY PREP.

Oak Park High, which cleaned up the prep events in the recent Illinois A. C. indoor games, showed overwhelming strength in the interleague track and field events at Patten gymnasium yesterday, running away with the senior meet, and winning the junior games also. Oak Park won all firsts except the shotput and triple standing jump in the senior meet.

Lake View was scheduled to make the meet a four cornered affair, but did not appear.

Pyott Star of Meet.

Pyott of Oak Park was star performer in the senior events, getting 12 points. Luckart of Senn, favorite for the mile run, senior class, collapsed in the stretch after leading into the final quarter. He was given first aid treatment, but was found to be suffering only from overexertion.

In the junior contests Deming of Oak Park carried off individual honors with 12 points, Schweger of Senn scoring 11. This meet hinged on the relay, which Oak Park won by a fine team race. Victor Kraft, one of the eleven Kraft brothers who helped make athletic history in the central west for Illinois and Northwestern universities, was a factor in the junior races for Oak Park. Summaries:

Meet to La Grange

In the first Suburban High School league dual meet of the season, La Grange defeated Evanston at Patten gym, taking both senior and junior meets by scores of 51 to 44 and 43 to 25, respectively. Cary of La Grange, after winning all but two of the junior events, was allowed to run senior, and secured firsts in the pole vault and three standing broad jumps. This decided the meet, as they were the last events on the program. Wootan of Evanston was individual point winner, capturing 20½ points. Summaries:

Railroads Losers Because Gleason and Cantillon Leave

BY I. E. SANBORN.

With any sort of an imagination something of a coincidence might be worked out of the fact William Gleason and Joe Cantillon, two rather famous characters in baseball, started earning their livings as railroad brakemen and might have been right and left hand men to Bill McAdoo for the duration of the war if they had not been fired from their jobs when young.

While the careers of these two men in baseball have been along different lines and they do not closely resemble each other in any way, they possess one characteristic in common. Both are remarkably "quick on the draw" in verbal combat and usually score a couple of bull's-eyes before their opponents find the range.

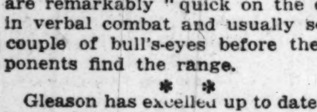
Gleason has excelled up to date chiefly as a player and a coach of players. He has had a standing offer of a place on the American league umpire staff ever since he quit active participation in the sport, but never has accepted it. This season will be his first as actual manager. Cantillon never attained great renown as a player, but made his reputation as umpire, manager, and club owner.



Gleason's folks were all railroad men. That's how he came to go into the business. His father was in it, and all seven of the sons followed his footsteps. The other six stuck to railroading, but the Kid just couldn't. That's one of the peculiarities of baseball. Nearly everybody from Tokio to the Rhine has heard of Kid Gleason, but very few of them knew he had six brothers.

Being the youngest of the seven, the Kid was the last to go to work. He attained the dignity of rear brakeman on a local freight running out of Camden, N. J. His "trick" took him only a short distance up the line, and brought him back on another freight the same day. That worked all right except on Saturdays. Then the return freight was shy one brakeman, unless the conductor could pick up a pinch coupling pin juggler in the town where Gleason was supposed to join him.

The reason was that said town had a crack independent baseball team, and Gleason never could resist an invitation to pitch the Saturday afternoon games for it. Just about the time the traffic folks got tired of losing Gleason every Saturday afternoon Fergy Malone, then manager of the Williamsport team, offered the Kid a regular job as pitcher, and Gleason's rise in the profession was so rapid that most of you know the rest of his history.

Cantillon also had brothers in the railroad business. One of them, the late William D. Cantillon, became vice president of the Northwestern. Brother Joe worked at the game until he was promoted to the rank of freight conductor and was assigned to chaperon a daily haul of cars loaded with beer from Milwaukee to Chicago. He might have become a vice president, too, but for an engineer, named Burke, who was pilot of said cargo.

On Joe's last trip he got orders from a dispatcher to meet a north-bound freight at a different point than usual. Conductor Joe handed the duplicate order to his engineer, a veteran and dependable, then went back to the caboose and took a nap on one of the seats.

This is the way Cantillon told me the rest of it:

"I dozed longer than I meant to, I suppose, and by some kind of a hunch woke up just as the caboose was rattling over the last switch of the siding where we should have met the up train. Soon as I realized where we were I asked my brakeman if we had met 106 yet. He shook his head, and I yelled back: 'Well, we will pretty soon.'

"Just then Burke tooted a frantic call for brakes. The brakeman and I had plenty of time to jump, which we did. The crash came on a curve in a low cut and it scattered beer all over two counties. Nobody else was hurt much, and I got up to where the two engines were hugging each other just as the engineer of the north bound train got there. He said to Burke, 'I was ordered to meet you at Blankton.'

"Burke answered, 'Yes, but you —— —— loafer, you weren't there, so I came down here to meet you.'

"Burke then picked up a section of one end of a smashed car, printed on it 'Burke's station—Milwaukee, 31 mi. —Chicago, 49 mi.,' and propped it up beside the track where they had met. Burke was reinstated after a while, but I never even went after my pay envelope."

Manufacturers Want Two More Teams for League

The Chicago Manufacturers' league Thursday admitted the Johns-Manville, Rayfield Carburetors, Stewart-Warner, Stromberg Motor Device company, Barrett & Christy, and Stromberg Electric company teams and is looking for two more clubs to complete the circuit.

EVANSTON FIVE DROPS HOME TILT TO BLOOM, 22-17

Even Split on Two Games Results in Clash on the North Shore.

Bloom split even with Evanston High in two Suburban league basket games at the Evanston Y. M. C. A., giving the 1918 heavyweight champions their first defeat on the home floor at Evanston, 22 to 17. Toll was too much for the losers. His six baskets, all made from the center of the floor, drew cries of malediction from the Evanston crowd.

Evanston secured some revenge by trouncing the Bloom lights, 23 to 13. Kotal of the Chicago Heights team was put off the floor in the second quarter for holding. Lineups:

by A. R. METCALFE

"IT costs half a trick to open a suit" is an old maxim in whist. The average loss was indicated, as many suits may be opened without incurring any risk.

It is always desirable, for instance, to lead from king, queen, jack or queen, jack, ten, but if the middle honor were taken from either of these combinations it would be better to have the suit started by either adversary. A very pretty illustration is given in the deal below:

S—J, 9, 6, 5, 3.

West secured 10 tricks.

The feature of the deal was the refusal of west to win the first trick, although having the major tenace in spades.

There was no suit which the declarer could open to advantage and he judged rightly that the adversaries would be afraid to start clubs.

Another effect of the play of west at trick one was that each adversary had a false idea of the spade situation.

At trick four south switched to hearts in the hope of giving north the lead, still under the impression that the latter had a good suit of spades to make.

The play of the declarer was clever throughout, but he could not possibly have made game had he won the first trick.

North and south failed in the negative inferences which they should have drawn during the play.

The only decent cards in dummy were in the club suit, and the persistent avoidance of clubs by the declarer should have told his adversaries that he could hold neither king nor queen of clubs.

North should have left the defense of the club suit to his partner and protected his knave of spades, while south, at any time might have started his club suit with impunity.

NEW GIANT PREXY SAYS M'GRAW WILL WIN FLAG

Stoneham Calls Cubs Only Real Rivals, but Not Good Enough.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Charles A. Stoneham says the New York Giants will win the National league pennant this year. If you don't know who Charles A. Stoneham is, he is the new president and principal stockholder of the Giants. And if you look in your own telephone directory you will find he is one of us, that is he has a broker's office right here in Chicago at 178 West Jackson boulevard.

Regardless of that, President Stoneham of the Giants came to Chicago yesterday direct from New York filled with enthusiasm regarding the Giants and apparently without a care regarding his office in Chicago.

He is on his way to Reno, Nev., where he is said to hold important mining interests, and it was his intention to leave this afternoon for that dry port. He expects to return to New York, stopping off in Chicago in about a week, when he will forecast some more things which may happen next summer.

Mr. Stoneham was met here by his attorney, Frank Hogan. Possibly he was afraid Boss Mitchell of the Cubs would come around and take Benny Kauff and George Burns away from him. As it happens, Stoneham didn't meet Mitchell or any of the Cub officials, but gave it as his opinion that the Giants had only the Cubs to beat in order to win next season's pennant.

There was a report that Stoneham was in secret conference with President Ban Johnson of the American league, but it was denied. The report grew from the fact that Ban Johnson was seen to take the elevator in the Congress hotel, in that section of the house which included the suite of the New York magnate, but as Mr. Stoneham denied any meeting, and as Mr. Johnson could not be located, the report will have to fall down.

SHOTS ON THE LINKS

COMING in like a polar bear rather than like the proverbial lion, March 1, which is locker day at the Jackson park golf course, did not produce a rush of registrations. It was 10 above zero when George Weitzel opened the door of his office after scraping a few icicles off his mustache. It was then 6 in the morning and the first to greet him was J. H. Brown, 1522 East Sixty-fifth place, who qualified for the next polar expedition. Others followed through the day, but George expects a rush of fur clad players armed with thermos or other bottles today.

Chicago is well represented by professionals who will compete in the Florida tournaments. Among them are Jock Hutchinson, Stewart Gardner, Jack Croke, Eddie Loos, William Mehlhorn, Joe Roseman, and Tom Morris.

The biggest indoor tournament of the season will be held at the Chicago Beach hotel on Tuesday, when three putting events will be staged for the benefit of the permanent blind relief fund. It will be given under the auspices of the Mutual Advancement association for Blind People, the hotel having donated its course. There will be an elimination tournament for women, starting at 11 o'clock and continuing after luncheon until the winners are determined. In the afternoon and night there will be events for men and a mixed foursome. Champion Chick Evans, who has donated a prize, will compete. The tournament will be in charge of Mrs. J. G. Davis, George Knox, and George Taylor.

Clubs of the Western Golf association are planning a campaign in support of the daylight saving bill and will enlist all possible support to have the present law stand. It will be voted on at Washington March 4.

PERFECT SCORES FEATURE OF WEEK IN RIFLE LEAGUE

Two '100' Cards Turned In; Ridgeville Shoots Score of 968.

Fourth week matches in the round robin tournament of the Chicago Rifle association resulted in beating both high aggregate team and individual records for the 1919 contest, as well as the shooting of two perfect 100 cards. Ridgeville Rifle club of Evanston shot 968 of a possible 1,000 points. Edison and Centennial had tied for the previous mark of 962. O. Mencel, Chicago Engineers, shot 198 of a possible 200, beating W. S. Helmer's former mark of 197. Mencel and W. L. Cocroft, Ridgeville, shot the two 100 scores.

Team match results for the fourth round:

Ridgeville, 968; Chicago Engineers, 950.
Centennial, 951; Hawthorne, 943.
Chicago Rifle, 949; Commonwealth Edison, 948.

High individual scores for the round follow:

O. Mencel, Engineers	198
W. L. Cocroft, Ridgeville	197

New Mitchell Sixes

More Than 100 Improvements

New Victory Model

Built to Revolutionize the Six

Our new Mitchell model introduces more than 100 important advances in Sixes.

Some are sensational. The average strength increase is 50 per cent. Endurance is increased—by actual tests—75 per cent. Operating cost is decreased 25 per cent.

It fixes entirely new standards. It is based on new principles. It is built to meet today's demand for more enduring Sixes.

A Two-Year Result

Two years have been spent in perfecting this model. Many new specialists were employed to aid. During most of that time the Mitchell factory devoted itself to war work. So the designers of this new-type car had a unique opportunity.

Almost every detail shows important changes. Rear axle strength is increased 50 per cent, frame strength 50 per cent, brake efficiency 75 per cent, gear strength 25 per cent, crank shaft strength 35 per cent, and so on.

Weight has been added. Full 75 per cent has been added to endurance. Yet fuel cost has been reduced 25 per cent.

A great body designer has added 20 per cent to the beauty, the finish and comfort.

See What They Have Done

We cannot describe all these hundred improvements. We can only sum up the results. But we will show them to you, part by part, when you come here to see them.

Together they form the greatest advance that has ever been made in type. They give to the Mitchell scores of supremacies as compared with any rival. They confer on the Mitchell such strength and endurance as no other maker attempts. They give it beauty, comfort, luxury and finish which makes it unique in its class.

Yet the price is below any other Six of like size, power and class. All because the whole car—motor, chassis and body—is built under Mitchell efficiency methods.

Come let us show it to you.

RACINE MULTI-MILE CORD TIRES

RACINE RUBBER COMPANY EXTRA TESTED TIRES

How Science Has Bettered Cord Tires

DEVELOPMENT of the Racine Absorbing Shock Strip by Racine Rubber Company chemists perfects the cord tire Racine Rubber Company is justly proud of its achievement.

The Racine Absorbing Shock Strip puts the Racine Multi-Mile Cord Tire in a class all its own. More mileage results—smoother riding—less gasoline consumption.

This exclusive Racine development is an extra strip of blended rubber, graduated in resiliency. It is so compounded (a manufacturing secret) as to completely neutralize road shocks. It prevents carcass and tread separation by reason of the perfect welding of flexible cord carcass and tough rubber tread.

A Tire that Won't Skid

Notice the tread of the non-skid Racine Multi-Mile Cord. The bevelled edges hold to the road or pavement, whether wet or dry. Fear of side slipping can be dropped from your thoughts the moment you equip your car with Racine Multi-Mile Cords.

RICKARD WOULD LIKE TO PULL OFF GO NEAR CHICAGO

No Definite Location for Willard Fight Yet; Far West Chilly.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Where will Tex Rickard stage his championship battle between Champion Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey, challenger?

That's a big question and one the fans are keenly interested in, now that Rickard and his partner, Frank Flournoy, the cattleman and cotton operator, have attended to the preliminaries of signing Willard and Dempsey to agreements to go through with the battle. It not only is a big question, but a hard one to answer.

Answers Question with Question.

A talk with Rickard leads one to believe that even Tex hasn't decided that question to his own satisfaction. We popped this question at him, hoping that perhaps he would open up to the extent of giving us a correct line on what he has done in the way of finding the location for the bout:

"Where would you like to hold the contest?"

The answer was accompanied by a smile, but instead of being an answer it was an interrogation. "Where do you think would be a good place to stage the battle?"

May Not Be in U. S.

That's about as near to a definite answer as one can get from Rickard. At the same time, this promoter does make it plain that if the bout is held in this country it will be in the central west. The talk of the men going into the ring in the east is all bunk, if the word of Rickard can be accepted. And it won't be held in the far west.

Judging by the attitude that the promoter is taking, he is waiting patiently for one thing. That is to see how the legislatures of states in the central west—and that includes Illinois—are going to act on the boxing bills which have been introduced. He is hopeful that a lot of these bills will be passed, but one thing he desires more than anything else, and that is that Illinois will pass a measure legalizing the sport.

"Not Far from Chicago."

One spot in this broad expanse of country that Rickard favors is Chicago. It can be said without any danger of having to retract that if conditions were regulated so that he could send Willard and Dempsey against each other in Chicago he would forget all about other sites and consider the selection a closed incident. For one thing Rickard likes Chicago. New York may be all right, but Chicago is more "right," from the Rickard viewpoint.

One thing Rickard did tip off is this: "You won't have to travel far from Chicago to sit in a ringside seat at the Willard-Dempsey bout."

Nix on Nevada.

There are a lot of people who undoubtedly think that Rickard has his eye on Nevada or some western state where the laws against boxing aren't stringent. It may be all right to think that, but Rickard quickly upsets that dope.

"Why should I go away out to Nevada or New Mexico or the sage brush country to stage the contest?" he asked. "There was a time when it was good business to hold a championship battle in that part of the country, but things aren't as they were. Conditions have changed considerably. The war has taken a lot of money away from the people. For instance, the purchase of bonds has had its effect. The fight won't be held in Nevada. I'll tell you that much."

Through with California.

"Well, what if they opened up in California and gave you the chance to stage the bout there?" was asked.

"No, no, no. Nothing, absolutely nothing doing at all on California," was the reply. "I'm not a native son, and if you are not a native son you're up against it in California. I tried to stage one bout several years ago in California, and they 'native soned' me out of the state. All I did was to spend a lot of money and didn't even have a chance to hold the bout. No, Rickard won't pull this bout or any other in California."

Would Like Twenty Rounds.

As for the distance of the battle, Rickard is uncertain. If it is possible to hold the bout in Illinois and it must be limited to ten rounds, Rickard is willing. So is Willard and so is Dempsey. The promoter would prefer twenty rounds, but wouldn't let that interfere with a ten round scrap in a location where it would draw big money. The matter of a decision or no decision would not stand in the way.

If Title Bout Is Held Near Chicago Gary Makes Bid

Jess Willard vs. Jack Dempsey at Gary, Ind., July 4! Zowie, but wouldn't that stir the blood in the veins of Chicago fans. Here's a few words carried over the wire from the steel city last night: "Authorities would permit Willard-Dempsey bout to be held in Gary if Tex Rickard is looking f[illegible] city near Chicago."

English Boxer Winner in Bout at Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Pa., March 1.—Joey Fox of England, fighting in the featherweight class, tonight defeated Young Robideau of Philadelphia, in a scheduled six-round bout. Fox showed to advantage in all rounds.

INDOOR TEAMS MEET TODAY.

No upsets are expected in the City Indoor Baseball league today, all three of the games listed being considered onesided. Games are: Reveres and C. H. I., at 1258 West Taylor street; Opportunity A. A., at Hamlin Park, Robey and Belmont; Dodger Trainings and Welles Parks at Stanford Park.

SOCCER MATCH POSTPONED.

The soccer match between Bricklayers and the Detroit champions for today has been called off, owing to the poor condition of the field and the inclement weather conditions. A later date will be agreed upon.

MILITARY MAN HOLDS DEMETRAL TO DRAW IN TUSSLE ON MAT

Walter Evans, the former wrestling instructor at the University of Illinois, celebrated his return to the ring after serving thirteen months in the army by wrestling a thirty minute draw with Young Demetral in the feature match of the bi-monthly show at the C. A. A. last night.

Evans was outweighed twenty pounds by his opponent, but his aggressiveness and superior knowledge of the game earned a draw decision. Demetral had the army officer in several dangerous positions but he lacked the strength to gain a fall. During the war Evans acted as wrestling instructor in several of the southern camps and won a captain's commission because of meritorious work.

In the main event Steve Savage pinned Carl Schultz's shoulders to the mat in 23:05 with a reverse body scissors. In the comedy bout Herman Koch won from Joe Wallace in 15:35 with a headlock. Ed Strangler Lewis, who will meet Joe Stecher at the Coliseum tomorrow night in a finish match, was introduced from the ring. Lewis has done most of his training at the Cherry Circle club.

MARTINSON PUTS RODGERS ON MAT IN I. A. C. SHOW

Paul Martinson, the local grappler, defeated Jack Rodgers in a one fall bout in the main bout of the monthly wrestling show at the Illinois A. C. last night. Martinson took the fall in 31:00 with a head lock. The bout was featured by hard grappling during which both men clamped on dangerous locks.

Dick Hankel took a one fall match from Charley Peterson in 14:00 with a head scissors after the latter had all the best of the grappling. Peterson was the aggressor for most of the bout until he allowed Hankel to put on the dangerous lock.

Mike Nestor, the leg expert from Flint, Mich., made Young Beell quit after sixteen minutes of wrestling. Nester secured an arm scissors and Beell being unable to get out of it conceded the fall. In the other contest Jim Londas won from Rolanda in 13:00 with a head scissors. Capt. Roper, the heavyweight boxer, acted as referee of the contests.

Winkler Wins Shoot at Chicago Beach Tourney

Breaking 74 targets out of 75, A. H. Winkler, the local amateur, yesterday won the weekly shoot at the Chicago Beach hotel. He missed his fiftieth bird. Jay Graham, H. E. King, and Dr. Kimm tied for second honors with scores of 69. Seventeen shooters took part in the event. Scores:

A. H. Winkler, 74; J. R. Graham, 69; H. E. King, 69; Dr. Kimm, 69; Ed Graham, 68; A. McLaughlin, 67; L. A. Brown, 63; F. O. Smith, 62; A. Hardin, 59.

Chicago Hockey Teams to Meet Milwaukee Men

With plans being perfected for the organization of a national hockey league with Chicago clubs as members for next year, a series of games between local organizations and the Milwaukee Hockey club have been arranged for the ensuing three Tuesdays at the Chicago Arena. The first game will be played on Tuesday night when the Calumet A. C. of Chicago will play the Milwaukee septet. On March 11, the Illinois A. C. will clash with the Calumets and on March 19 the tri-color club team will meet the Cream City aggregation.

WRESTLER LEWIS ONCE COACH OF COLLEGE TEAMS

Develops Headlock Hold While Instructor at Kentucky U.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Robert Fredrick, known in wrestling circles as Ed ("Strangler") Lewis, who will meet Joe Stecher at the Coliseum tomorrow night in a finish match, is an all around athlete. He coached the football, basketball, and wrestling teams at Kentucky State university.

Lewis never attended college, but his general knowledge of all branches of sport made him a valuable man as coach. While connected with the university he played on various professional basketball teams in the southern league.

In the football season Lewis had complete charge of Kentucky State forwards. He taught the linemen various forms of leg locks, body checks, and how to use their hands to the best advantage on the defense.

Headlock Brings Nickname.

It was while coaching the wrestling team that Lewis began to study his now famous headlock. When he first started as a public performer he had not mastered the lock, but because he threw so many men in the south with his headlock, which then was a strangle hold, he was given the nickname of "Strangler."

Wrestling fans will recall when Lewis came to Chicago about six years ago and was beaten by Fred Beell, Americus, and Charley Cutler. He attributed those defeats to the referees, who claimed his headlock was a strangle hold, and made him break the lock every time he put it on.

Develops Variation of Hold.

Lewis returned to his home in Kentucky and worked on his favorite hold. He shifted the lock higher and away from the throat, so there was no chance of a strangle. When he had mastered it he secured a return match with Charley Cutler and won. He then went to Baltimore, where he beat Americus with the same hold.

Since he has been training at the C. A. A., Lewis has made a decided impression with club members, who have watched his workouts. He will enter the ring weighing about 220 pounds.

Matchmaker Joe Coffey has accepted Delaney's suggestion to start the match at 9 o'clock. The principals and the referee will be in the ring.

Must Wrestle to Fall.

If a fall does not occur in ninety minutes, the men must wrestle to a fall to decide the contest. If there is a fall inside of ninety minutes, the wrestlers will grapple to a finish, best two in three falls. Capt. Lewis Omer of Camp Grant has been appointed to keep time for Lewis and Lieut. Jack Kennedy of Great Lakes for Stecher. Walter Eckersall will be the club's official timekeeper.

Lewis and Stecher met yesterday with Referee Delaney at the C. A. A. to talk over rules. Delaney ordered the men into the Cherry Circle ring and all questions as to holds when the men are tangled in the ropes were settled. The principals agreed not to permit their managers or trainers to coach from their corners.

PRO WRESTLERS IN GARY MEET.

Gary, Ind., March 1.—The 1919 middleweight wrestling tournament will open Wednesday night with fifty-eight entries from all sections of the country. The tournament will be held semi-monthly on Wednesdays. In the opening rounds Tony Bokich, Indiana middleweight champion, meets Billy Schoeber of Indianapolis, Louis Talaber meets John Borden of Elgin, Jimmy Demetral takles Ole Hanson of Columbus, O., and Louis Pergantis of Camp Custer will wrestle Steve Leatschke of St. Louis.

FLORIDA SEA FISHING TACKLE.

A FRIENDLY reader, who signs himself "Sea Fisher," has this to say of sea fishing in Florida:

"Sea fishing is like fresh water fishing, when tackle is concerned. Proper tackle is necessary to have the game yield the maximum amount of enjoyment. Judging from the tackle you see brought to Florida, there must be considerable misinformation circulated on the tackle question.

"Proper tackle is two-thirds of the game, because it is not a question of whether they are 'biting' down here—especially after March 1—and where to go is the simplest part of it, for you can find competent boatmen in any town on either coast of Florida, and the sea literally swarms with fishes that seem to be hungry all the time. Of course, if you make up your mind that you want to catch certain kinds or sizes of fish, you may have to pick your place carefully, but if you will be satisfied to take what happens to be around—good, big, hard fighting game fishes, too—it is very simple.

"As in muskellunge fishing, the two extremes, light and heavy tackle, are the traps that catch the unwary. About half of the anglers coming to Florida for the first time are either loaded down with only light tackle or with rods and lines more suitable for catching whales or submarines. To get the most pleasure out of this game, one should have both light and heavy tackle, and if he brings heavy black bass and fly fishing tackle as well he will find use for it here, even if he confines his fishing to salt water.

"First, the angler must have what is called tarpon tackle in Florida and tuna and swordfish tackle in California. The rod should weigh about sixteen ounces and the entire rod should be between six and seven feet in length. It may be either of bamboo, greenheart, bethabarra, or hickory.

"With this rod goes a good sea reel capable of holding 600 feet of 24 thread line. Beware of cheap reels. Don't make the common mistake of thinking that you will use it only on this trip—you will come again if you have to walk. After you have hooked a big fish and hear the reel hum as he tears off yard after yard of line you will appreciate a good reel. A poor one is apt to jam—'freeze'—to say nothing of having your fingers broken or your knuckles skinned.

"I would place $25 as a minimum for the heavy reel. This reel should have a handle stop to prevent the handle turning backward and barking your knuckles, as well as a patent drag handle. This replaces the ordinary crank handle and has an adjustable drag which enables you to keep the handle of the reel in your hand at all times. A leather apron or thumb piece is also advisable. In fact, all my reels are equipped with both drag handles and aprons—safety first. A leather rod rest with belt should also be in the kit for the heavy rod.

"The line for heavy fishing is Cuttyhunk linen which tests two pounds to the thread and the 24 thread size is most often used. Terminal tackle, like hooks, leaders and other little things can be bought at the fishing grounds.

"With this tackle one will fish for the heavier fishes such as tarpon and sailfish and for fishing on the reefs where the fish must be handled with less freedom than in open water. In fact, this outfit will be used most of the time by the new angler until he gets the hang of this sea fishing game.

"The so-called light tackle was first used at Catalina, Cal., where they have taken remarkably big fish with it. The rod has a tip not less than six feet in length and not exceeding six ounces in weight, the whole rod weighing about nine ounces. It is used with a nine thread [18 pound test] line.

"The reel to use with the light tackle rod should be smaller than the heavy one. It should hold about 200 yards of No. 9 line and should have an apron or leather drag. Some very good reels of this size are made with built-in drags that sell for from $10 to $15 and they are excellent for the purpose."

[CONCLUDED NEXT SUNDAY.]

Harvard to Hold Annual Eastern Meet Next May

New York, March 1.—Harvard university stadium was selected as the scene of the 1919 track and field championships of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America at the annual meeting today, in accordance with the suggestion of the executive committee. The preliminary trials will be held Friday, May 30, and the finals May 31.

Williams, Larned, Wrenn, Win in A. E. F. Tennis Meet

CANNES, France, Feb. 28.—[Delayed.]—American tennis players with the United States army in France are figuring prominently in the tournament being held here under auspices of the Y. M. C. A. In the singles matches Capt. R. Morris Williams, American champion in 1916, defeated Lieut. Louis Graves of New York. In the doubles Col. William A. Larned and Maj. Robert D. Wrenn, both former United States title holders, defeated the brothers Devereaux, the victory giving them a place in the semi-finals.

ILLINOIS SOCCER ASSOCIATION HAS 11 STARS OF GOLD

State Football Organization Proud of Players' Deeds in War.

The war record of the Illinois State (Soccer) Football association is one to make every player and member proud. Over 200 members of the association heeded the war call, and of that number eleven fell in the fight for democracy. Eight were wounded. The players who gave their lives were:

David McKenzie,	J. H. Cartwright,
Ernest Bruce,	Robert Duncan,
Mike McCarthy,	James Scott,
A. Johnstone,	George MacLeod,
Edward Liquorish,	J. Devlin.
Arthur Fluke,

Dave McKenzie, brother of A. McKenzie, the local referee, enlisted in the British army in 1914 and was killed in action Oct. 2, 1918. McKenzie's wife and three children live in Scotland, but his mother resides in Chicago.

On Aug. 1, 1917, Jack Cartwright and Edward Liquorish enlisted at the British-Canadian recruiting mission and went overseas. Cartwright, who was a mainstay for the old Pullman champions, was killed Oct. 4, 1918. About a week later word was received that Liquorish had met the same fate. Liquorish was formerly a member of the Lincoln Park team.

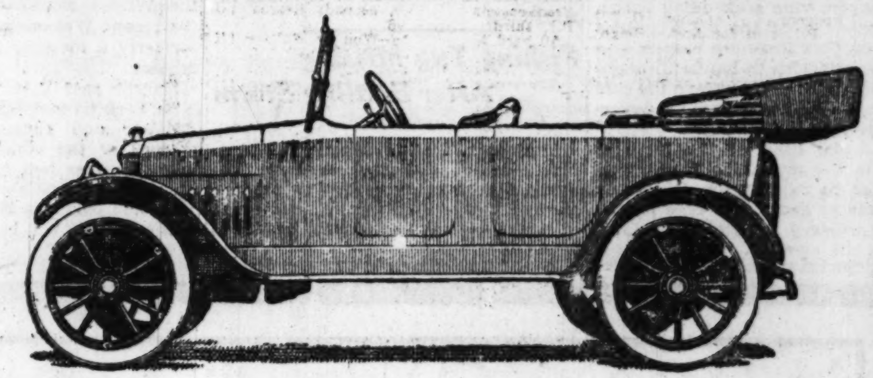
Ernest Bruco and George MacLeod went to Canada when the war broke out and enlisted with "The Ladies from Hell"—the Forty-eighth Highlanders. They went through many campaigns together, and on Oct. 21, 1918, both were killed in the same engagement. Both played for many years with the Campbell Rovers.

Mike McCarthy was well known, having played with the International Harvesters and Bricklayers during his short career as a player.

Some of the members of the I. S. F. A. who were wounded are:

Tom Smythe, formerly of the Old Wanderers and other clubs.
A. Ross, Scottish-Americans.
Tom MacPherson, Scottish-Americans.
J. Sveycare, Rangers.
F. Haxton, Palmer park.
R. Drenan, Scottish-Americans.
Charles Ward, Primrose.
L. Fleming, Primrose.

Denys L. Hall of the Washington park team and former president of the Second division, was decorated for bravery.



Maxwell
—a car of rare charm
and—able

YOUR first impression of this present day Maxwell as it passes you on the street is one of decided beauty.

Your first ride in it, whether at the wheel or in the tonneau, tells you of its rare charm.

But after six months you find a new admiration for the Maxwell. You find it shuns the repair shop, that it runs and runs and never stops running.

Then after a year is past you develop an enthusiasm for it that dictionary words don't seem to fully describe.

And then after you have had it for more than the average life of a motor car and you find it far better than even the Maxwell salesman said it was you search for the reason.

This is what you find:

For 5 years Maxwell cars have been built on the single chassis plan. To date 300,000 have been turned out on this plan. Each car better than the other. Each one better looking than the other.

There have been more than 1000 refinements in the Maxwell, but never once have the Maxwell executives swerved from the original program.

You conclude that reliability was designed "into" the car and built "into" it, and that a policy of 300,000-all-alike is the soundest kind of reason for writing your check for a present day Maxwell.

$500,000 TAXES PAID, BUT 200 TIMES THAT DUE

Smietanka Again Warns to "Smile Now or Weep Later."

BY INCOME TAX EDITOR.

"The Jingle of Gold," the little income tax drama being staged just now under the auspices of the $6,000,000,000 war revenue law, reached the end of the first act yesterday with a total paid attendance for the Chicago district of $500,000. Choice "seats" brought as high as $200,000.

Tomorrow the curtain will rise on the second scene, named by Collector Julius F. Smietanka "Smile Now or Weep Later." This act, which will run for twelve days, will draw a much larger attendance; about 200 times greater. It will be featured by many tired feet. The longer Chicagoans wait to pay for their ease the more their feet will ache. And, if they wait until after March 15, the expiration of the twelve days, they'll weep, for it'll cost more.

Receipts Are Slow.

This, in brief, tells the story of the income tax to date, with a little of what's expected. The total, coming from about fifty substations all over Chicago and many stations outside of the city, reached half a million dollars yesterday, or just about one two-hundredth of the amount it is expected will be paid by March 15. This is figuring that only one-quarter of the total amount of income taxes in the First district will be paid then, as the law gives every taxpayer the right to pay this year's taxes in four installments—one-fourth down and the rest quarterly. The largest single income tax check yet received came to Mr. Smietanka yesterday from a well known stock broker for $200,000.

Forms for making returns for incomes of $5,000 and over will be distributed tomorrow. By tomorrow night, Mr. Smietanka announces, every taxpayer who made a return last year will have a form, whether his income, net, is under $5,000 or in excess of that figure.

"Tribune's" Bureau Active.

THE TRIBUNE income tax bureau will have a plentiful supply of the forms for larger incomes, as well as those [illegible] the ones under $5,000, and will [illegible] to all taxpayers who apply. Exp[illegible] to the bureau by Collector Smi[illegible] on hand to give this advice. Collector Smietanka urges that taxpayers who seek quick action avail themselves of the opportunities provided by THE TRIBUNE bureau and those of substations in banks throughout the city, in order to relieve the congestion in the income tax headquarters in the federal building.

N. K. Rada, head of the force of deputies in the main offices, said yesterday that he expects the congestion will become so great this week that it will be necessary to keep the offices opened in the evening.

INCOME TAX ANSWERS

Chicago, Feb. 26.—[Income Tax Editor.]—(1) Please explain meaning of surtax; (2) if a corporation pays tax on dividends does the one who receives the dividend have to pay tax on same again? (3) I bought a farm valued at $25,000 for a member of my family over a year ago. Shortly afterward he was drafted and could not work the same. It has been vacant since and no revenue has been received. Am I entitled to 8 per cent deduction on value of this farm? X.

1. Taxes imposed on net income in excess of $5,000 increasing as the net income increases.

2. Corporations pay no tax on dividends at the source, except in case of nonresident alien stockholders. Dividends are not taxable to the stockholders, but are included in net income for the purpose of determining surtax, if any.

3. No. Reasonable amount only for depreciation of buildings, not to exceed 3 per cent on value of buildings.

T. E. S.—Only one personal exemption of $2,000, plus $200 for minor child, can be taken between yourself and wife.

FAMILY LACKS A HEAD.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—[Income Tax Editor.]—Two young ladies, both wage earners and living with their mother and a small sister and each paying a proportionate amount towards the upkeep of the home, their mother having no income except what she receives from them and one other boarder. Both girls will file income tax schedules. What exemption should they each claim and should the mother also file an income tax schedule? J. P. R.

All are living independently, no one being the head of the family as defined in the law. Each is entitled only to a single person's exemption. Mother need not file schedule unless net income exceeds $1,000.

TAX PAYMENTS NOT TO DISTURB BANK DEPOSITS

Washington, D. C., March 1.—Latest treasury estimates place at $1,000,000,000 the maximum of tax payments to be made March 15 as the first installment of taxes due this year, and officials believe the amount may be smaller.

Since about $800,000,000 of tax certificates are to be redeemed on that date the treasury believes the deposit conditions among banks will not be disturbed greatly.

This explanation was made today in response to inquiries reflecting anxiety among bankers over what was feared might be a condition of heavy withdrawals from banks and accumulation in federal reserve banks.

Contributions to war chest funds, war camp community funds, and similar enterprises in support of war relief work may be deducted in figuring net income for taxation purposes, the internal revenue bureau announced today. Gifts or donations to churches, or to funds for church activities, similarly are deductible. This is an interpretation of the legal provision permitting deductions for donations to incorporated charitable or religious institutions.

LORIMER NAMED IN TESTIMONY ON CONSUMERS CASE

Kantor Asserts Former Politician Backed J. E. Davies.

Newspaper men are perfectly capable of taking care of their own business and need no instructions. So believes Judge Landis.

John M. Kantor, former sales manager of the Consumers' Packing company and political friend of Mayor Thompson's, was on the stand in Judge Landis' court yesterday in the hearing on the motion to dismiss the suit in bankruptcy filed against the company.

Attorney Joseph Weissenbach asked Kantor if he had asked the mayor to use his influence with the secretary of state not to cancel the company's license in 1918.

Kantor Is Stirred.

"I think it is contemptible for an attorney to ask such a question," said Kantor. "I never at any time discussed the company's affairs with the mayor."

Then he turned to Judge Landis. "Will you do me the favor to use your influence with the newspaper reporters present and ask them if they print this allusion to the mayor's name to print all that has been said in full?" he asked.

Judge Landis looked serious, but something like a twinkle came into his eyes.

"I have no jurisdiction over the press. If I tried to run the newspaper men I wouldn't have time to run my court," he repleid.

Kantor added that he also had never asked Gov. Frank O. Lowden or former Gov. Charles S. Deenen to use their influence with the secretary of state to prevent a possible cancellation of the company's license. Kantor formerly was a real estate appraiser for the board of local improvements.

Lorimer's Name Enters.

Kantor testified that he met former United States Senator William Lorimer on a train on his way to New York last fall and discussed with him the company's failure to obtain the sanction of the capital issues committee to sell the company's stock. He testified that Lorimer said such an indorsement was usually obtained through politics or a "pull," and that he told Kantor he knew Joseph E. Davies, an attorney, who possibly could get the desired sanction for the company. Davies was the Wilson candidate for senator in the recent Wisconsin election and was formerly a member of the trade commission.

Kantor said that when he reached New York he met Edward J. Ader, Eli Pfaelzer and several of the stockholders of the company and related what Lorimer had told him. He said they prevailed on Davies to go to New York and paid him $7,500 as a retainer.

The hearing will be resumed Monday morning.

How Great Organization Reduces Cost

ARMOUR and Company grew to be a great business institution by saving the things that formerly were thrown away on the farm.

Pig bristles on the farm are worthless. Through our methods they are utilized in brush-making. Certain glands in hogs, once thrown away when the farmer did his own killing, are now made into medicinal preparations of high value. Even the hoofs and bones are turned to commercial use.

Each of these products is useful, adds something to life, health or comfort.

The farmer shares in the returns from all these products. If it were not for the size of this organization and the facilities for transforming every usable ounce of the hog, the packer would either have to charge the public more for pork or buy hogs from the grower at a lower figure.

The value of anything depends upon its ultimate usefulness. It is only because concerns like Armour have been developed to secure the utmost utility out of the livestock they buy that it is possible to pay farmers more for their animals and yet provide food for the public at true-value levels.

With large volume it becomes possible to make the heavy investments in machinery and equipment necessary to develop new processes and new products. Often it costs hundreds of thousands of dollars in research and experiment before a single pound of some new product can successfully be put upon the market. Such prelimary work is usually beyond the scope of institutions which lack these facilities.

It is in this way that the fundamental benefits of big business are made available to the public. It is a service that both saves for you and adds to your comfort and health.

You can continue to enjoy this service and aid in extending it still further by serving Armour Oval Label foods on your table.

ACCOUNTANTS IN BIG DEMAND

Experts Earning $3,000 to $10,000 a Year and Up

"If more employees in subordinate positions knew that hundreds of big accounting jobs are begging for competent applicants," said the senior member of a well-known concern of Certified Public Accountants, themselves employing a corps of experts at $25 to $50 a day, "and that it is possible to qualify for important accounting work with 300 to 400 hours of special training and preparation, there would be fewer bookkeepers and general office men, and more Auditors, Cost Accountants, and experts capable of earning big salaries."

There is no class of men to whom business today offers more attractive opportunities to rise quickly to executive positions than to those who are trained in Higher Accounting work.

From a $20 ledger clerk to a position paying $7,200 a year is an example of the sudden rises reported by men of ambition, intelligence and determination, who have trained themselves to take advantage of the big opportunities for advancement thrown open in this field.

Nearly every large corporation in the country is appealing to accounting organizations for additional Cost and General Accountants to facilitate industrial expansion, figure costs accurately, calculate Federal Income and Excess Profit taxes and to make regular audits.

Our organization, the largest and best equipped of its kind, has been called upon to train men and women for executive positions in the accounting field—Auditors, Cost Accountants, Junior Accountants, Senior Accountants, Executive Accountants and Certified Public Accountants.

A knowledge of bookkeeping is unnecessary. Desirable applicants are trained from the ground up. Hundreds of men who have been helped to bigger paying positions through our training, report salary increases of from 100% to 400% more than they formerly earned.

We make but very moderate charge for placing you under the personal instruction and guidance of a Certified Public Accountant.

In writing for particulars, state age, present occupation, and, if possible, your telephone number. All communications strictly confidential.

ADDRESS N O 275, TRIBUNE.

GOVERNMENT ANIMALS AT PUBLIC AUCTION

An additional 1500 HORSES and MULES will be sold at auction to the highest bidder, commencing at 9 a. m. March 7, 1919, at AUXILIARY REMOUNT DEPOT, No. 326, Camp Cody, New Mexico.

1000 Horses, Cavalry and Artillery, ranging from 900 to 1400 pounds, and 500 Mules, weighing from 900 to 1300 pounds, will be offered at this time.

These animals are all serviceable, conforming to Government standards, but are in excess of peace basis requirements and must be sold.

Animals will be sold singly, in pairs, fours, tens and car lots to suit bidders.

A halter and shank will be furnished with each animal.

Animals will be allowed to remain at the Depot 24 hours after the sale, and will be loaded at the Remount loading chute under the direction of the purchaser.

The right to reject any and all bids is reserved.

Terms: Cash or certified check.

SPOOKS 'FROM HAPPY HUNTING GROUND' ALL SAD

'Spiritualist Convention Is No Place to Go to Seek Happiness.'

BY MAUDE MARTIN EVERS.

"All you have to do to be a medium," says Mrs. Shields of the Spiritualistic circles, "is to lead a good moral life—providing, of course, that you are endowed mediumistically by nature."

Mrs. Shields is in the embryonic stage; she is taking instruction and treatments from practicing Spiritualists, but she is enthusiastic because she says that she can see things at night now, when she goes to her bedroom and shuts the door.

"The things are vague and thin as yet, like a person far away with a white robe on," she remarked. It is funny how some people try to see things and others retire from active life when they do.

Hold Spooks Convention.

However, to resume, the Spiritualists held a convention yesterday afternoon and evening at Wilcox hall, 636 East Forty-third street.

This convention was a mild foretaste of the one they expect to hold in April. They wish to enroll new members to the roll call and more subscribers to the faith; also, to encourage the mediums in friendship—the "united we stand, together we fall" idea.

Sister Henry opened the meeting and acted as president, as Wilcox hall is her own camping ground; she hangs forth there regularly, holding circles during the week and preaching the faith on Sundays.

There were speeches by prominent mediums of our own city, mediums who have made money as well as spirits materialize.

Like an Insurance Collector.

The Rev. John Wilson, who conducts a Spiritual church on the north side, spoke in a dignified manner for about fifteen minutes. The Reverend John is bald of bean, hooked of nose, obstinate of jaw, and has a keen blue eye, more like an insurance collector than a person of psychic qualities. Prior to his spirit evoking job he was an orthodox minister for nigh onto twenty-five years.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson did not do any reading for the meeting, but the lady mediums who followed on the program did oblige the sad flock of followers who were huddled in the meeting place.

Mrs.—the Rev.—Louisa Vaughn, 540 West Sixty-third street, second flat, readings daily, trod the boards and sang out: "You, yes, you—please hold up your hand, lady; a form appears before me—ah, yes, father, brother, son, or uncle—ah, you do not recognize him? Well, he is a blood relation, anyhow—he says not to worry—not to worry—everything will be all right."

A Great Little Comforter.

One after another they took turns combing the audience. Every one had a reading and was told "not to worry," "a great change for the better" was coming. Mrs. Clara Rathburn, 508 East Twenty-ninth street, was a great little comforter, too. She singled out a saddened heap of a little man and shouted sternly, "They call you quiet, here" and told him, too, that all would be well—"they understood him 'over there.'" He said "yes, mam," and then sank again into his former state.

But Mrs. S. Walthall Seybold, 4648 Cottage Grove avenue, was the prize held for the last. She had the true dramatic instinct. First she was a young soldier marching home to his mother—next she espied an elderly lady and she immediately became a veteran of the civil war.

Then she had a sudden inspiration as she was finishing her recitation. She clapped her hands over her eyes and declared she got the names of Eagan and Conrad. She demanded who recognized them. One of the flock held up her hand—"my father and his nurse."

Then the Collection.

Mrs. S. Walthall Seybold said "water, water, there is on my head." And happy tears rolled from the cheeks of the recognizer as she recalled this peculiar incident of long, long ago.

A sallow young lady rose and played "A Maiden's Prayer" while the collection was taken up.

Then the flock was shepherded into the cold dining room, where a cold supper was served to them upon handing over 35 cents to the doorkeeper, and after that the evening performance was held.

No Place to Seek Happiness.

The evening performance was much the same as the afternoon. A great Mr. Bailey and a Mr. Leon were among the readers, also a Mrs. Blood.

A Spiritualist convention is no place to seek happiness. The ardent believers seem to enjoy themselves mostly by a flow of tears, and the tears are likely to freeze on the cheek with temperature at 10 degrees below zero.

149TH MOTHERS ADOPT WOUNDED AT FORT SHERIDAN

Because their sons are in the army the mothers of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery, largely a Chicago regiment, are acting as mothers to all soldiers at United States general hospital No. 28, Fort Sheridan.

Every Friday a group of these Chicago women carry baskets of cake, candy, cookies, and other good things to eat; and from all parts of the hospital come men on crutches, men with canes, as well as men who are in the last phases of convalescence and awaiting their discharge.

The feasts are spread in the Red Cross headquarters, and from 2 until 4 crowds of wounded men enjoy the hospitality of their "mothers pro tem."

"Our boys are in the army of occupation," Mrs. A. W. Adams, mother of P. F. Adams of Battery B, One Hundred and Forty-ninth infantry, "and so we can fill them with cake and cookies as mothers enjoy doing. The best we can do is bring things for the other boys, and hope some other mothers are doing the same for our sons."

Field Museum May Study Catalina Archæology

The Field Museum of Natural History has been invited to participate in a search for relics of the aborigines who once inhabited Catalina island. William Wrigley Jr., who recently purchased the island, has engaged George M. Heye, archæologist, of New York City, to conduct the search. Mr. Heye spent last week at the Field museum, on his way to the coast. Mr. Wrigley, who is a director of the Field museum, has extended on offer to the officers and directors of the museum to take part in the relic hunt.

Girls Explore Laboratory; Wood Alcohol Kills One

Elizabeth Bonfote, 11 years old, 1231 South Peoria street, died in the county hospital yesterday of poison. The girl was visiting the home of a playmate on Friday whose father is a physician and were exploring the laboratory in the home when they found a bottle of wood alcohol. Elizabeth drank most of its contents. The police are investigating.

GIRL'S DEATH DECLARED ACCIDENT.

That Miss Vivian Metz, 18 years old, 116 West Ontario street, came to her death by accidental gas asphyxiation was the verdict yesterday of a coroner's jury. The girl was found asphyxiated in her bedroom Friday night.

KILLS HIMSELF IN THIRD EFFORT; BLAMES ILLNESS

After two attempts to kill himself had failed during the last several years, Fred W. Lewis, 4132 West Congress street, a printer, committed suicide early yesterday in his home by inhaling gas. His wife, Mrs. Cora L. Lewis, found the lifeless body of her husband in the bathtub.

Two notes were found by the widow, one addressed to herself and the other to the world in general. They explained the suicide as due to an illness of several years' standing.

One of the notes read:

"Dear wife: Here I sit by your picture, loving and caressing you. My eyesight, hearing, and memory are going fast, and I seem beyond human aid. I hope the union will do something for you. I pray we may be reunited in the other land. Good-by, dear wife, good-by. HUBBY."

FALLING SAFE PERILS FIGHTERS AT $15,000 FIRE

Firemen fighting a spectacular blaze at 61-63 West South Water street had a narrow escape last night when a safe crashed to the ground from the third floor. Members of engine companies 11 and 13 were in the building. Assistant Fire Marshal Ed Buckley ordered all men from the building and directed their efforts toward saving adjoining property.

The blaze started in the third floor at 61 West South Water street. Crossed wires were believed responsible. The fire was discovered by men of fire engine company 13, which is located on Dearborn street, almost across the alley from the scene. The flames burned down the elevator shafts to the first floor. The buildings, which are landmarks in "commission row," were burned out.

The firm of Max Guhl & Brothers occupied the building at No. 63. Mark Owen & Co. held the building at No. 61.

P. C. Sears company, the Pierce Nut company, Bassi Fruit company, and E. A. Thomas company, at 59 South Water street, suffered slight losses by water and smoke.

The total damage was estimated at $15,000.

Hundreds of theatergoers were delayed and stopped to watch the firemen. Fire boats responded to the 4-11 alarm and street car traffic north was tied up.

C. P. Shea Indicted on Charges of Auto Stealing

The legal troubles of Cornelius P. Shea were revived yesterday when three indictments each against him and William Vannotte, Edward Pape, and Walter Scott were made public, charging larceny of automobiles.

The Buoyancy of the Cadillac

Buoyant, is the word that owners picturesquely use in describing one outstanding quality of Cadillac performance.

In the front seat, or in the tonneau, there actually is a sense of floating through space.

Mere weight contributes a certain steadiness to a motor car.

But Cadillac steadiness is the steadiness of substantial, balanced weight, with a motive power suggestive of wings.

The power of the V-type engine is so great, so constant, and so fluid in its action, that it triumphs completely over the inert metals which it propels so buoyantly over the road.

The vigor and life of his car, its constant readiness, ever and always—these are things that help to make a Cadillac owner the enthusiast he is.

Back of spontaneous delight in a motor car must be an abiding confidence.

And, of course, even-temper and uniform performance are sources of lasting satisfaction in Cadillac possession.

The Berry Ventilator

The only successful, indestructible ventilator ever devised. Tens of thousands in use, and now that it is possible to get steel we are preparing for a big increase in business.

Last year over a million ventilating devices of one kind or another were sold, in spite of practically no building operations, for use in private residences, office buildings, factories, schools and hospitals. At least 90% were without merit—mere makeshifts—ready for the junk heap within a month. They were made of wood, cloth and other destructible materials. They rotted and warped, but above all they never served the purpose intended.

And Yet People Wasted Good Money on These Flimsy Contraptions

We are ready to supply the tremendous demand for a practical ventilator. Every Berry Ventilator sold sells others. It is the only perfect ventilator—admits a continuous flow of fresh air without any dust or dirt—keeps out rain and snow—locks windows and lasts indefinitely.

REALIZING SALES CAUSE GRAIN PRICES TO FALL

March Corn Gains Fraction, but Other Futures Are Off.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Support to the grain and provision markets was good at times yesterday, but realizing sales toward the last, combined with increased pressure from short sellers, made corn close ¼@⅜c lower on the distant futures, while March gained ¼c. March oats were weak and lost 1¼c, while deferred deliveries were off ¼@½c. Realizing provisions carried pork off 25@60c at the last, while lard gained 15@20c, having good support from the big packers, and short ribs were 5c higher on May and 2½c lower on July. Outside markets were moderately lower on all grains.

Closing prices, compared with a week ago, show gains on corn of 1⅝@1⅞c. Oats are irregular with March off 1⅞c and May ⅛c, but July up ½c. Pork is off 52½@60c, lard 25c lower on May and 10c higher on July, and short ribs lost 35@42½c.

Corn Market Erratic.

Corn market fluctuated in an erratic manner. Early there was buying by local traders on the belief that private reports on farm reserves and a small advance followed, but after the reports were issued there was selling and a reaction of 1½c, with the finish on a fair rally with March at $1.31¾, May at $1.25⅜, and July at $1.21⅜.

Estimates on farm reserves ranged from 827,000,000 to 835,000,000 bu, indicating a disappearance of around 1,866,000,000 bu corn since Nov. 1, or 60,000,000 bu in excess of last year. The showing was most surprising when the excellent pasturage last fall, and the small primary run is considered.

The hog price seemed to have lost its influence, and the trade on the whole were waiting for something new to develop. The cash market was featureless. Sample values were unchanged with domestic shipping sales of 20,000 bu. Receipts, 88 cars, of which 8 cars were contract. Latter is now No. 3 or better, with the No. 3 deliverable at 2½c discount, and No. 3 white and yellow at 2c discount. There were no deliveries on March contracts.

Primary points received 2,913,000 bu the last week, or 11,753,000 bu less than last year. An Indiana cash handler sold 3 cars of No. 4 mixed to go to Indianapolis at equal to $1.35, track Chicago, or 6@7c over the spot market. Weekly forecast was for generally unsettled weather, with normal temperatures the latter half.

Better Tone in Cash Oats.

Local feed dealers and shippers competed for the offerings of 60 cars oats here, and premiums were firmer. Standards brought 1@1¼c over, and good No. 3 whites ¼@¾c over March. There was some grain sold to go to three points in Texas. Domestic sales all told aggregated 40,000 bu. Owing to the decline in futures spot sales were ½@1c lower than the previous day.

March oats showed pronounced weakness and broke 1¼c, closing within ⅛c of the bottom at 57⅛c. Deliveries aggregated 445,000 bu. Deferred futures followed corn and finished easy with May at 59⅜c and July at 58½c. The farm reserve reports were irregular, showing 485,000,000 bu to 562,000,000 bu, the latter being only 33,000,000 bu less than last year.

Arrivals of oats at the seaboard the last week were 2,146,000 bu, including 1,764,000 bu at New York, compared with 1,274,000 bu last year. Primary receipts of 4,029,000 bu were 4,390,000 bu less than last year.

Exporters After Rye.

Export bids were again in evidence for rye, with sales of 25,000 bu at $1.57, track Baltimore. Offerings in the sample market were small at 11 cars, and No. 2 sold at $1.46@1.47, an advance of ½c. Deliveries 50,000 bu. Milwaukee was 3c higher and Minneapolis 1c lower.

Offerings of barley were small, and with a good demand prices were unchanged to 1c higher, with sales at 88@99c. Deliveries 140,000 bu. Receipts, 49 cars. Milwaukee and Minneapolis were unchanged.

Timothy seed unchanged. Country lots, $7.00@10.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 2½c higher; March, $4.57½; May, $4.65, per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed unchanged. Country lots, $25.00@36.00, per 100 lbs. Toledo, 10c lower; March, $24.90 per bu of 60 lbs.

Realizing in Provisions.

Holders of provisions were disposed to sell owing to the delay in fixing the hog price, which is up to the president and the war board. Until they make a decision the 17½c minimum holds. A feature was the heavy selling of July ribs by Ware & Leland and the sale of a big round lot of May lard by Hately to Armour at $25. The latter was the best buyer of lard, while buying of ribs and pork was scattered. Immense shipments of lard and cured meats for the week, 68,154,000 lbs, compare with 56,501,000 lbs for the previous week and 22,328,000 lbs last year were without especial effect. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Farm reserves of corn, as shown by the Snow, Bartlett-Frazier, and the Clement-Curtis reports, showed a remarkable disappearance of corn since Nov. 1. Based on the Clement-Curtis figures there has been 1,875,000,000 bu marketed or consumed during the first four months of the crop year, compared with 1,806,000,000 bu the previous season and 1,863,000,000 bu two years ago. The reports both showed that farm consumption had been very heavy, despite the mild winter, late pasturage, and enforced economy, while last year pasturage was poor and the winter exceptionally severe. Reserves in the seven surplus states, as given by Clement-Curtis, were 495,000,000 bu, against 749,000,000 bu last year and 363,000,000 bu two years ago. Consumption of corn and oats to March 1 aggregates 2,933,000,000 bu, or 8 per cent over the five year average. Country elevators and mills hold 72,293,000 bu of wheat, or 5 per cent more than last year. Details follow:

Snow-Bartlett-Frazier—Corn, 1919, 32.1 per cent, 836,000,000 bu; oats, 36.6 per cent, 562,000,000 bu; wheat, 13.5 per cent, 126,000,000 bu.

Clement-Curtis—Corn, 1919, 31.4 per cent, 827,000,000 bu; oats, 31.5 per cent, 485,000,600 bu; wheat, 9.7 per cent, 88,000,000 bu.

Government, 1918—Corn, 20.9 per cent, 1,293,000,000 bu; oats, 37.5 per cent, 595,000,000 bu; wheat, 17.1 per cent, 111,000,000 bu.

There was a more mixed sentiment in the grain trade at the close yesterday. Those who are bullish seem confident of their position and regarded the statement of farm stocks and consumption as especially in favor of their side. The bears, however, were more disposed to sell stuff on any indication of weakness and said that there is enough stuff to go around. Those friendly to the buying side believe that there will be no pressure of corn throughout the season and that with no stocks in store they have the best of the argument and that declines will only be temporary.

Cash houses were liberal sellers of March oats yesterday, and they are off 1⅞c for the week. The farm reserves were a surprise to those who had expected oats to do better, although they are materially under last year's. There are good reserves and with the large visible supply there is all that the trade needs.

Traders regarded the report from London announcing that the allied economic commission recommended an immediate lifting of the embargo on food exports to Germany as a most significant factor as indicating the possible increase in the buying for that country.

"The 1918 corn crop proved moderate and of the regular quality, and in the long run there should be no burdensome supply," says C. E. Lewis of Minneapolis. "As a general statement, the guaranteed high price of wheat should prove of benefit to the general grain list. Those best posted on the live stock situation are our authority for the statement that good prices for cattle, hogs, and sheep may be expected for two or three years to come. Certainly the agricultural prospects were never so favorable for the producer. Furthermore, the agricultural prosperity is not a sudden prosperity, but it is a liberal accretion to a steady increase in farming wealth for a number of years of augmenting land values and profitable returns."

One of the largest cash handlers in St. Louis says that he is unable to get shipping directions on any of the corn he has sold to Texas. The Texas people are either asking that the corn be held or offering to resell. They resold corn yesterday in liberal quantities at the lowest figures made this season. The east is in the same condition as Texas, although they have liquidated more than have those in the southwest.

L. L. Winters of Hulburd, Warren & Chandler says the indications are that the corn market is temporarily oversold and should news of a bullish nature appear shorts might be forced to cover. Receipts and stocks are so small that the market would be sensitive to any increased buying power, but, barring a materially increased demand for the corn itself, he believes that lower prices will eventually be witnessed.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Cash wheat showed a firm undertone, with sales of No. 1 northern at Chicago at $2.28@2.30, while No. 2 northern was $2.24@2.27. Receipts, 20 cars. St. Louis was unchanged, with a fair demand and light offerings.

Demand for cash corn at Chicago was fair. Bulk of the sales were at unchanged prices, but a few cars sold at ½c advance. Offerings were not large. St. Louis was unchanged to 3c lower, Kansas City and Peoria unchanged, and Milwaukee 2c lower.

Shippers and feed men were in the market for cash oats at Chicago, and while futures were weak, spot prices were off only ½@1c. St. Louis was ½c higher to ½c lower, Kansas City unchanged to 1½c lower, and Milwuakee ½c lower. Cash grain prices in leading markets follows:

RAILROAD LIST IN SPOTLIGHT OF EXCHANGE

Dividend Paying Properties Make Good Gains During the Day.

The New York Times.

New York, March 1.—[Special.]—The trading interest in stocks was transferred to a considerable degree in today's short session from the industrial to the railroad list.

The product was a forward swing among the dividend paying rails which extended from 1 to 2 points, with lesser advances marked up elsewhere. Southern Pacific, Reading, Union Pacific, and Chesapeake and Ohio stood out most prominently, excepting Colorado and Southern, which rose more than three points on a sudden increase of buying.

New Haven attracted attention with a larger gain than the average of the lower priced issues. It was noteworthy of the general strength of the market that a number of the more volatile industrial stocks continued to move upward while the railroad stimulation was in evidence and selling pressure was nearly everywhere conspicuous because of its absence.

On a Saturday, after a week of rising quotations, profit taking would be expected, yet today's business appeared to be fairly free from realizing transactions.

President's Attitude Factor.

The renewal of bullish attention among the railroad shares presumably reflected overnight consideration of news that the president was not considering the early return of the roads to stockholders, at least without an effort to provide adequate legislation for them. Since the possibility disappeared that congress might act on the five year control proposal, more or less confidence had been expressed in financial circles that nothing radical would be done by the government.

Nevertheless definite assurance of a normal procedure under the railroad control act was more satisfactory than well grounded deductions and Mr. Hines' letter to the heads of congressional committees was of a character to enhance confidence among security owners that the present program would be carried forward. This entails various improvements and betterments, preparations for which should be of distinct advantage to steel producing and fabricating concerns, as well as equipment makers.

Complaints Are Voiced.

Complaint has been voiced of late in some quarters of the steel trade that the roads were far less active in the market than had been expected. High costs worked to check the outlay which the railroad administration had contemplated under the stress of the war emergency, and, presumably, it was decided to move slowly until congress had granted additional funds for use in the current year.

Now that the request for $750,000,000 to go into the revolving fund has been received favorably by the house and the continuance of present operating conditions is certain for some time to come, it would seem that the roads would shortly be large buyers of rails, structural rails, and equipment.

French exchange continued to move against Paris at this center today under further large offerings.

COTTON TRADE NEWS

NEW YORK, March 1.—Liquidation and selling by the south created easiness and lower prices, from which there was a moderate reaction toward the last, but the close, while showing a small gain on the near deliveries, reported losses of 4@6 points on the deferred. It was said by one of the leading financiers that it would be advisable to see if European countries have the money before American manufacturers accept their orders. This was taken as indicating that probably the buying for foreign account might be curtailed. The covering by shorts at the last had a strengthening influence. News from the south was somewhat more assuring. Prices follow:

PRODUCE TRADE

Butter prices advanced ½c for whole milk extras and ¼c on standards, the latter being 52c and the former 55@55½c for the 92 scores. It is said that part of the large purchases reported for export have been either sold out or canceled. Receipts for the week were 26,823 tubs, against 49,280 tubs last year. Cold storage stocks are 3,588,000 lbs in Chicago, showing a good decrease for the week. Prices in eastern markets were unchanged.

Eggs were in good supply with prices unchanged. Cold weather made holders less anxious to sell. First and fresh were 41c. Receipts for the week show a good increase over the previous week and last year. The white bean market is firmer at $6.50@7.25 for hand picked pea beans.

Live poultry sold at recent prices with offerings light.

Fancy potatoes were held at full prices, with some sales at a 5c advance, at $1.75@1.80, with fair stock down to $1.60@1.65, sacked. Receipts for the week were 248 cars, against 256 cars the previous week and 213 cars last year. Strawberries were in large supply at 40@50c a quart for the best Floridas.

COFFEE PRICES.

NEW YORK, March 1.—The market for coffee futures opened at a decline of 3 to 7 points under scattering liquidation, but steadied on covering by near month shorts, with the market closing net 5 points lower to 4 points higher.

Closing bids: May, 14.59c; July, 14.00c; September, 13.73c; October, 13.65c; December, 13.50c; January, 13.45c; March, 13.35c.

Spot coffee was dull; Rio 7s, 15½c; Santos 4s, 21¼c. The official cables showed no change in the Rio market. Santos spots were unchanged and futures unchanged to 50 reis higher. Santos reported a clearance of 53,000 bags for New York. Brazilian port receipts, 32,000 bags; Jundiahy receipts, 25,000 bags.

Bankruptcy Petitions.

Petition of the Smith Wallace Shoe company et al. to have Alfred Butterfield adjudged a bankrupt; claims about $820.

Petition of F. N. Erkeuswick; liabilities, $620; assets, $168.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Plans for financing the Erie Railroad company are being considered by the railroad administration. One suggestion has been that the present notes be extended for three years at 6 per cent, with a bonus of $15 per $1,000 to present holders of the notes, the price of the new notes to be $98.50. The $15 bonus would represent the difference between their par value and the price of the new issue.

The separation litigation against the Butte and Superior Mining company, originally slated for March 3, has been postponed by the United States Supreme court until March 19.

The New York stock exchange has received notice from the Norfolk and Western railway of a proposal to increase the road's common stock by $100,000,000. The issue is to be authorized by the stockholders.

A rumor gained circulation yesterday afternoon that the advance in American International stock is due to the probability that 60 per cent of the paid in certificates now outstanding would be called in and fully paid up stock issued in its place.

The Peoples Trust and Savings bank of Chicago, anticipating renewed activity in real estate loan and farm mortgage business, has appointed Harry L. Schmitz as manager of these departments in its institution.

All of the leading producers of copper have again reduced their price, and sales have been made by them at 15 cents a pound in New York. The quantities taken have been insignificant, and big buyers have not been attracted.

The situation in the coal industry showed some improvement during the last week, but continued generally dull, according to Black Diamond. With a few exceptions, mines are running on only part time; in some cases they are being operated only one day a week. Little or no inquiry is being made on future steam contracts.

Following the announcement of the formation of a protective committee for stock and bond holders of the Interborough Consolidated corporation the opinion was expressed yesterday that a receiver for the company by April 1 was a strong possibility.

A reward of $500 is offered for information that will lead to the return of five missing Armour & Co. 6 per cent gold debenture bonds, series B7519 to 7523. Information should be reported to the Chicago stock exchange.

Gentlemen:—

Our continuously availing ourselves of your service bespeaks the merit of same.

Your service enables us to do a much larger volume of business than otherwise, with the same overhead expenses. With this service there is no occasion for ever failing to discount all accounts payable and receive the benefits accruing thereby. Under this arrangement we are enabled to use our bank credit in our manufacturing business, where the turn-over is much slower.

We have been doing business with you for several years, and we are well pleased."

GAIN IN STEWART MANUFACTURING SALES IS SHOWN

President Says Concern Starts New Year with a Clean Sheet.

In a report to the shareholders of the Stewart Manufacturing corporation, L. H. La Chance, president, says: "You will find upon examination of the balance sheet that our financial position is sound. The net profits for the year (before deducting special charges and after providing a liberal allowance for depreciation, $91,861) were $331,737. On account of moving our factory and the building of an up to date plant with the necessary changes in our capital liabilities, the corporation has had considerable special charges to meet. These, however, have been charged off and outside of current obligations we begin the new fiscal year with a clean sheet.

"Our operations in 1918 were considerably hampered. During the first three months we were confined to the manufacture of dies for government work, while in the middle of the year we moved our factory and in consequence our production and profits were decreased. In the latter part of 1918 when we had our factory running at maximum production, we had to again readjust our business on account of the cancellation of various contracts. However, we are glad to report that on account of the large number of customers we have, we were able to readjust conditions rapidly and for the month of January the corporation was enabled to show an increase over the corresponding month in 1917. The gain is about 120 per cent."

Report on Railroads.

In a statement issued yesterday by Slason Thompson of the bureau of railway news there is presented a record of earnings of 260,000 miles of railroad. Comparison is made with 1915 and 1917. Discussing the figures, Mr. Thompson says:

"Through the monthly return can be traced the great growth in traffic due to the war; a partial paralysis of traffic in the winter months of 1917-18, and the immediate response to the advance in passenger fares in June, 1918, and of freight rates in July. It should be noted that the revenues went above $400,000,000 in June and over $500,000,000 in August." A table of monthly earnings makes the following exhibit:

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, March 1.—Cotton goods today were irregular and weak. Yarns were quiet, spinners voting to curtail their output. South Carolina mills voted to reduce their running time to fifty-five hours from sixty hours a week. Burlaps were weak. A leading line of French serges was sold up for the fall season and withdrawn. Steady orders came forward in moderate volume for men's wear for fall.

Expansion

Frank D. Chase, Inc., has moved from the Peoples Gas Building, and now occupies an entire building at 645 North Michigan Avenue, corner of Erie Street.

This change was made necessary by the continued growth of the business and the renewed demand for larger quarters which could no longer be supplied in the former location.

After March 1, Frank D. Chase, Inc., will be better than ever prepared to design, build and equip industrial plants quickly and efficiently.

HAIL ABSENTEE LANDLORDISM AS U. S. PROBLEM!

Illinois Legislature to Hear Plaint of Scully Tenants.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., March 1.—[Special.]—The row between the Lord Scully land interests and the Scully tenants in north central Illinois is to be aired Wednesday before the agriculture committee of the house of representatives. A possible development of the hearing, it is intimated, may be an effort to establish an entirely new policy in Illinois with respect to the "absentee landlord" system.

The dispute directly affects many Scully holdings in Grundy, Livingston, Logan, and other counties lying between Springfield and Chicago. The trouble started during the fall, centering around Morris, where protest was made by tenants to an increase in rentals that the tenants considered prohibitive and amounting in some cases to eviction.

Say Readjustment Is Needed.

The position of the representatives of the Scullys, who live in Ireland and own thousands of acres of the best Illinois land, is that the leases have been made at ridiculously low figures and that the rentals have been raised only because the bulk of the tenants have failed to care properly for the lands. The time has come, say the Scully people, to readjust the terms to comply with present day conditions.

Another significant hearing to be held Wednesday will be that on the Anti-Saloon league's search and seizure bill, directed at the illegal sale of liquor in dry territory created by the Illinois local option act.

The original form of the bill has been altered so that it would be practically impossible, the drys admit, for a man's home to be entered forcibly and search made for liquors. League officials said today that it is not the avowed purpose of the measure to prevent an individual from having liquors in his home for his own use.

Fight Public Utilities Law.

On Tuesday afternoon will come the first big drive at the public utilities act, when the foes and friends of the present law will combat before the public utilities committee of the senate. Many of the downstate members seem determined to put the entire law out of business and the proposition is to pass the Duvall bill, which is nothing more or less than a flat repeal of the existing act. The fate of the knockout movement depends somewhat upon the position the railroads and the big public utility companies will take.

Nobody here seems to know what is to be the position of Chicago, as a unit. The presumption is that the city prefers a 100 per cent degree of home rule for itself over its utilities, if the legislature would grant to the city the same powers that are now exercised by the state utilities commission.

Boxing Bill Hearing.

A fourth feature of the week will be the public hearing on the proposed boxing bill set for Wednesday afternoon before a joint session of the license committees of senate and house. The ministers of Chicago, it is understood, will be here in force, some of them to object fiercely to any form of a law that would permit boxing, others to speak for a "reasonable" bill.

The first draft of the proposed constitutional bill may be ready before the end of the week, and the policy on direct primary changes is probably to be a development of the week.

TRAIN KILLS RAIL FOREMAN.

Harry Meisebach, 52 years old, 1407 North Seventeenth avenue, Melrose Park, was instantly killed yesterday when he was struck by a Chicago & Northwestern railroad switch engine in the Proviso yards. Meisebach was employed by the road as a foreman.

JUSTICE CARTER URGES POINTS OF NEW BASIC LAW

Favors Home Rule, Short Ballot, and Old Style Conventions.

Justice Orrin N. Carter of the Supreme court of Illinois wants a larger measure of home rule for Chicago and other large cities of the state. He wants a shorter ballot and a return to the system of party conventions in politics. He expressed these views in a speech yesterday in the rooms of the Covenant Club of Chicago on the subject of "The Proposed Constitutional Convention."

"Illinois has outworn the constitution of 1863," he declared. "Our friends of those days could not see ahead forty years; they could not see the great industrial problems that arise in cities like this, and they could not foresee the 'wet and dry' situation.

Industrial Problems Increase.

"The great industrial problems which used to come to the Supreme court from Chicago are becoming more and more numerous. They come from all parts of the state. We should amend the constitution to remove the constant necessity for Supreme court action in purely industrial problems.

"We need a constitutional convention to take up the question of revenues which has been created in every municipality by the adoption of prohibition.

"To have good government in our cities we need a larger measure of home rule. Chicago also needs wise citizenship. Changing the constitution and laws will not produce good government without wise citizenship.

Urges Shorter Ballot.

"To attain to wise citizenship and in order to have a good city government and a good state government we must have a shorter ballot.

"I want the parties to select the judges, and the best men possible for best men among the lawyers for all public offices, under the old party convention system, if we can restore it and protect it with a good public conscience. The party convention is far preferable to the primary system.

"If we hold a constitutional convention, the fundamental things on which there is common agreement should be voted upon as a whole. The controversial matters like women's suffrage, the initiative and referendum, and special industrial problems should be put up for separate vote."

Boy Saves Companion's Life as Clothes Burn

Heroic efforts of James Monaco, 13 years old, 1226 West Taylor street, probably saved the life of his 12 year old plyamate, Michael Larchese, 1224 West Taylor street, yesterday, when the latter's clothing caught on fire as the boys were playing with matches. The Larchese boy became hysterical and ran about his house crying "Put me out!" The Monaco boy chased him and finally was able to trip and throw him down. He then tore at the ignited clothing, wrapped his coat about his chum, and succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

Beginning Monday Evening,
March 3rd, at 7 o'Clock.

A vigorous, virile "personality" has been the big factor in making the Winter Garden the great success it is today. Its leadership as the foremost exponent of the "eat and be entertained" idea has long been acknowledged. Always, Winter Garden Revues have been interesting and entertaining in a clean and wholesome way, in the main original, and always with a definite aim and purpose back of them. In the completion of arrangements which enables Mr. Weiss to present to his patrons tomorrow evening Mr. B. D. Berg's masterful revue, "Looping the Loop," the Winter Garden should, and undoubtedly will, reach the zenith of its glory as Chicago's most pretentious restaurant-showshop.

AS "Looping the Loop" is to be a "chummy" revue a little sidelight as to its creators should be interesting:

Mr. Berg, the producer, is known to the New York theatrical fraternity as the "Ziegfeld of Vodeville," a reputation gained through the production of many elaborately staged, beautifully gowned, rollicking girl shows. Mr. Berg says the chorus in the forthcoming Winter Garden Revue is typical of Ziegfeldian beauties.

And, in Joseph Burrowes, composer, lyric writer, designer and artist, Georgie Cohan has a real rival in embryo. Joe was doing a social "stunt" in New York when discovered by Mr. Berg. This young chap wrote the music, the lyrics, and designed the costumes for "Looping the Loop." The Winter Garden will no doubt be packed Monday night to pass judgment on his work.

The task of "putting the folks through the stunts" has fallen to the lot of Al Laughlin, which means that all will be "set and ready" when the curtain goes up on the opening number.

Among the featured principals in "Looping the Loop" are Al Wohlman, Valerie Walker, Bobby Folsom and Ned Norton. Others in the cast are Mlle. Marion, Merle Horton, Martinez Randall and Frank D. Reilly. Mildred Darling, Ina Arnberg, Edith Hayden, Babe Rolfe, Hazel Raye, Grace Reahms, Adelaide Hayden and Mildred Schwabacher constitute the "Honey Bunch."

Prominent among the production numbers included in the "Looping the Loop" program are "Bachelor Days," "Isn't It Wonderful," "Apologies to Chu Chin Chow," "Ring a Ring of Roses," "Our Bungalow on Paw Paw Lake," "Wibbly Wabbly Walk, "Vanities Whirl."

To see "Looping the Loop" to the best advantage you should call Wabash 4800 and reserve a table.

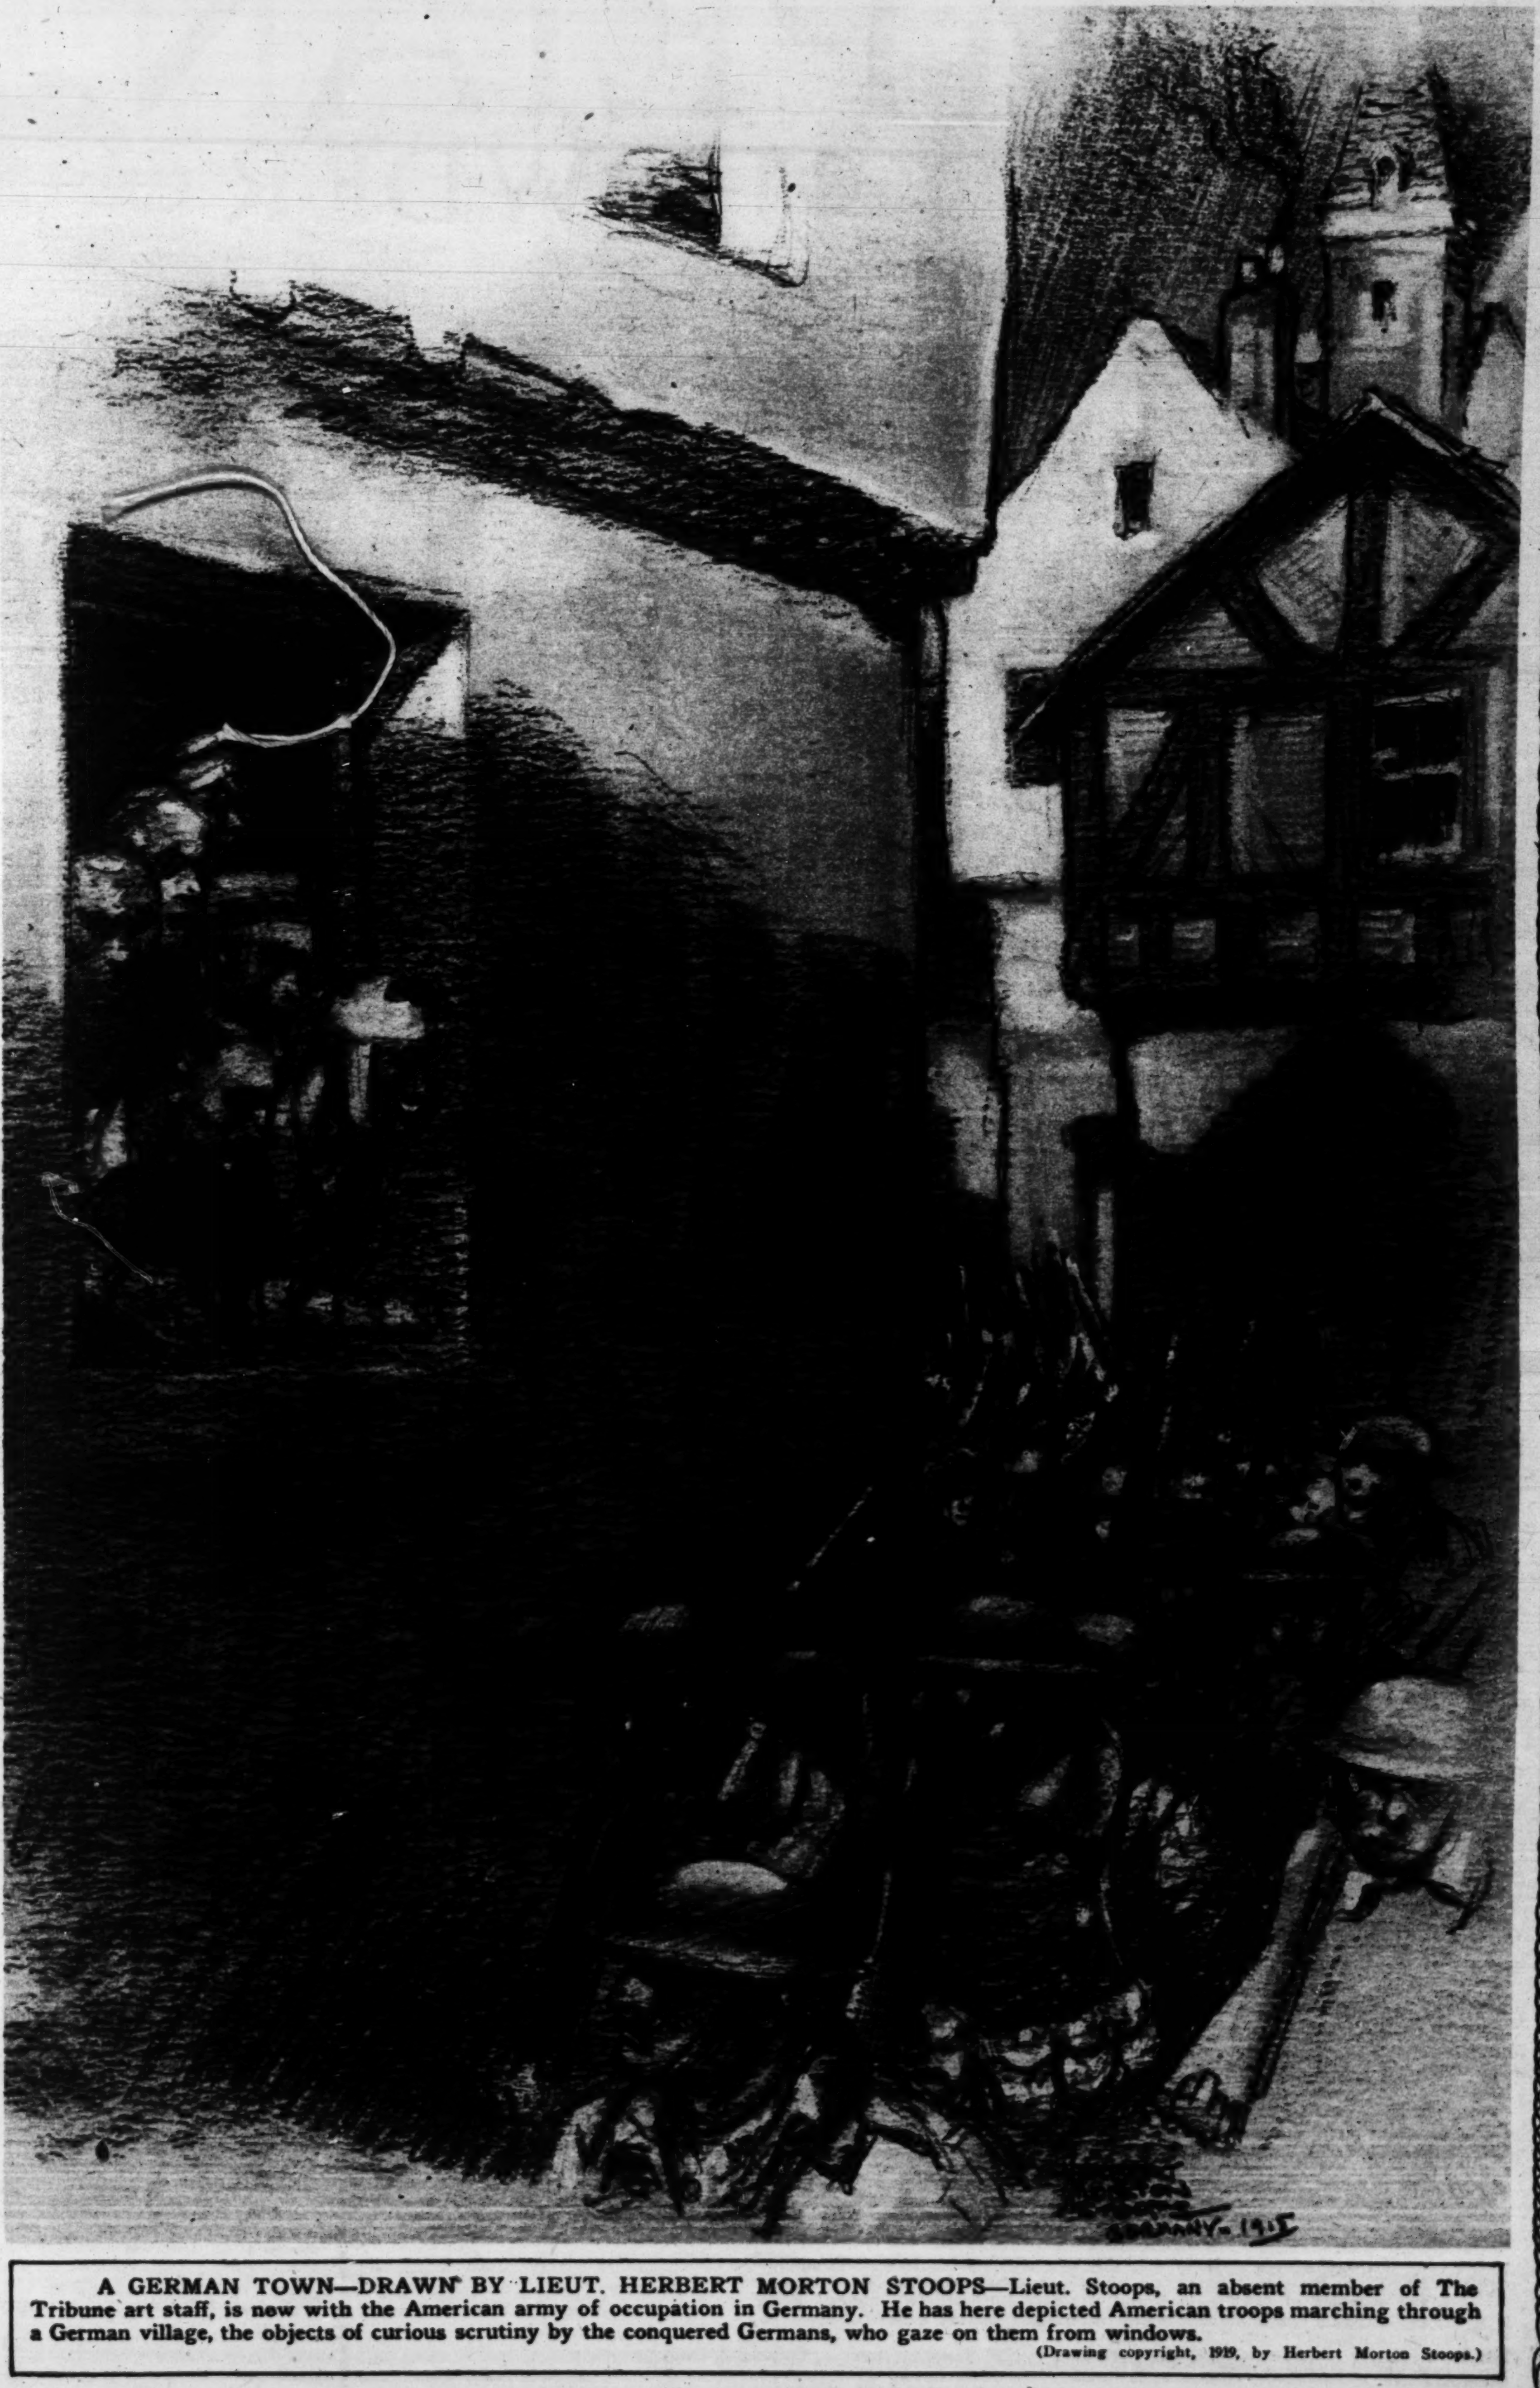
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

MARCH 2, 1919



A GERMAN TOWN—DRAWN BY LIEUT. HERBERT MORTON STOOPS—Lieut. Stoops, an absent member of The Tribune art staff, is now with the American army of occupation in Germany. He has here depicted American troops marching through a German village, the objects of curious scrutiny by the conquered Germans, who gaze on them from windows.

Let us send you this Oliver for free trial

Then save $43

This is the identical $100 Oliver, Model 9, our latest and best. We continue to sell it under the plan we adopted during the war. We learned economies then in selling which enable us to save the $43 it formerly cost us to sell you an Oliver.

We learned that it was unnecessary to have great numbers of traveling salesmen and numerous, expensive branch houses throughout the country. We were also able to discontinue many other superfluous, costly sales methods. You benefit by these savings.

Only our sales plan has changed. Not the Oliver. Our new plan is to ship direct from the factory to you, depending upon the Oliver to be its own salesman.

You may order direct from this advertisement, without sending a penny. The coupon brings an Oliver for free trial.

When the Oliver comes to you, let it prove its superiority and saving. You be the judge with no eager salesman present to influence you.

If you do not agree that it is the finest typewriter built, regardless of price, simply return it, express collect. Even the outgoing transportation charges will then be refunded.

The Oliver for $57 makes a $100 price appear extravagant. Remember this is not a second-hand or rebuilt machine. If any typewriter is worth $100 it is this brand new Oliver.

Furthermore, it is as easy to buy the Oliver as it is to try it. If, after trying it five days, you decide to keep it, you merely pay $3 per month until the $57 is paid. This is less than 10c per day.

This Oliver is being bought by the thousands. Our plan, conceived when this country entered the war, has met a tremendous welcome. We have repeatedly increased our production facilities. Note at the left a few of the great concerns using the Oliver. And remember that it is being bought by thousands of individuals. It has been aptly called the people's typewriter.

In every particular, this splendid Oliver is the finest that 24 years of experience can produce. A better typewriter is impossible. It has all the latest improvements. It is noted for its handsome appearance, richly enameled olive green and polished nickel; its durability and workmanship. Do you know of any typewriter which combines so many advantages, yet offered at such a low price and easy terms?

This Oliver has a standard keyboard. So anyone may turn to it without the slightest hesitancy. It is speedy and has an untiring action—with lightest touch.

Don't buy—don't rent—until you have investigated this fine, economical Oliver. Note that the coupon below brings either an Oliver for Free Trial, or further information.

Pompeian Beauty Powder
Pompeian Day Cream
Pompeian Bloom

POMPEIAN
BEAUTY POWDER

You, too, Can Have Beauty Instantly!

Men cluster around her. And why not, for who can deny the witchery of a beautiful complexion? A white skin, lustrous and soft as satin, with the rich color glowing in the cheeks.

First a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream. Work this softening vanishing cream well into the skin, so that the powder will not stick in spots. Now the Pompeian BEAUTY Powder, with its pearly touch and captivating perfume. Then a bit of Pompeian BLOOM on the cheeks. This touch of color adds the bloom of youthful beauty and makes your eyes seem darker and more lustrous. Presto! What a change in a few moments.

Pompeian DAY Cream (Vanishing). Keeps the skin smooth and velvety. Removes face shine. Has an exquisite perfume. All druggists, 50c.

Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. Adds a lovely clearness to the skin. Stays on unusually long. Pure and harmless. Shades, white, brunette and flesh. All druggists, 50c.

Pompeian BLOOM. A rouge that is imperceptible when properly applied. With vanity mirror and French puff; in three shades, light, dark and medium (the popular shade). All druggists, 50c.

Special Half-Box Offer

(Positively only one to a family)

To one person only in a family, we will send a box of Pompeian BEAUTY Powder (containing exactly one-half regular 50c package) and samples of DAY Cream and BLOOM for only two dimes. With the samples you can make many interesting beauty experiments.

THEIR DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE—Look well at this picture. In it you behold four famous people engaged in that momentous act known as "signing the papers." The four are: David Wark Griffith, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks. The gentlemen flanking them are the lawyers in the case. The papers being signed are those of the contract which forms the United Artists' corporation through which these screen folk will finance and release their own productions. Former Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo will act as chief attorney. (In parenthesis be it said that William S. Hart had contemplated belonging to the corporation, but for reasons best known to himself backed out at the last minute.)

"CORNS"

Lift them off

Seems magic! Apply a few drops of "Freezone" on a tender corn or callus, instantly that corn or callus stops aching; then, shortly, you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without any pain or soreness. So easy—you'll laugh!

It Doesn't Hurt a bit!

Hard corns, soft corns, also corns between the toes and the "hard skin" calluses on the bottoms of the feet lift off without irritation.

"Freezone" Costs Only Few Cents

Tiny bottles of "Freezone" cost only a few cents at drug stores—anywhere. Keep Freezone handy on the dresser and never let a corn ache twice.

RECEIVER OF $5,000,000 WEDDING GIFT—When Miss Beatrice Capel became the wife of Herman Alfred Stern, elder son of Baron Michelham, on Jan. 4, in London, she received $5,000,000 as a wedding present. The baron has since died, and his son has succeeded to the title.

SOUTHERN BEAUTY—Miss Marguerite Simonds, daughter of Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, was one of the three southern women selected as the most beautiful participants in the annual Southern Relief ball in Washington. C. W. Girls! Beautify Your Hair With "Danderine" 35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

How the Biggest Thing in Life Almost Passed Me By

The Story of a Man Who Thought of Himself as a Success and Learned His Mistake in Time to Achieve a Real Success

IF any one had told me six months ago that I was completely losing out on the principal thing that makes life worth living I don't know whether I would have been indignant or amused.

I suppose that the average man whose credit at the butcher's and the grocer's is A1, whose income from year to year keeps a jump ahead of his expenses, leaving a bit over to be applied on an accumulating bank account after the needs of the family have all been met, thinks of himself, quite privately, as a success.

Without ever having debated the question with myself or even thought about it I had reached that successful attitude of mind.

I neither walked to save car fare nor trolleyed to save taxi fare. My wife and I kept up with the theatres, entertained our friends, traveled a little and lived just about the life of the average family whose income has a limit, and who keep the future in mind when planning their expenditures.

After a period of such complacency it is a pretty severe jolt to be brought up short with the realization that you are "missing something," and that you have missed "something" without which no life is really successful.

The New Employee

A few months ago a young man that had made a remarkable record with another firm was added to our force at a salary that seemed to me high for a man of his years.

I made it a point of meeting him on the morning he came to work for us. A day or two later, as a matter of courtesy, I asked him to lunch with me.

From the first he proved to be excellent company. I was only too glad to let him lead the conversation. He seemed to be perfectly at home on any subject, and talked with an easy flow of language that commanded my admiration.

This young man, who had made a place for himself in the business world far above that of most men of his age, had in a short conversation given me a peep into a world to which I was a stranger.

It seemed to me that very little had escaped him. He spoke of literature and its creators, seeming to have a fine discrimination in judging the merits of various authors, few of whose names I had ever heard. He seemed perfectly at home in the spheres of science, nature and art. He was familiar with the customs of life in foreign countries —places that I would have difficulty in locating on the map. When he touched upon political events he drew parallels between the present situations of various world powers and similar conditions in history, drawing conclusions from his comparisons that have since seemed to me little less than prophetic. And his conversation was so well phrased and so graceful that I had no desire other than to listen to him. I had never met so interesting a man.

I put him down as a student and traveler, who after a university education had been able to spend a few years in cultivating an appreciation for and a knowledge of the things in life that leisure and money enable one to enjoy.

At my invitation he and his wife called at our home not long afterward. In the course of the evening I asked him, casually, about his earlier life and education.

A Discovery

"I was forced to drop school when I was 16 years old," he said. "My parents' circumstances at the time demanded that I go to work, and I have been working steadily ever since.

"During my early years in business it seemed to me that there was not much hope for a man whose education was as limited as mine. I felt at a disadvantage in the presence of men that had built a mental background through education. They lived and moved in a world of pleasure from which I seemed to be barred. They were at home under any circumstances, and their broader view of life as well as their ease and fluency in talking marked them as men that were bound to succeed. They had personality.

"I would never be able to go to school again,—I knew that,—and the fact was a continual source of grief to me up to the time I learned of the Mentor Association and its work.

"I became a member at once. Whatever I have gained in the way of broadened viewpoint and familiarity with the best things the world offers and the ability to meet men of university training on an equal plane I owe to my membership in the Mentor Association. With its help I make a point of learning one new thing each day and it is really marvelous how much ground a man can cover in this way."

Before our guests left that evening I found out more about the Mentor Association, and shortly afterward joined it myself. I have said that I thought of myself as a success. As I look back on it I realize also that I had been rather scornful of "higher education" and had somewhat prided myself on being a self-made man.

During the few months that I have been a member of the Mentor Association my views have changed decidedly, including my idea of success. Mental and social pleasure that I never knew existed have opened up before me. The ability to talk of things other than business has led me to increasingly wider acquaintance. The five minutes or so a day that I devote to acquiring a grasp of really golden knowledge has become a dollars and cents asset to me. I believe that I have at last the right to think of myself as a success, not only in business but in the art of living and in getting the full enjoyment and profit out of every day. Moreover, I am equipped with a broader viewpoint and a valuable self-possession. But for a chance acquaintance the biggest thing in life would have passed me by.

What Membership Brings

Membership in the Mentor Association entitles you to five valuable services:

First—24 issues of "The Mentor," bringing a beautifully printed and illustrated story twice every month, all about one subject, written by a leading authority on that subject—300 pages during the year.

Second—600 beautiful illustrations, distributed during the year through the text of the 24 issues of "The Mentor."

Third—144 gravure or color pictures reproduced on heavy paper suitable for framing, in deep rich tones that bring out all the beauty of the originals. If you bought these in an art store they would cost you from 25c to 50c each. On the back of each picture is a crisp, five minute description of the subject that is portrayed.

Fourth—Answers to any questions in Art, Travel, Literature, History, Nature, and other departments of knowledge.

Fifth—Authoritative Club Programs. Any program you want for a club, a reading circle, a literary afternoon or evening. Your entire club schedule will be outlined for the year.

Only About 1c a Day

One of the most attractive things about the Mentor service is its extremely low price. Were this information to be prepared especially for you it would cost thousands of dollars, but because the expense is distributed among many the cost to each is trifling—a little over a cent a day! You may examine The Mentor carefully before sending any money, and if you are not entirely satisfied your membership will be canceled if you notify us within ten days. Otherwise send only $1 on receipt of bill and $1 a month for three months ($4 in all). This is a special and limited offer and may not appear here again. Mail the coupon today. You will surely do so if you realize the value of this offer. Mail the Coupon now while you think of it.

Graceful, beautiful, little Ann Pennington, whose dancing has been a feature of many New York successes and who is an important part of The Follies, writes: "I can't resist thanking you for the benefits I have received from the Marinello Preparations. To cleanse my face and neck, I find the Lettuce Cream much more effective than soap and water or than any other cream I have ever tried. It cleans thoroughly without irritating my skin, which is inclined to be tender. After wiping off the Lettuce Cream, I rub in the Foundation Cream, dust on some Marinello Powder, and my complexion has a smooth, soft appearance that I can get in no other way."

Seven creams to choose from—Which does your skin need?

Now you can have a cream as entirely suited to your skin as though a skin specialist had written the formula expressly for you!

Just as no one medicine can cure all bodily ills, so no one or two creams suit all kinds of skin. For instance, oiliness and dryness of the skin are directly opposite conditions, therefore each requires a special cream.

There are seven Marinello Creams, each for a different complexion need. There is a Marinello Cream that will supply just what your skin needs. Study the chart. It shows you which cream will correct the faults of your complexion and give you the radiant, healthy skin you would like to have.

The Marinello Preparations are sold at department and drug stores and at the Marinello Shops. If your dealer has not yet received his supply, we will appreciate your giving us his name.

Get a sample of your kind of cream in the Traveler's Trial Package

For the attached coupon and five 3c stamps we will send you a sample of the cream your skin needs and also, included in a very complete little Traveler's Trial Package, miniature packages of Lettuce Cream, Nardy's Face Powder, Nardy's Toilet Water, Rouge Vanitab, Rose Leaf Jelly (for rough hands), pure soap and booklet on the care of your skin.

Chart of Marinello Seven Creams

Lettuce Cream
for cleansing the skin. It cleans more thoroughly than soap and water and without irritation.

Tissue Cream
for a rough, dry skin. It builds up the skin and gives it the extra nourishment which it needs.

Astringent Cream
for an oily skin. It restrains the too abundant secretion of oil.

Whitening Cream
for a sallow skin. Gives your skin that "pink and white" rose leaf quality.

Acne Cream
for blemishes and blackheads. This disagreeable condition may be overcome in a short while if you are faithful to the use of this cream.

Motor Cream
for skin protection. Neither wind nor weather can harm your skin if you fortify it with Motor Cream first.

Foundation Cream
before using powder. It makes the powder go on so much more smoothly and stay longer.

To supplement the action of the Creams, always apply Marinello Powder before venturing out.

"A Beauty Aid for Every Need"

Hands across the Sea

A letter from Tunbridge Wells

"Tunbridge Wells, Kent, England.

James C. Crane, New York, U. S. A.

Dear Sir: I am writing to ask if you will give me the address of any of your agents in England where I can obtain Creme Elcaya (non-greasy).

Until recently I have been able to get it at Boots, Chemists; but they now say that it is unobtainable. I do so want to continue using Creme Elcaya, as I like it better than any other cream. Yours truly, (Mrs.) F——— Y———.

P. S. If you have no other agents in England, could I send direct to you?"

Letters like these from all sorts of odd places 'round the world have told us more about CREME ELCAYA than we could have told the writers in the beginning. We sought to give women a non-greasy disappearing toilet cream that would protect and beautify the skin under face powder, day or evening. They have found it not only a delightful adjunct of the toilet but a necessity wherever lovely woman would be her loveliest.

As so many have proved that this method for beauty is unfailing, isn't it time you tried it? There is nothing difficult about it.

Always use CREME ELCAYA before putting on your face powder, in this way—A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin; then if you need color a very little Elcaya Rouge spread carefully over the cheeks before the cream is quite dry; and after that the film of face powder over all.

Right off you'll like the feeling of it—and the looks. And with regular use you will see a refining and freshening of your complexion that you wouldn't have believed possible.

CREME ELCAYA is the original non-greasy disappearing toilet cream. It was introduced first in New York in 1900. Today its purity and superiority are acknowledged throughout the world.

Learn the easy way to have a skin like velvet. Send 10c in a letter marked Department "K" to the address below and obtain a trial package of CREME ELCAYA—and a miniature box of ELCAYA COMPLEXION POWDER. If you need color, send an additional 10c for a sample of ELCAYA ROUGE and use it with CREME ELCAYA. There's nothing better.

Your dealer has ELCAYA and has sold it for years. Ask him.

Skin Blemishes

How to get rid of them

Skin specialists are tracing fewer and fewer troubles to the blood—more to bacteria and parasites that are carried into the pores with dust, soot and grime.

Clear your skin of any blemishes caused by this enemy by using this effective treatment. Just before retiring, wash in your usual way with warm water and Woodbury's Facial Soap and then dry your face. Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy cream-like lather. Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this soap cream and leave it on for ten minutes. Then rinse very carefully with clear, hot water; then with cold. This will make your skin so firm and active that it will resist the frequent cause of blemishes and clear your skin.

You will find a 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment and for general cleansing use during this time. Woodbury's is for sale at drug stores and toilet goods counters everywhere throughout the United States and Canada.

Write today for a week's size cake

For 6c we will send you a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap large enough to last for a week of this Woodbury treatment, together with the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch," which gives the proper treatment for all of the commoner skin troubles.

For 15c we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream, and Cold Cream.

Send today to The Andrew Jergens Co., 26 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

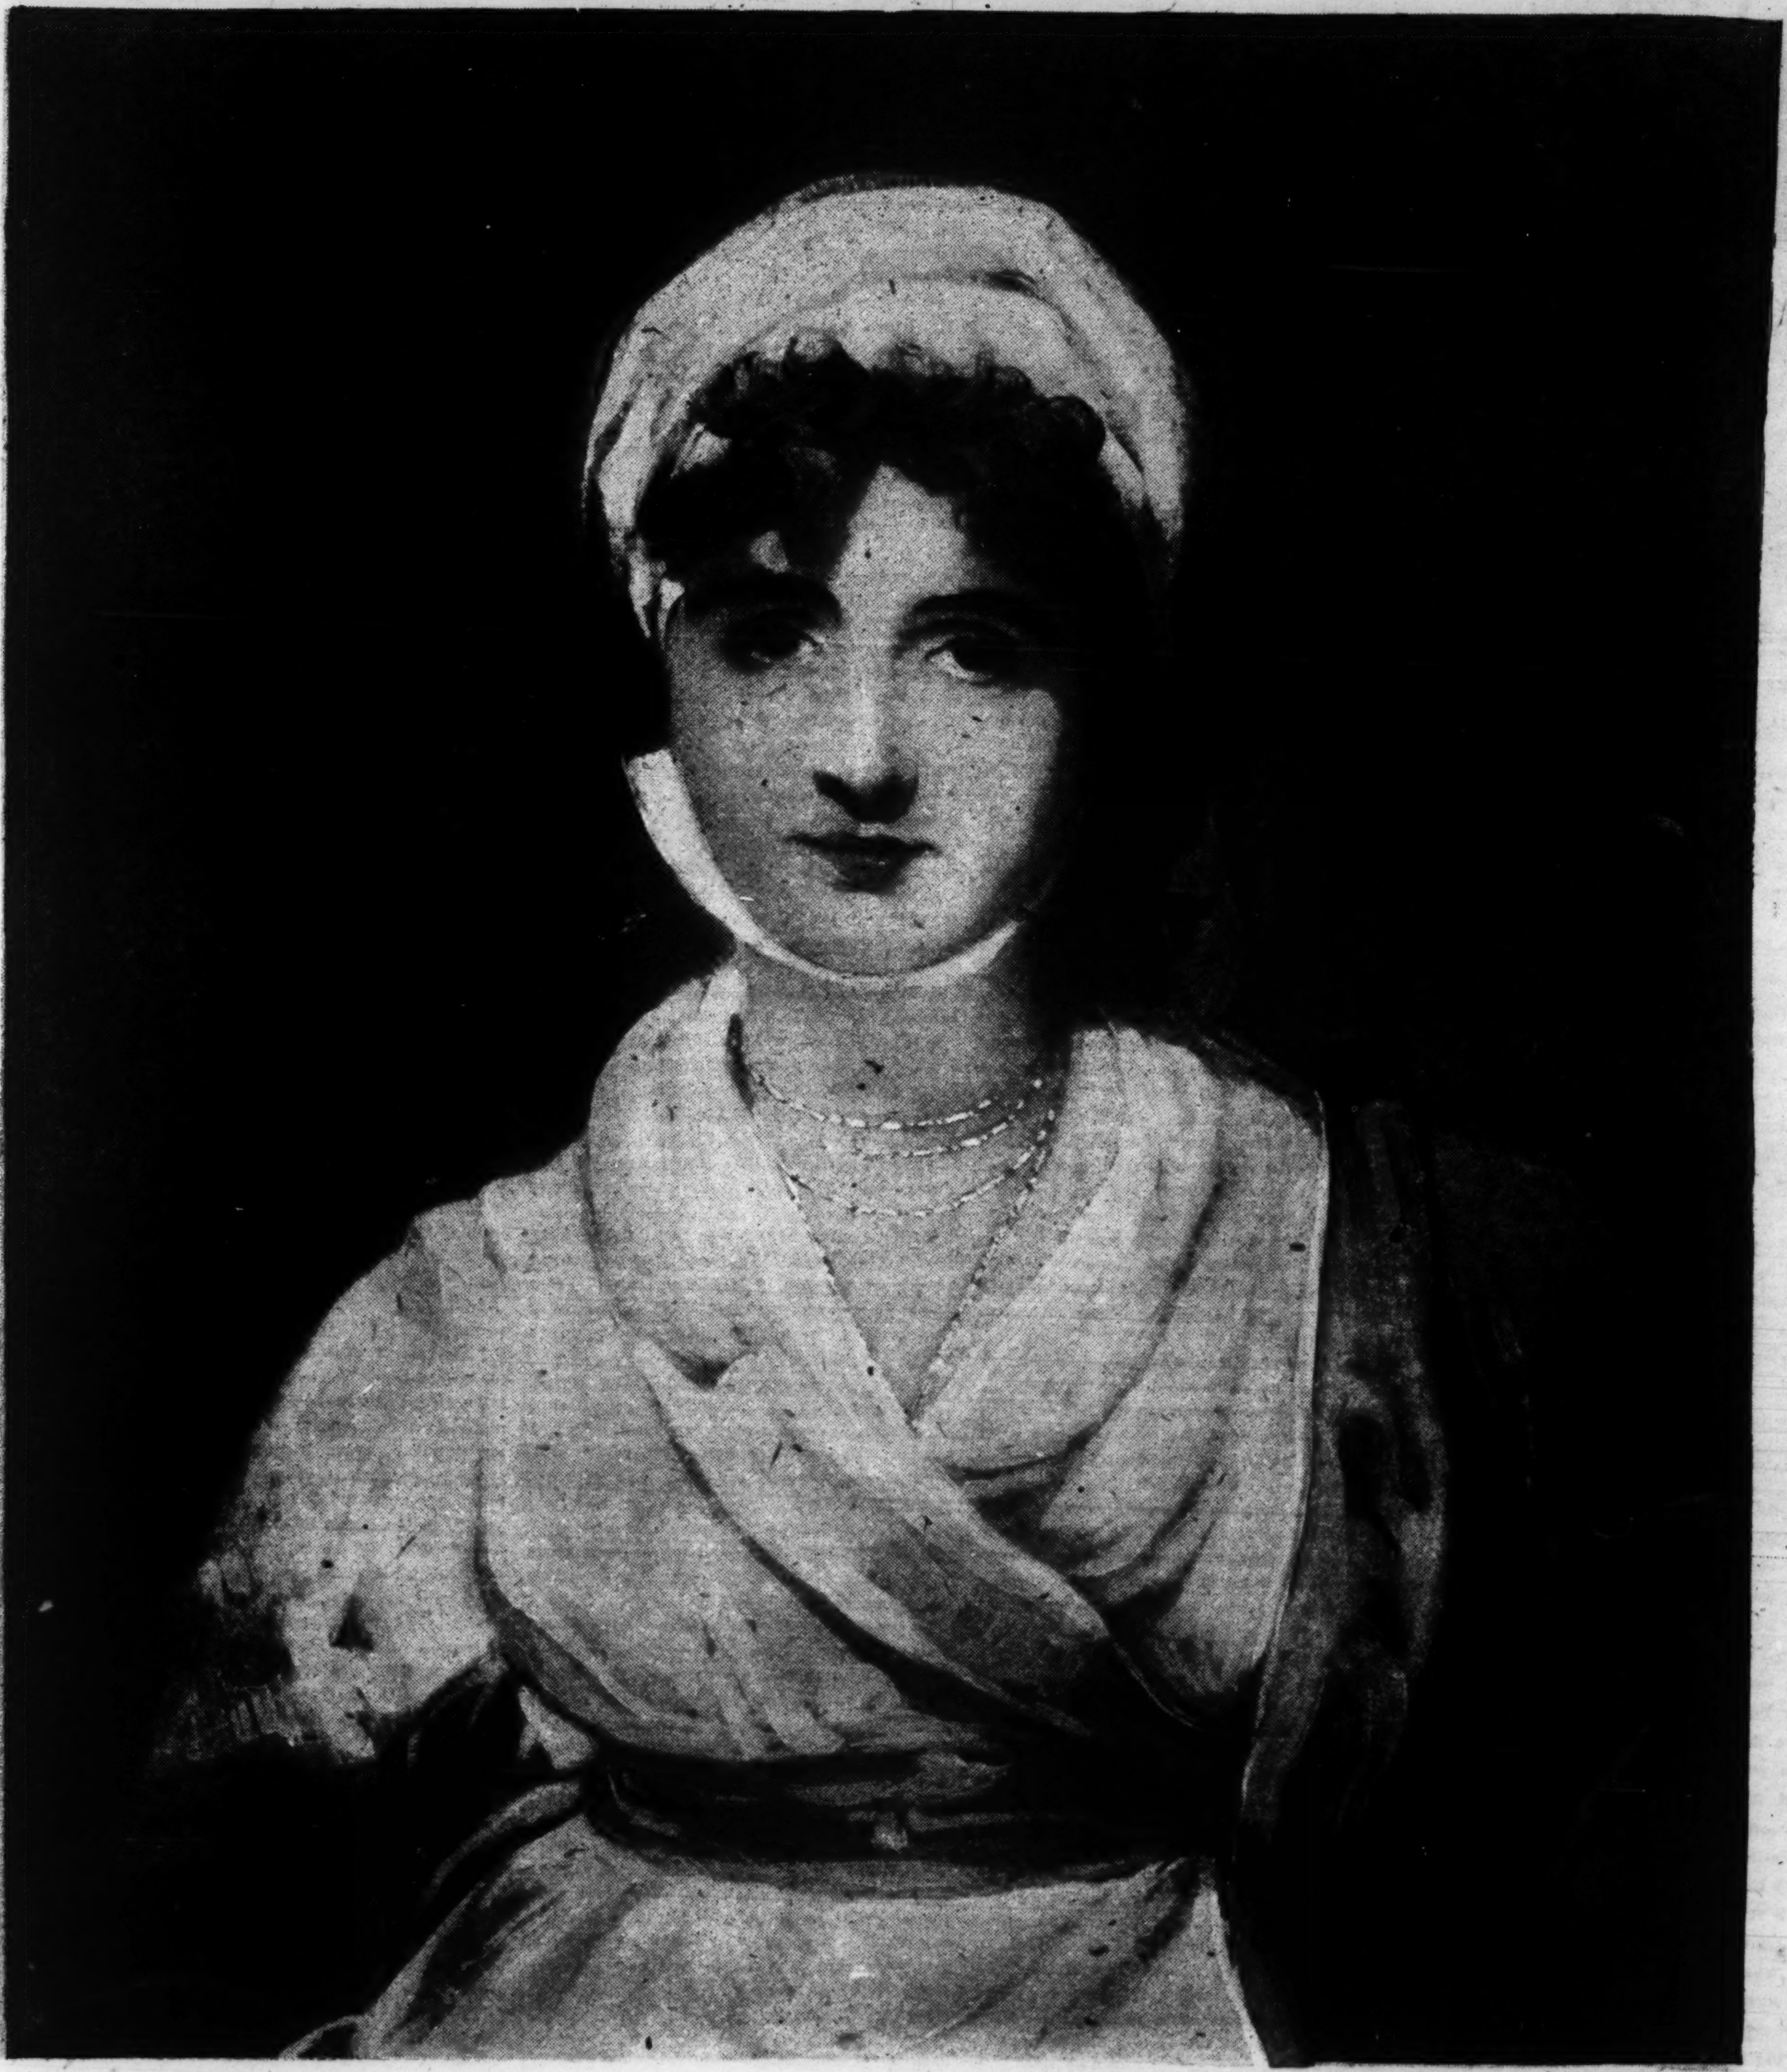
Portrait of Mrs. Siddons---By Lawrence



By ELEANOR JEWETT.

THE "incomparable Siddons" was the title given this famous English actress throughout the world of drama at the time of her remarkable stage successes at the Drury Lane theater in London. Nor has that world seen fit to change the title since.

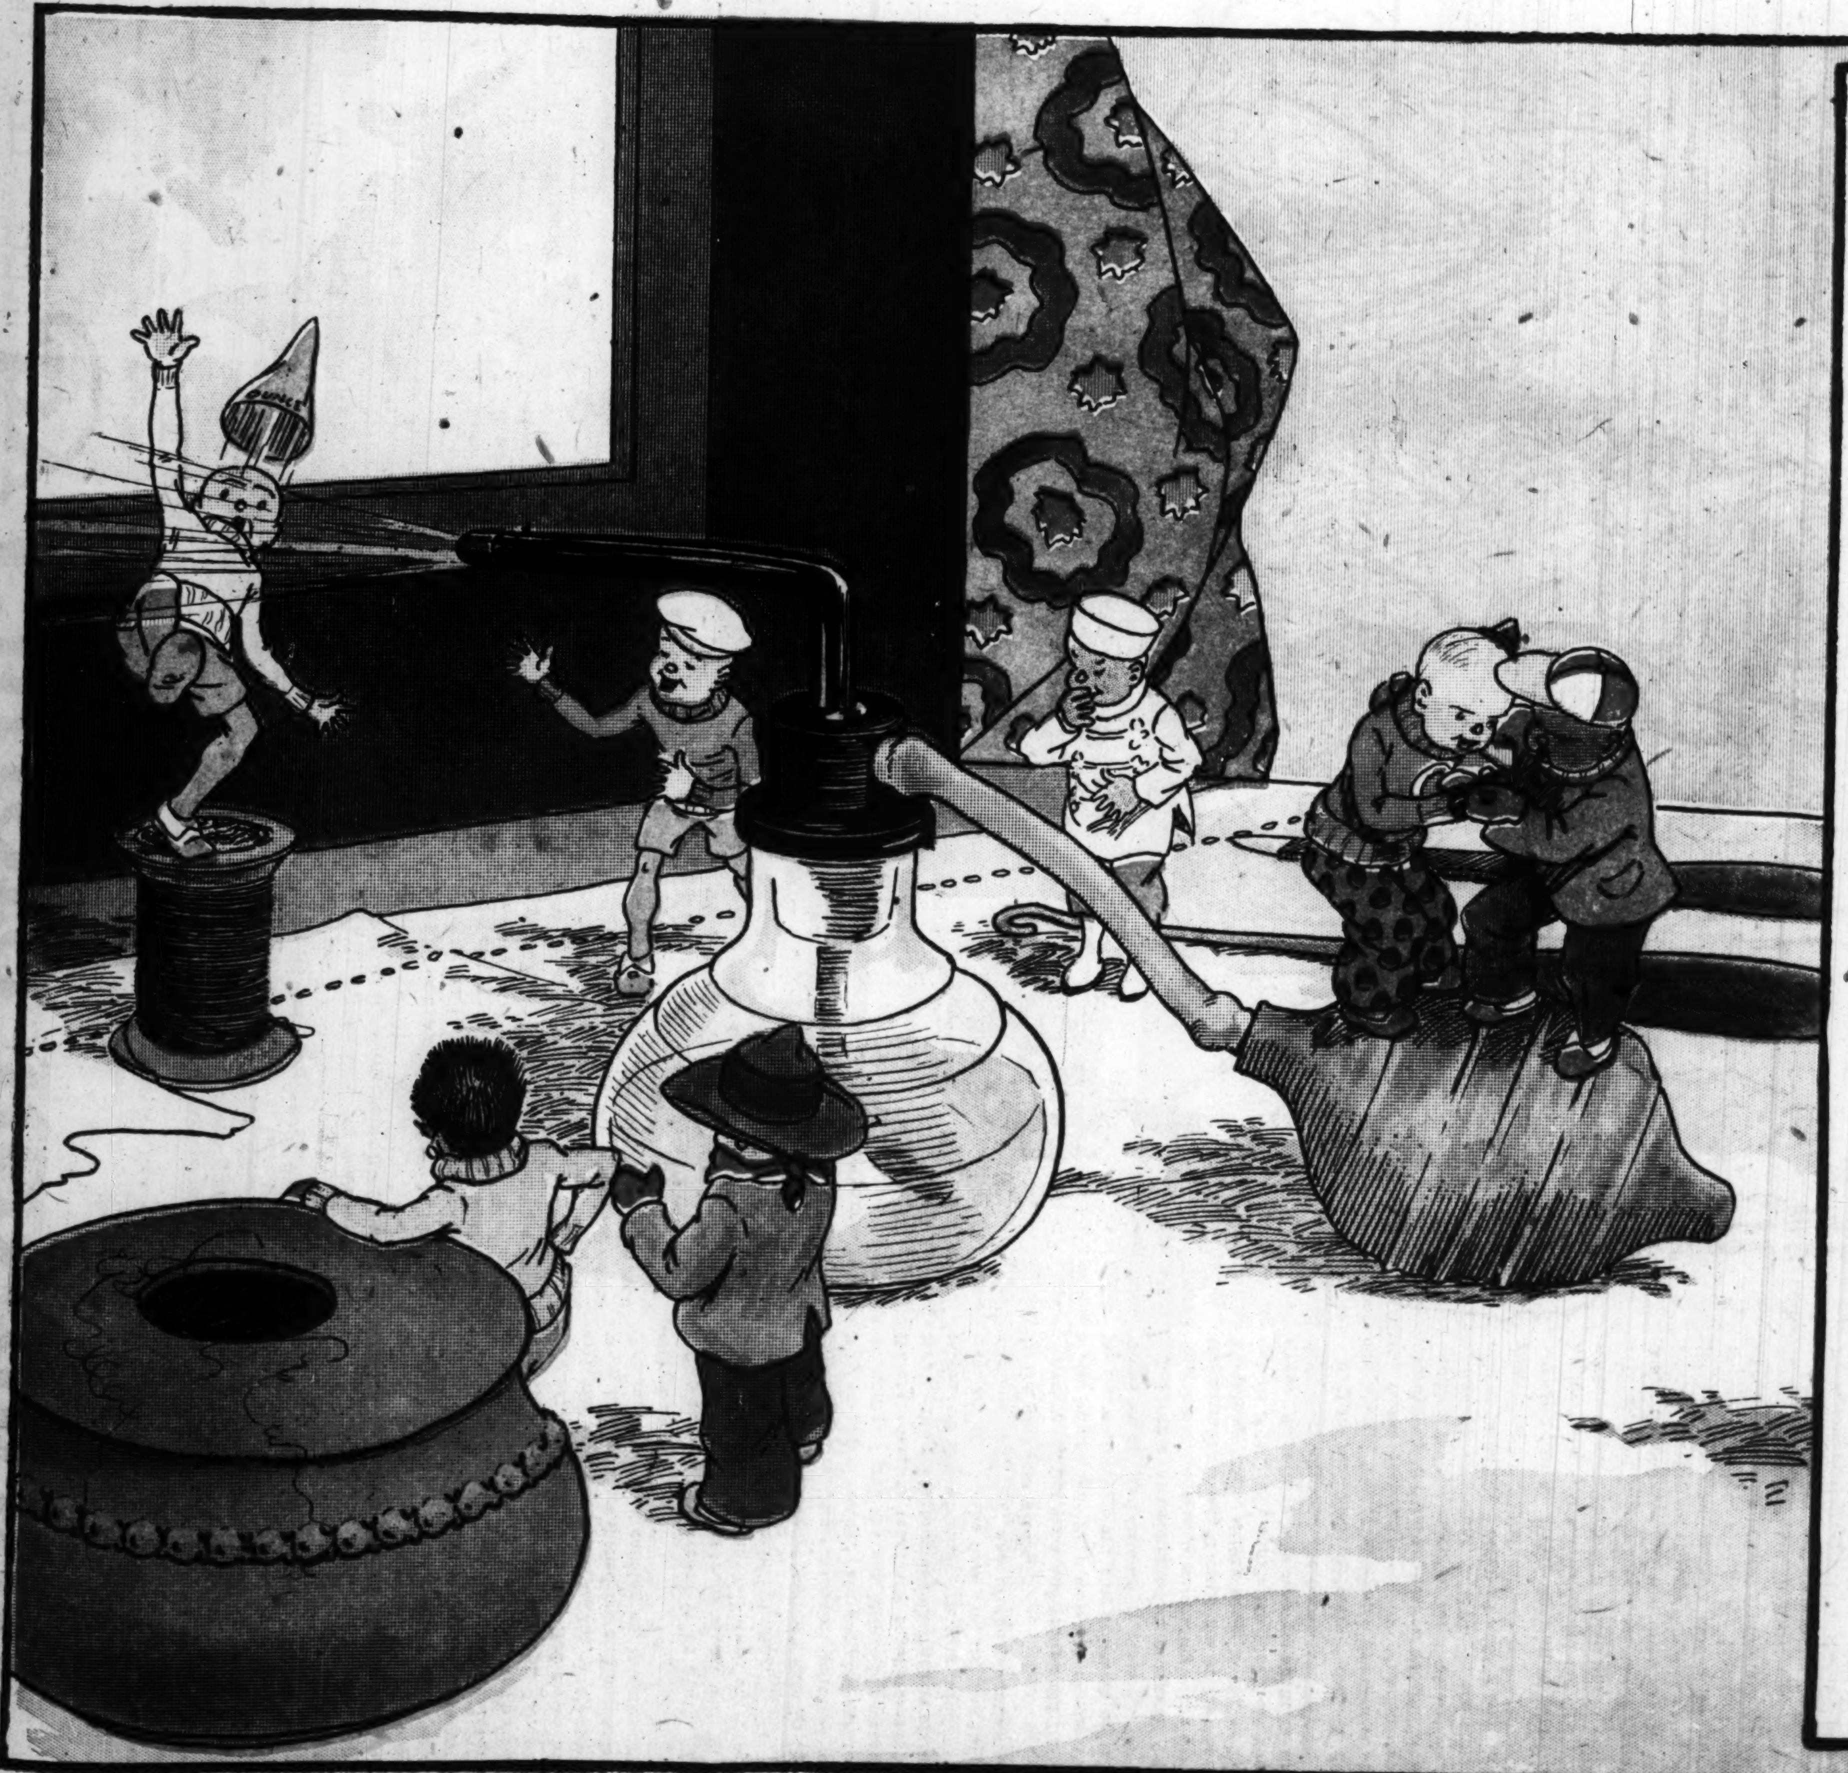
Mrs. Siddons was the eldest of the twelve children of Roger Kemble. She was born in the "Shoulder of Mutton" public house at Brecon, Wales, in 1755. Although she began her stage career at an extremely early age, yet, due to the care of her mother in sending her to the best schools in the towns which the company toured, she received an excellent education.

She fell in love with William Siddons, a fellow-actor, but for some time her parents would not consent to the match. She was dismissed from the company and sent to a situation as lady's maid to Mrs. Greathead at Guy's Cliff, Warwickshire, where her talent for sculpture first manifested itself.

On November 26, 1773, she married Mr. Siddons and began her stage career again. She played at Cheltenham the following year and was so remarkable that Garrick heard of her and engaged her to act at the Drury Lane for five pounds a week. Unfortunately her first appearance on that stage was not well received and she was banished again to the provinces. For some years she acted at Bath, and it was during those years that this portrait of her was painted by Lawrence, himself then a young man.

From Bath Mrs. Siddons was recalled to London and she went on again at the Drury Lane, where her appearance as Isabella in Garrick's version of Southerne's "Fatal Marriage" was a triumph only equalled in the history of the English stage by that of Garrick's first night at Drury Lane in 1741 and that of Edmund Kean's in 1814. From then on Mrs. Siddons' genius as an actress was acknowledged by all. Her majestic and dignified carriage lent itself well to the depictions of tragic characters. Probably her most famous role was that of Lady Macbeth.

Sir Thomas Lawrence was one of England's most famous portrait painters. He studied at Oxford, and painted later at Bath, and still later went to the Royal academy at London, where in a short time his genius was recognized. At the age of 25, at the death of Joshua Reynolds, Lawrence was appointed as "painter to the king." His honors were many and his career extremely brilliant and successful.



THE TEENIE WEENIES

THE CHINAMAN GETS EVEN WITH THE DUNCE.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"ME no forglet joke that Dunce played on me," the Chinaman told the Cowboy one afternoon as the two Teenie Weenies sat in front of the tiny stove that heated the old tea pot where the Chinaman lived.

"That was a nasty trick of the Dunce to get you to put your tongue to that frosty hatchet," said the Cowboy.

"Allie same me no forgletie and me glettie even just the samie," and the Chinaman poked the fire viciously with half a hair-pin which served the little fellow as a poker.

The Chinaman was a quiet little chap and although he hadn't said much about the trick the Dunce played on him, he kept his eyes open for a chance to get even.

Several days after he had talked to the Cowboy the Chinaman called the Cook, Zip, Gogo, the Clown, and the Cowboy into the laundry and told them he had a plan to get even with the Dunce.

"Allie same this is me plan," said the Chinaman when the Teenie Weenies had been sworn to keep the plan a secret. "Me knowie where there is a big splay what big peoples use to splay their throats."

"You mean a spray, a throat spray," put in the Clown."

"Yes, that him," said the Chinaman. "Him splay over on dresser in big house and we get Dunce to go over to see splay. When we see splay we say it perfume in splay and we say we want to get splayed with perfume. Dunce he allie time want to be first and we let him be splayed first. When he all ready to be splayed we jump on rubber bulb and he get splayed with throat splay. Throat splay smellie likie everything and Dunce him be muchie mad."

"That's bully good plan!" cried the Cowboy, and the rest of the little fellows chuckled over the Chinaman's idea.

After the chores were done the next morning the Cowboy told the Dunce that several of the Teenie Weenies were going over to the big house back of the orchard and of course the curious Dunce wanted to go along. All the Teenie Weenies who were in on the plan gathered in front of the shoe house and when the Dunce joined them they set out for the house.

"Let's climb up on that dresser," said the Clown when the little fellows had entered the bed room where the dresser stood.

The rest agreed and in a few minutes they had all shinned up a curtain, which hung near, to the top of the dresser.

"Oh, look," exclaimed the Cook, "there's a perfume squirter. Let's all get squirted with perfume."

"Me first! Me first!" shouted the Dunce, and the rest of the Teenie Weenies smiled at the way the Dunce fell in with their plans.

The nozzle of the spray was so high up from the top of the dresser that the little men had to roll a spool of thread over for the Dunce to stand on. The Dunce scrambled up onto the spool while Gogo and the Clown climbed up onto the bulb.

"Let her go!" shouted the Dunce, and the Clown and Gogo gave a mighty jump and came down on the rubber bulb with a great thud.

The smelly throat spray came out of the nozzle with a great swish and hit the Dunce square in the face with such force that he was tumbled off the spool onto his teenie weenie head.

"Hey! Say! What do you mean!" shouted the Dunce as he sat up and looked at the Teenie Weenies who were doubled up with laughter.

"Allie samie we mean that me gettie even for time you made me stlick me tongue on flosty hatchet," giggled the Chinaman.

"W-w-w-well, I-I-I-I guess you g-g-got even all right," growled the Dunce, but in spite of himself he couldn't keep from smiling as he wiped his face with his teenie weenie handkerchief.

A Fondness For Peanuts

By William Hamilton Osborne

Somehow They Tasted Better When Bradley Brought Them.

THERE was a peculiar and somewhat suspicious rustle without Miss Stacy Ann Stryker's door. Miss Stacy Ann, with her rubber rimmed spectacles pushed back over her forehead, was seated at her window. Across her knees was spread a newspaper, which she read casually as she proceeded with her task—if it were a task. In front of her, touching those selfsame knees, was a huge waste basket. By her side was another chair, and upon it was a large paper bag. Miss Stacy Ann Stryker was doing something she greatly liked to do. She was eating peanuts.

"By the peck," she was wont to boast to those who caught her buying them, shelling them, or eating them. She boasted of this appetite, however, only to those persons who were socially inferior to the Youngbloods, or to those aristocrats who loved to eat because of the taste and not for the looks of the thing. Miss Stacy Ann solemnly averred at times that peanuts in time would come to be the health food of the future. She felt intuitively that they were as good as they tasted, and that they tasted good—well, Miss Stacy Ann never saw a small boy eating peanuts on the street that her mouth didn't water. In fact, she was not above eating peanuts in public herself.

In the Youngblood household, however, she felt the keen disapproval of her niece, Mrs. Bradley Youngblood. Bradley himself was a bit more democratic. He was willing to eat peanuts when nobody was looking—he usually did it in the seclusion of Miss Stacy Ann's room, and when he was in New York with a suit case or a leather hat box he invariably brought Miss Stacy Ann a half peck of fresh roasted beauties from the Cortlandt street peanut man.

She was a bit old fashioned, was Miss Stacy Ann. Her face was thin; her eyes were sharp, but kindly; her hair was dressed in the old fashioned way. The only thing up to date about her was her pair of tortoise shell rimmed spectacles, and those were intended for the use of old gentlemen and not old ladies. They didn't improve her personal appearance, these spectacles. It may be taken for granted that the young Youngbloods were a bit ashamed of her, notwithstanding she was a Stryker. However, it was said among those who knew the Youngbloods best that there was in the Youngblood household only one real lady and only one real gentleman—and that that lady and gentleman was Miss Stacy Ann herself.

However, here she was, eating peanuts again, and here were suspicious noises, whisperings, just outside of her door.

And, finally, a knock.

Miss Stacy Ann hurriedly folded up the paperful of shells and thrust it into the waste basket.

"Come in, P'leen," exclaimed Miss Stacy Ann. It may be said that her niece's name was Pauline, but according to a Stryker custom in force so long that the memory of man ran not to the contrary the Stryker name of Pauline was dignified as P'leen.

P'leen did not come in. Miss Stacy Ann rose, for behind Pauline there was another figure—a figure masculine. Miss Stacy Ann peered at the two through the uncertain light.

"O," she said, "it's not Bradley, is it?"

"No," answered Pauline faintly. She looked very pretty standing there in the doorway, clad in a stunning gown of yellow, her hair very lustrous and her eyes very bright. But there was clearly something the matter with her. She held her hand at her white throat and her breath was coming in short, frightened gasps. Miss Stacy Ann stared.

"It's so silly, Aunt Stacy Ann," giggled Pauline, "nothing but a foolish joke. This is Mr. Moore—Mr. Jack Moore—one of Bradley's friends. Mr. Moore, Miss Stryker, my aunt."

"How do you do, young man," she said. She held out the large brown paper bag. "Young man," she went on, "help yourself to peanuts, if you please."

"Don't care if I do," he answered with a drawl."

In the instant that he had stepped forward Miss Stacy Ann's tortoise shell rimmed spectacles had fallen, with malice aforethought, down over her eyes, and she had scrutinized him with care.

She saw in a flash that he was not Mr. Jack Moore. She knew Mr. Jack Moore when she saw him, though P'leen probably didn't know that fact. And this was not Moore.

Pauline giggled again. "It's the silliest thing, Aunt Stacy Ann," she went on, "it—it was Mr. Moore's idea. Bradley made a bet with him that he—Bradley, you know—could hide himself in this house in some place where Mr. Moore could never find him. The house used to belong to Mr. Moore's father, and he claims to know all about it—and Bradley has hidden, and Mr. Moore is trying—to make good."

"And," asked Miss Stacy Ann, "is Bradley home—here, in the house?"

"Sure as I can be, ma'am, he is," said the pseudo Moore, dropping his society drawl and depositing peanut shells on the dressing table.

"I'm equally sure he's not," giggled Pauline, with that frightened look in her eyes. "I think he stole out when we weren't looking—gave us the slip. Anyway, Aunt Stacy Ann," she went on, taking a grip upon herself, "Mr. Moore said he'd have to look in every—every room, to make good his bet—even here."

Aunt Stacy Ann made a swift circuit of the room—somewhat agitated herself—and threw open every closet door and the door of every wardrobe, of which latter there were three. Mr. Moore made a brief but hasty examination of the apartment. Then he shook his head.

"A silly, silly joke," laughed P'leen, as she and Mr. Moore left the room, closing the door behind them. Aunt Stacy Ann stood dumfounded for an instant in the middle of the room; then she ran swiftly to the door and noiselessly opened it on a crack. What she heard made her close the door as noiselessly and as suddenly as she had opened it.

What she heard was the sound of loud, hysterical weeping—the sound of Pauline weeping, as she and Mr. Moore descended the stairs to the floor below. The sound grew fainter as they went.

She sat on, into the darkness, mechanically shelling peanuts. Finally she heard the sound she waited for—the sound she knew must come. There was another timid knock on the door. Once more it was Pauline.

"Got something to tell me?" asked Aunt Stacy Ann.

"Y—yes," returned Pauline. She drew up a chair and sat down upon it.

"Go ahead," said Miss Stacy Ann, grimly, "what's the row?"

"That wasn't Mr. Jack Moore," stammered Pauline.

"I know it," answered her aunt. "What else."

"I—I told a story when I said Bradley was here—that he and Mr. Moore had made a bet—about—about finding him. Bradley hasn't been here today."

"No?"

"No," faltered Pauline. "He was not here last night. I told you stories when you asked about him. I told you a good many stories—every day. You thought Bradley had been here in the house, every night and every morning, didn't you?"

"Did I?" asked Aunt Stacy Ann.

"I told you each morning that he'd gone early—and every night that he wouldn't be home till late. Well, for three days he—he's been away, Aunt Stacy Ann."

Aunt Stacy Ann drew a long breath. "I know it, child," she answered simply.

She could feel her niece stiffen through the darkness. "You know it—you knew it, all the time?" she demanded, wondering.

"Yes, child," replied Miss Stacy Ann.

"And you know about this—this Mr. Moore—you know who he is?"

Aunt Stacy Ann nodded. "A detective, child," she answered.

There was a deep silence between them for some moments.

"Do—do you know what Bradley has done?" asked Pauline, at length. Somehow it made it easier to find out that Aunt Stacy Ann knew or suspected all these things. But Aunt Stacy Ann answered the question by asking another.

"Tell me, child," she said.

Pauline told her. "It's Gilworth, Guile & Co. that are making all the trouble—Bradley's employers."

"Brokers," said Miss Stacy Ann, grimly. "How much do they say he's short?"

"Twenty thousand some odd dollars," moaned Pauline, "and Bradley's gone away."

"Where?" asked Aunt Stacy Ann.

"I don't know," replied Pauline.

"I do," said Miss Stacy Ann.

"You—do?" gasped Pauline. "How do you know?"

"That," returned Miss Stacy Ann, "is my affair—and Bradley's. Is there anything else?"

Pauline staggered to her feet. "Anything else!" she cried, hysterically, and in an agony of passion, "Anything else?" She swept to the wall and switched on the light. She thrust a crumpled tear stained paper into her aunt's hands.

"Look at the last edition," she cried. "Anything else? I should think so. It's all over town—everybody knows—read—read, I tell you," she went on fiercely, "read."

"I knew it—somehow—had to be," returned Miss Stacy Ann.

Pauline crept up to her, "Aunt Stacy," she cried eagerly, "listen. "You—you have money. It isn't right to ask it—Bradley isn't your own flesh and blood—"

"I wish he had been," returned Miss Stacy Ann, "he was always good—especially about the Cortlandt street peanut man."

"Listen," went on her niece, "isn't there some way you can help—with money. Even that detective said all that Gilworth, Guile & Co. wanted was the cash—he said they were sure that relatives would come to Bradley's aid and—and fork over—"

"That's enough, child," sharply replied Miss Stacy Ann. "Sit down. Calm yourself." She waited until her niece had complied with her request. "Don't make any mistake," she went on, "about my attitude. It's true that my father left me money—forty thousand dollars, and over, child—"

"Forty thousand," gasped Pauline. "Twenty from that would still leave you twenty—enough to live on—"

"H'm," said Miss Stacy Ann, "and how much income does twenty thousand yield a year?"

"I don't know."

"I know," said Miss Stacy Ann. "It yields a thousand dollars a year—do you think I can live on that?"

"N-no," answered Pauline, "but Bradley would work, and—"

"H'm," interposed Miss Stacy Ann, "you're wrong. Give me all the peanuts I want, and I'll guarantee to get along on ten dollars a week—"

"Then you can let me have twenty thousand dollars—that leaves you twenty more—"

"My dear," said Miss Stacy Ann, stiffly, "I can't give you twenty out of forty, because I haven't got forty. I haven't even got twenty thousand dollars—I haven't twenty hundred—"

"What—what's become of it?" gasped Pauline,

Miss Stacy Ann shrugged her shoulders. "Ask Bradley," she returned, "he knows."

Pauline started to her feet again. "Has he—used that, too?"

"I think he has," grimly returned her aunt.

"Then," cried Pauline, something of anger rising within her, "he's a thief—a thief."

"Sit down," commanded Miss Stacy Ann, "let's reason together. How long have you been married, my dear?"

Pauline burst into a paroxysm of weeping. "F-four years," she cried.

"You've always regarded Bradley as a wide awake, successful young business man—a money maker, haven't you? He wasn't specially well to do when you married him, was he?"

"N-no," sobbed Pauline.

"But you—you stirred his ambition, didn't you, dear? You—you pushed him along—you played the part of the helpmeet, didn"t you—kept him at work, kept him making money—kept him forging along—to the top—"

"I tried to," said Pauline, "I was ambitious for him—"

"And for yourself," said Miss Stacy Ann, "and he—strove to make good. You told him what he ought to be, and he tried to live up to it. Well, in the four years since you've been married, he lived up—something. And so did you. You and he lived up sixty thousand dollars. Twenty of it came out of his employers and forty out of me. He did the best he could—for you, my dear."

Pauline had listened intently. Her eyes now blazed. She saw it all distinctly.

"He's a fraud—a common swindler," she cried, "he swindled you—he swindled me—"

"Swindled you," demanded Aunt Stacy Ann, "of what did he swindle you?"

"Of my love, my good opinion—I thought—"

"You never thought, child, that you were swindling him, did you? You—you're a thief, yourself. You are a—common swindler yourself. You held out your hand for money—never asked, never thought how he was to get it—and took it—the more you took, the more you wanted—don't you complain—you're in the same box, Bradley and you—"

She broke off short. She stepped to her dressing table and opened a drawer.

"I said, my dear," she went on, a bit more evenly, "that Bradley had taken my forty thousand dollars: He did. But here—he returns it, don't you see?"

She drew forth from the envelope two documents. She smiled soberly as she glanced at them.

"You see, my dear," she went on, "that he has deeded to me property down south. Look at this deed. You see the consideration named—forty thousand dollars. See?"

She was quite right. The deed was one in form from Bradley Youngblood to herself, conveying many acres to her for that consideration. Pauline took the deed and read it through. There was something familiar about it to her, so it seemed.

"Seems to me," she said, "that I remember this land—didn't Bradley buy it just after we were married—I remember something—"

"Right," replied Miss Stacy Ann, "and here is the title deed by which he took it. Read. The Lorimer County Land and Improvement company to Bradley Youngblood. They conveyed to him nearly four years ago—and for forty thousand dollars—"

"No," cried Pauline, "he only paid a thousand."

"Read," said her aunt.

"It reads forty thousand," conceded Pauline.

"Yes," returned Miss Stacy Ann, "it reads so, because Bradley has erased the thousand and inserted forty thousand—poor boy—he overlooked things, didn't he?"

Pauline shook her head. "He paid a thou-long fingers went around my throat. I did the best I could and threw the thing off, and I must have yelled, because Milly says they heard me. I guess I yelled. I know there was another sound, but I don't know whether it was Jim or Aster squealing in the stables or not. I didn't know much of anything after what had happened to me—and I'll say yet, Mrs. Browning, that it mayn't have been anything at all."

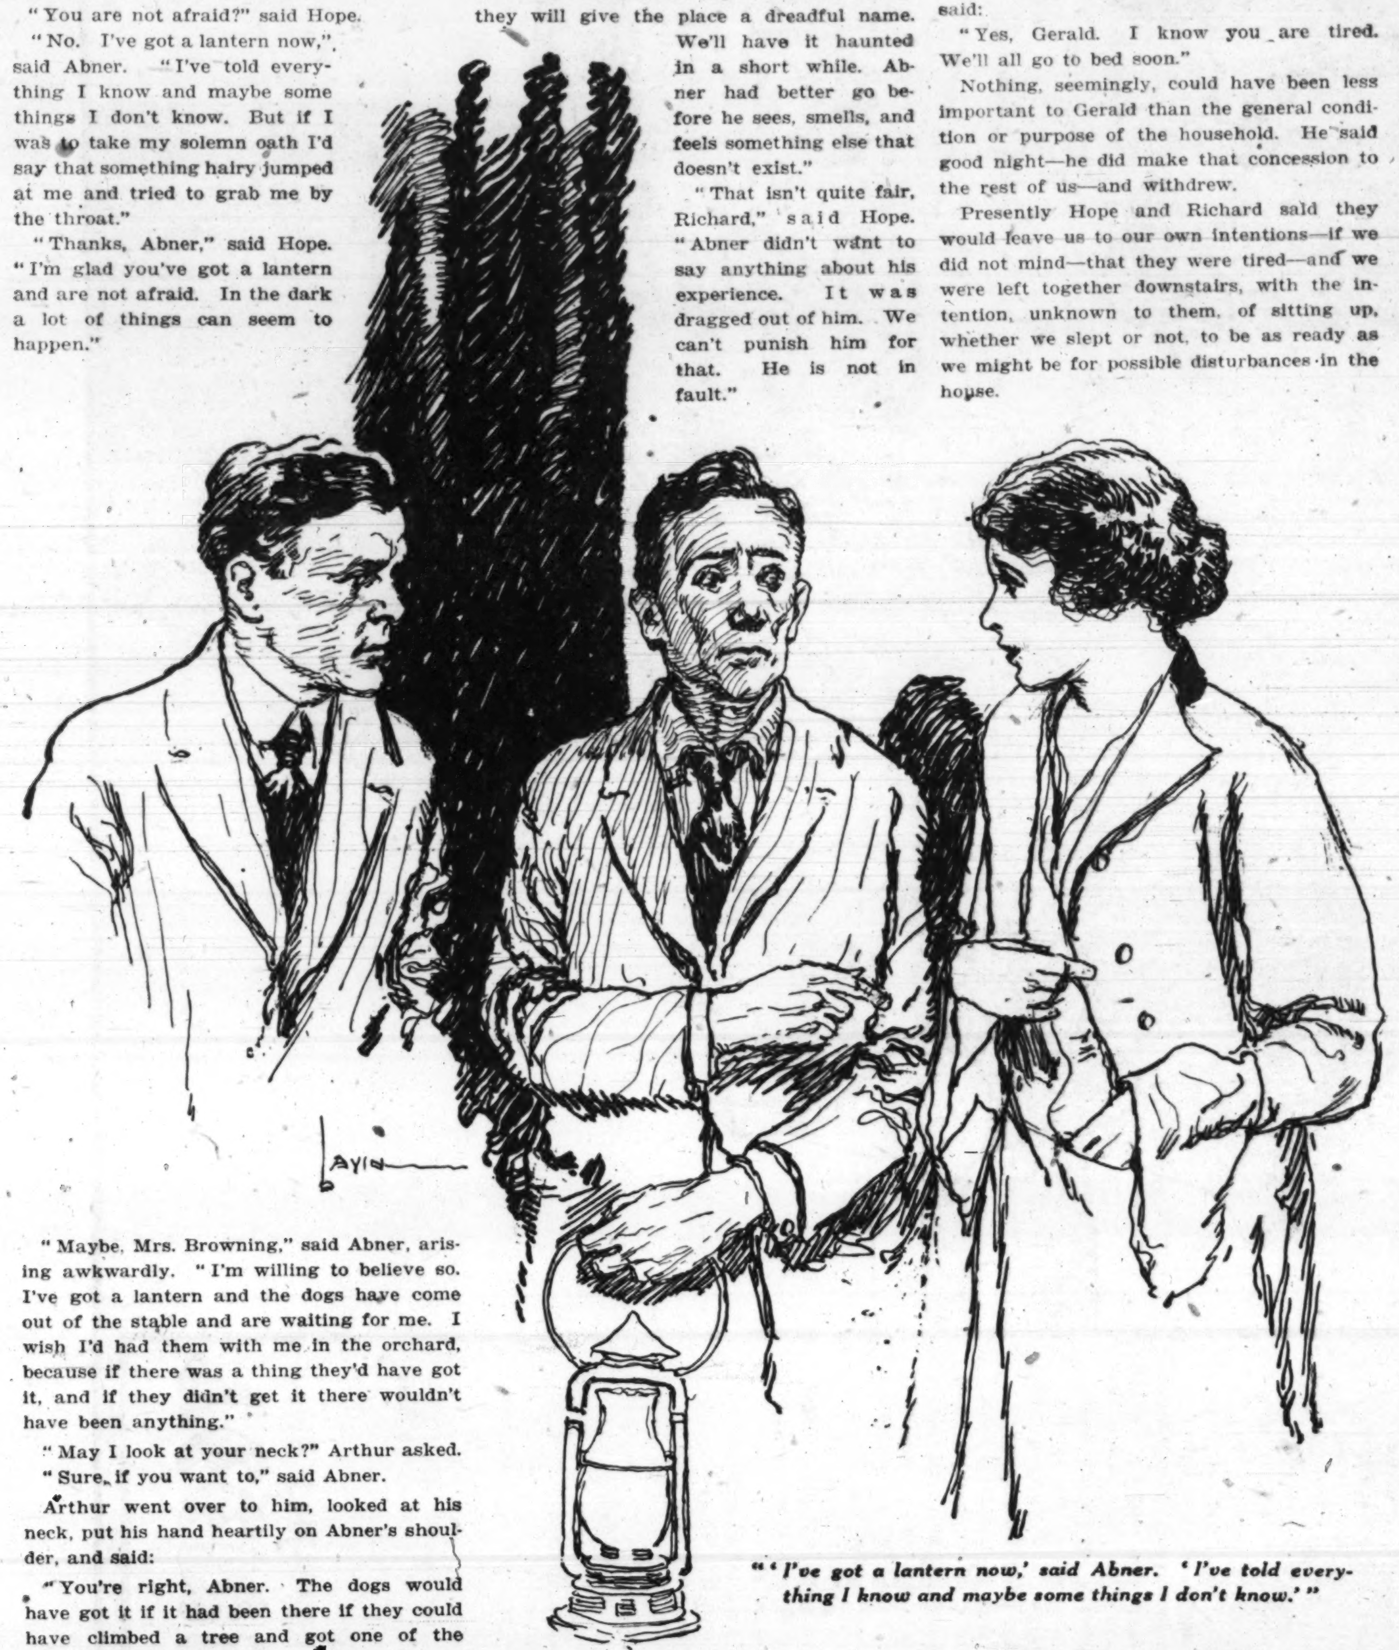
A great roll of thunder went over the house at that moment.

"I'll have to be getting back to the stable, Mrs. Browning," said Abner, "because Jim and Aster don't like that a bit."

"You are not afraid?" said Hope.

"No. I've got a lantern now," said Abner. "I've told everything I know and maybe some things I don't know. But if I was to take my solemn oath I'd say that something hairy jumped at me and tried to grab me by the throat."

"Thanks, Abner," said Hope. "I'm glad you've got a lantern and are not afraid. In the dark a lot of things can seem to happen."



"'I've got a lantern now,' said Abner. 'I've told everything I know and maybe some things I don't know.'"

"Maybe, Mrs. Browning," said Abner, arising awkwardly. "I'm willing to believe so. I've got a lantern and the dogs have come out of the stable and are waiting for me. I wish I'd had them with me in the orchard, because if there was a thing they'd have got it, and if they didn't get it there wouldn't have been anything."

"May I look at your neck?" Arthur asked.

"Sure, if you want to," said Abner.

Arthur went over to him, looked at his neck, put his hand heartily on Abner's shoulder, and said:

"You're right, Abner. The dogs would have got it if it had been there if they could have climbed a tree and got one of the branches."

"I didn't want to seem like a fool," said Abner, "but Milly said you ought to know it."

"I wanted to know it," said Hope, "and thank you for telling it."

Abner and Milly went out, Abner looking as if he had been betrayed into revelations of his emotions which degraded him. A man confessing fear which lacks demonstrable proof feels degraded.

Richard had come in at the conclusion of the story and asked what was the matter.

Arthur told him that the man had been the victim of an hallucination.

"The night is favorable for an effect upon a simple imagination," he explained. "Abner may not have been startled by the excited action of the animals, but he was prepared for suggestion, and going into the orchard in the pitch dark, a sudden illusion became a reality for him. I think he ran into the branch, probably put his neck in the fork of branches, and thought something had him by the throat."

"But," I suggested with a cheerful malignance which Arthur related to my fanciful suggestions regarding the possible or impossible ape. "Abner is convinced that he touched something hairy."

"Daylight will show reality," said Arthur. "We can go out to the orchard where Abner left his saw and where in the dark he met a fork of limbs and find—probably—a piece of burlap. That was his hairy skin. These illusions are too common to have significance."

Richard seemed perplexed and unhappy.

"This is annoying," he said. "We can't have these illusions governing around here. If we have credulous, superstitious servants they will give the place a dreadful name. We'll have it haunted in a short while. Abner had better go before he sees, smells, and feels something else that doesn't exist."

"That isn't quite fair, Richard," said Hope. "Abner didn't want to say anything about his experience. It was dragged out of him. We can't punish him for that. He is not in fault."

"I'm not particular about Abner," said Richard. "We could go away for the summer, close up the place, and get rid of the whole establishment. I don't want a lot of frightened servants giving the place a bad name."

"It will be all right, Richard, I'm sure," said Hope. "Just have a little patience."

"I don't want to seem unreasonable," said Richard, "but can't you see that these alarms destroy the very thing we want so much to create here, the sense of benignant comfort?"

Richard walked over to the fireplace and stood with his hands behind his back.

Hope looked at him and for an instant I thought that there was in her look a suggestion of that invisible feminine government to which most males are subjected most when they suspect it least. The suggestion was in the inquiry of her look. It was, I thought, a search for the method of management, directed with great affection and wisdom. Was old Sarah Parr, with her feline wisdom, unfathomable wisdom, anything more than the dowager? Hope was young, Sarah old. The difference was merely one of experience.

"If we don't want things exaggerated, Richard," she said, "do you think we ought to exaggerate them ourselves?"

Richard stood a few seconds longer in his perplexity, and then his ingratiating smile came back.

"No, Hope," he said. "I don't want to be a fool about it. We'll forget it—for the present at least."

Gerald, whose sullen stolidity had been unmoved by the perplexity he saw in the house, again said he would go to bed. Again Hope said:

"Yes, Gerald. I know you are tired. We'll all go to bed soon."

Nothing, seemingly, could have been less important to Gerald than the general condition or purpose of the household. He said good night—he did make that concession to the rest of us—and withdrew.

Presently Hope and Richard said they would leave us to our own intentions—if we did not mind—that they were tired—and we were left together downstairs, with the intention, unknown to them, of sitting up, whether we slept or not, to be as ready as we might be for possible disturbances in the house.

When people prepare themselves in an attitude of watchfulness they expose themselves, especially if they are untrained and inexperienced, to suggestion. The alarms of raw sentries will keep an entire camp on edge.

The gathering storm, which had been so threatening in premonition, broke on us—at first not with the violence which had been in the threat. There were great claps of thunder and many flashes of lightning, but the wind was not high and the fall of rain was at first gentle and soothing rather than tempestuous.

We went into the room in which Arthur had sat up the night before and made ourselves comfortable. At first I felt the sense of insecurity which comes from a sense of watchfulness. A house in which strange things have happened—which have threatened the well being and security of well liked people—may become charged with intimations of evil.

We talked for a while, ignoring the questions which were in our minds and the ideas which were foremost. It seemed necessary not to make any concessions to the situation. We had extinguished all the lights except the reading light on the table beside us—just as Arthur had done the evening before—and this left the house in complete darkness except for the little patch of light which could serve us.

Except for the occasional roll and rumble of thunder and the flashes of lightning the rainfall remained gentle and gradually I found that it was soothing. A conscious duty of watchfulness occasionally acts as a soporific. I found I was growing drowsy.

Our talk ceased. Both of us took up books. I nodded over mine and presently was asleep. I do not know how long I slept. Arthur said afterwards that he also had closed his eyes and must have slept. He awoke first. Then he gently awakened me and succeeded in doing so without causing me to make any disturbance.

The rainfall had ceased to be gentle. It had become a tempestuous storm with disturbing crashes of thunder—such as reveal the destructive power of lightning.

I got one glimpse of Arthur's face in the patch of light. His expression indicated an intense apprehension. He signaled me for caution and put out our light. My nerves instantly became tense and sensitive—sensitive to the portentous demonstrations of the storm, of the whistling, roaring wind, the cataract of rain, the flash and crash of thunder and lightning, and of the potentialities in the darkness within.

Arthur did not move and neither did I. In a silence and inactivity which in themselves in the darkness were charged with significance we sat and listened.

I became conscious of a presence. At first it was revealed to something other than the normal senses. I could not at first hear anything. Then, sitting tense, I did, or imagined I did. The conviction that I did hear grew. Something was moving about in the dark somewhere in the house.

Arthur remained perfectly quiet. I did the same. Two movements somewhere in the house registered on my consciousness. The tyranny of the suggestion became intolerable. It demanded action. There were rustlings. I thought, in a lull in the storm, that I heard the footfall of padded feet on a rug.

Then I heard—Arthur afterwards said that he heard—and it was what started him into action—a mew such as a kitten might make.

It was not twenty feet from us—if I could judge the distance. It was unbelievably terrifying, having no explanation and being related to the rustling, soft movements—suggested or heard—and to the insistent sense of a presence, or of two or more unexplained presences, somewhere near us.

Again in a lull in the storm we heard the mew, and Arthur, grabbing me and propelling me with him as he went, rushed for the electric light switches which would illuminate the house.

I confess I do not know what happened. I do not know whether he turned on the lights or did not. I do not know whether the noise was the noise of falling chairs we knocked over, of the escaping enigma alarmed by us, or was merely the noise of the thunder.

There was a flash of lightning—the most vivid I ever have seen. There was a terrifying, appalling clap of thunder. There were noises and lights which utterly confused the perceptions. There was a suggestion of close danger, of outrageously strange menace, an utter collapse of rationality, and we were in darkness and the only sound was the click of the electric light switches as Arthur pushed them.

Just as we needed light the storm had interfered. Helplessly we stood—I, at least, quivering—in the dark. Then there was a flash and flood of light over the house. The lights had come back.

We were alone. There were several overturned chairs—otherwise nothing out of order—no indication of anything that might have been near us, no movements anywhere—nothing significant or startling except the expression on Arthur's face.

"I ran into it," he said, as if he were afraid of what he had to say. "I ran into it and touched it. And it was hairy."

sand," she returned, "there was a boom. He said he had been stung—"

"He was stung," said Miss Stacy Ann. "If those lands are worth four hundred dollars flat, we're doing well."

"I never thought that of Bradley," cried Pauline, hiding her face with the disgrace of it all.

"Never mind," said Miss Stacy Ann, "there are times when a man feels that he's got to lie. I suppose this was one of the times—to Brad. That isn't the point. The point is, what are we going to do?"

"I don't know," wept Pauline. "I suppose we've got to live along here and face people—" she shuddered. "Ugh," she exclaimed, "it makes me sick—sick."

Aunt Stacy Ann laughed a harsh laugh. "It's all very well to talk of living along here, child," she said, "but it can't be done. The house will be sold over your head in a day or two—one of the things Brad kept from you and me—only he didn't keep it from me. I know a hawk from a hand saw. The last straw has broken the grocer's and the butcher's backs. I've got two hundred dollars—" she lifted up her skirt and exhibited a short ugly red petticoat, which came only to her knees. "You often wondered why I wore this, child—there was a reason for it. Sewed into it, about my waist—is money—gold. If the worst came to the worst it would bury me. It's two hundred dollars, and it isn't going to bury me. It's going to take us south."

"South," echoed Pauline. South to her meant Palm Beach—Old Point Comfort—St. Augustine—Savannah—it had a pleasant sound.

Miss Stacy Ann tapped the two deeds that she held in her hand. "We're going to live upon our land," she said, "because there's no other place to go."

At Petersburgh she halted Pauline on a narrow side street in front of a fruit store.

"A quart of peanuts," she exclaimed to the proprietor.

"Twenty cents," he said. She held up her hands in amazement.

"They're only 10 cents in New York," she protested. Then she stopped him. "What are you doing, man?" she said.

"Givin' you a quart," he said, pouring them into a bag.

"Mercy," she answered, "I don't want 'em shelled."

He shrugged his shoullers. "They're all shelled down here," he said.

"They can't be fresh," she protested.

"Try 'em," he said. She tried them, and they were—very fresh. "All shelled down here," he said, "factories shell 'em by machine."

"What factories?"

He pointed over the way. "There's one," he said.

Petersburg was full of them—peanut factories. Miss Stacy Ann dragged the reluctant Pauline through one of them. Very dusty, but very satisfactory they were, these factories. At least, to Miss Stacy Ann. She sniffed with excitement.

Late that afternoon they arrived at Lorimer, their destination. In another hour they were in the midst of a waste of untilled land. They drew up at an unpainted little cottage. A man slouched forth. Miss Stacy Ann nodded to him.

"I'm the owner of this plantation," she exclaimed briskly.

The man's eyes wandered over the waste. "D'you-all call this yere a plantations?" he answered.

"I do," replied Miss Stacy Ann, "and here are my title deeds."

"Did you-all pay fo'ty thousand dollars for this yere?" he asked.

"It cost me that," said Miss Stacy Ann firmly.

The man stuck his head inside of the tumble down shack and called his wife and told her about it. The wife glanced with commiseration at Miss Stacy Ann and at Pauline.

"I suppose," said her husband sadly, "that we-uns has got to just mosey 'long somewhere else."

"Not a bit of it," said Miss Stacy Ann Stryker, "stay just where you are. We need you in our business, don't you see?"

"What business are you-all in?" he asked.

"The peanut raising business," said Miss Stacy Ann.

The man stared. "Can't raise no peanuts in this yere county," he protested.

"Can't," she returned loftily. "We'll see."

"Who told you so?" he asked.

"Factories—in Petersburgh," she answered. "They told me all about it. I've got a chart showing all the districts where peanuts can be raised. You can raise peanuts in California, you can raise peanuts in Colorado, in Kansas, in Texas—and what's more, you can raise 'em right here in Lorimer county."

"Don't believe it," he returned.

The man shook his head. "Raised a few myself twenty years ago," he said, "but, shucks, what's the good. When you raise 'em nobody wants 'em—you can't sell 'em nohow."

Miss Stacy Ann handed him a ten dollar bill. "It's just the planting time, or will be soon," she said. "You go up to Petersburgh—take this money—don't get drunk—go to the court house, if you want to, but don't get in jail. What you must do is to go and buy me bushels and bushels of peanut seed—do you know it when you see it?"

"Sure," said the man, "peanut seed is raw peanuts."

"Yes," said Miss Stacy Ann, "you do know something, after all. The roasted ones won't grow."

They all went to work that summer—and particularly in the fall. Pauline worked with the rest. She didn't want to, but she had to. The four of them were all put to it to get enough to eat, and Aunt Stacy Ann held their noses to the grindstone.

In the middle of the summer, however, something happened. The man and his wife were in the peanut fields cultivating them with an old fashioned corn cultivator and a superannuated horse.

Pauline was in the kitchen getting supper. Miss Stacy Ann was writing in the shade—a portfolio across her knees. She felt ill at ease. She hadn't tasted a peanut for weeks and weeks. She was carrying on a correspondence with the Petersburgh people, begging them to come down and look over the crop. They didn't come. Every train she hoped would bring them.

As she wrote now, a train puffed in, stopped at the crossing two miles away, and then puffed on again. Her heart stood still. She didn't dare to hope. She waited patiently. At the end of twenty minutes two men came up the lane in a borrowed rig.

"They're from Petersburgh—or I'll eat my peanuts, shells and all," she said.

The men leaped from the wagon, and took off their hats. One was clearly a southerner—long, lank, lean, powerful. The other had a familiar appearance to Miss Stacy Ann. He was a young, well set up man, evidently from the north. He had a shifty eye—and his face was a bit insolent. He was evidently prosperous, and certainly intelligent. The southerner bowed and scraped.

"Beggin' yo' pahdon, mem," he said, "but am this Miss Stryker's place."

"It am," said Miss Stacy Ann.

The southerner showed a shield. "I'm a constable," he went on, "and I come down yeah for to take up——"

"Not me," cried Miss Stacy Ann.

"No, no," said the northerner, brushing the constable aside. "We are looking for your—your nephew, Youngblood," he explained. "The fact is, we had him indicted some months ago—you know that. I recognize you now, Miss Stryker—you're looking well. Well, this Youngblood has been traced by us, through state after state—and we've traced him here—into this state, into this country. You've got him here, so we are informed. Will you kindly tell him he's wanted?"

"But," protested Miss Stacy Ann, "I have not got him here."

"My name's Guile," went on the northerner. "I'm the junior member of the firm he robbed. We must get him—we can't let a man go who has wronged us like that. Bad example. Big loss. We want to extradite him. We'll get him, now or later. You may as well give him up."

Miss Stacy Ann darted in ahead of Guile and shut the door leading into the kitchen, where Pauline was. Guile noted the action.

"He can't get away, ma'am," he said, "so what's the use?"

Miss Stacy Ann shook her head. "It's only his wife, Mrs. Youngblood," she explained. "I didn't want her to hear—I didn't want anybody to hear. It's bad enough as it is."

"Yes," said Guile, insinuatingly. He hitched forward the bench on which he sat. "Now, look here, Miss Stryker," he went on, "we don't want to persecute your nephew. What we do want is the cash. We can't afford to lose twenty thousand dollars. We're willing to settle—we'll take fifteen thousand and call it square. Come, you can raise that amount. Come over to Richmond with us—or wherever you keep your bank account—or do you still deposit in the north? I think not, do you?—and fix it up. Then I'll call off my dogs. What do you say?"

"But," protested Miss Stacy Ann, "I haven't fifteen thousand dollars to my name. I haven't anything." The tears welled into her eyes. "We—we almost starve down here."

Guile became insolent. He laughed. "Tell that to the marines," he said. "You've got wads of it laid away."

Miss Stacy Ann rose indignantly. "Mr. Guile," she said, "have you ever heard of blackmail?"

He rose in his turn. "I have," he cried, "and you can't apply the term to me."

"I do apply it to you," she said, "and I tell you now what has happened. You and your partner—crooked, both of you—thought you could worm this money out of me by a trick. You have come to me pretending that Mr. Youngblood is here—pretending that you are following him with the law. He is not here—you know it—you don't know where he is, but you think by following me you can get money. He is not here, and you know it . . ."

"You say Youngblood is not here," he exclaimed; "turn and look behind you."

Miss Stacy Ann turned and almost fainted where she stood. There, framed in the doorway, was Pauline's husband—tottering, soiled, ragged, gaunt, starved—at the end of his tether.

"Bradley," she cried, in a shrill voice.

Her cry brought Pauline from the kitchen. She stood stock still, white faced—bewildered—and stared at her husband. Bradley Youngblood waved his arm and leaned against the doorpost.

"What's the use," he said. "I'm all in. They've followed me up hill and down dale—they didn't want me—they wanted you to cough up for me—that's what they wanted. I wouldn't give them the satisfaction of coming near you. But . . . "—something rattled in his throat—"I had to. . . . there was no other place to go. I knew you were here . . . . you wrote me, to that . . . . place. . . . I didn't think you wanted me. . . ."

Miss Stacy Ann forced him into a seat. "Some whisky, Pauline," she exclaimed. "It's hidden in my cupboard—here's the key."

Pauline, bewildered, brought it, and he drank it at a gulp. "I—I came here yesterday—last night," went on Bradley. "I saw your man, and told him the story, and he hid me in the barn. I watched. I knew they were after me. I saw Guile—damn you, Guile," he snarled feebly across the table, "you did me to a turn, only you had the law on your side—but you've got me. Well, you can take me back—I'm no good any more."

Guile nodded. "Constable," he called, "here's your man. He's ready for you any time."

"There's a train stops yeah in half an hour," said the constable, "we-all just got time."

Bradley didn't wait. He staggered to his feet and placed his hand upon the constable's shoulder.

"Come on," he said, "the sooner, the better."

A sudden scream brought them up all standing. In an instant Pauline had darted across the room, and had Bradley in her arms, crying out hysterically that they had no right—that she was his, his, his . . . . Miss Stacy Ann's eyes gleamed behind her tortoise shell rimmed glasses. It pleased her to see the female coming to the fore in Pauline. Pauline had not spoken once of Bradley since they had left north—save in terms of reproach. Her mind was still wearing its hobbles. Now, for once, the woman flashed forth—the agony of the woman—her longing for her man.

"Guile," said Miss Stacy Ann, "sit down. There are two thieves here. Bradley Youngblood is one of them. You're another. Sit down. Do you hear me? If you don't hear me, I'll go north with you. The law will hear me there. Sit down."

Guile obeyed. He had reason to. Some stock brokers are never sure of what will happen next. He sat down. Miss Stacy Ann flew to her little room and flew back again.

"Pauline, my dear," she said, "sit here, and listen. When I told you that you and Bradley had lived up my forty thousand dollars I was unconsciously mistaken. Oh, yes, it went, all right. Bradley saw to that. I haven't got a dollar to my name. All that I have is postage stamps—to write to Petersburgh—and that is true. Guile," she exclaimed. After that she addressed her remarks to him.

"Guile," she went on, "you and Gilworth run a discretionary broker's business, don't you?"

"You may call it that," said Guile, uneasily.

"Keep your seat, Guile," she commanded, "and don't move." She produced a batch of accounts written on stiff ruled paper.

"Guile," she said, "Bradley speculated with my money through your office. He speculated with twenty thousand dollars of it. You understand?"

"Yes," said Guile, "and it was perfectly straight."

"Was it," she demanded. Well, it so happens that after Bradley left I went through his papers. I found these accounts—your statements. I find you did a lot of discretionary business for me. But there's one thing I can't understand. You always seemed to buy for me at a figure much—much higher than the market quotations showed—and you sold much lower. How do you make that out?"

"Prove it," said Guile.

"There," said Miss Stacy Ann, holding on to them firmly, "are your statements, and here are the market quotations taken from the official daily papers. How do you account for that? Funny business, isn't it, for a discretionary broker to cut his client's throat by buying much higher than he has to and selling lower than he can?"

"What of it," said Guile. "We had our orders."

"Who gave them?" queried she.

"Bradley Youngblood," returned Guile. "Gilworth and I can both swear to that."

Miss Stacy Ann smiled grimly. "Mr. Guile," she said sweetly, "You may have taken Mr. Youngblood's orders, but you never carried them out. You didn't buy at a high price and you didn't sell at a low. You didn't buy or sell at all."

"What's that?" demanded Guile, confronted with this bucket shop accusation.

Miss Stacy Ann tapped the papers. "You only took my money, pocketed it, and rendered me made-up accounts. That's so, and you know it's true. Look at him—look at his face, all of you."

Guile boldly smiled. "If it is true," he answered, "prove it. Proof is what you've got to have—proof, you understand."

He was quite right. But Miss Stacy Ann never faltered for an instant. She picked up a narrow strip of paper.

"Mr. Guile," she said, "this is a check for twenty thousand dollars drawn to your order by Bradley Youngblood. Is this your firm's endorsement on the back?"

"It is," said Guile, "and what of that?"

"You got the money then?"

"Of course," answered Guile, "we got it for investment. We invested under orders, and we lost."

She turned the check on its face. "Mr. Guile," she said, "you will note that Mr. Youngblood has signed this check "Trustee." When I gave him my money to invest in first bonds and mortgages, I insisted upon his placing it in his trust account. You took a check drawn by him 'trustee.'"

Guile turned color, but he was game. "What if we did?" he said.

"That," answered Aunt Stacy Ann, is what I would have asked myself some months ago, before I knew. "However, I consulted Cowen—you know him, don't you—the lawyer out home—"

"Well?" said Guile, angrily.

"Well," answered Miss Stacy Ann, "I know the law now, at any rate. When you took that trustee check you were bound to inquire upon what trust Bradley held the money and for whom—and when you failed to do it, you became just what he is—an embezzler and a thief. Mr. Guile," she concluded, sweetly, "if you desire to take Bradley back north with you, you are welcome. But if he goes, I go, and if I go, it'll cost you twenty thousand to settle up with me—it may cost you more—your liberty."

Guile didn't take Bradley Youngblood back with him. He went alone.

"We're well out of that business, Gil," he told his partner when he got back, as he wiped his brow. "We're in twenty and we're out twenty—so we'd better call it square. Those Virginia cyclones don't agree with me."

Back in Lorimer county, a week later, one of the Petersburgh men came down and looked over Miss Stacy Ann's crop, and advanced her five hundred on it, and got an option on the entire output for the next three years.

Miss Stacy Ann went out in the field where Bradley was at work and told him of it.

"Brad," she said, "you made a big mistake when you deeded me this farm. You only owed me forty thousand, and this plantation will be worth sixty in four years or so."

Brad Youngblood looked along the row that he was hoeing. "It'll be worth more than that—to me," he said, brushing his hand across his face.

Miss Stacy Ann held out a small brown bag. "The Petersburgh party brought down some peanuts with him—first I've had in months. Try 'em, Brad. Do you know what they remind me of—the peanuts you used to buy for me from the man in Cortlandt street—only," she faltered, "somehow they tasted better when you used to bring 'em, Brad."

SYNOPSIS.

The Brownings, Richard and Hope, are entertaining in their own charming manner on Christmas eve. Hope leaves the room for a moment and re-enters with terrible bruises on her throat, announcing a masked man discovered at her jewel case struck her cruelly. Richard and Philip Kline search the grounds. The servants are questioned, and Richard decides they must all be discharged, and plans to take Hope south. Saran Parr, who lives in the village, and has known Hope always, appears to know more than she cares to tell about the happening. Philip and Dr. Arthur spend the night at the Parrs, returning to Quatuck the next morning. Sarah tells them about Esther Browning, Richard's mother, of her love for children and all young, tender things. Richard takes Hope south after Christmas, and there Hope has another terrifying experience. A Negro is hanged as suspect. She and Richard go to New York, and Dr. Arthur sees a horrified look in her eyes one evening while they are dining. Jasper Lord, Richard's uncle, returns from a voyage, bringing with him Hope's brother, Gerald. Dr. Arthur thinks Gerald's coming worries Hope. He is quite sure that Gerald is responsible for the marks at Hope's throat, and sits up all night at the Browning's to guard her from harm. He has a peculiar sensation of being watched. Philip Kline learns that Jasper Lord sent a huge ape to Quatuck years before.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT.

THE SINISTER SCREAM.

THE night, as we walked from the Parr's to Quatuck house, was pleasantly ominous. For a country boy and girl on one of the lilac lanes there would have been no other significance than that of distant lightning, flashing into dark clouds on the horizon—the threat of rain which would drive them indoors—a night of heavy odors and intimations.

There are some nights in early summer which seem to come out of the whole past of the human race and to reveal its whole prospect, beautiful in melancholy, charged with all the significance of the insignificance of the individual—thus melancholy.

"It's really going to be a bad storm," said Arthur as we walked ahead, "but I love it. I can't help wondering what ever could have put that ape idea in your head. Of all the preposterous presumptions which could be used as an outrageous explanation of something to be explained rationally it is the worst I ever heard."

"I am not infatuated with the idea," I said apologetically. "It just occurred to me. Possibly it travels back to the Murders of the Rue Morgue—unconsciously when I got it."

We were by this time within 300 yards of the house. Then we were paralyzed for the instant, held motionless, by a cry of fright, a human cry which had in it that quality of terror contained in the scream of a horse, which is the sound of great horror because it comes from an animal which does not frequently make a sound of any kind.

At that instant the southern sky again opened up in abysses of incandescent heat, and this time a roll of thunder filled the air. In our confusion I could not be certain what I heard, but I thought that, following the cry of terror and covered by the roll of thunder—nevertheless audible in this—there had been an animal scream—the savage cry of a savage beast.

I could hear the gasp of Arthur's breath. He took me by the elbow.

"You heard that?" he asked.

"I heard something," I said.

"What did you hear?" he asked.

"I thought I heard a man yelling," I said.

"It was a man's voice," he said as if infinitely relieved. "I thought so. You're sure of it? A man's voice?"

Arthur seemed unwilling to ask the next question, evidently for fear that the answer might confirm a suspicion or strengthen a conviction.

"Did you hear anything but that cry?" he asked timidly.

"No," I said, lying, "nothing but the sound of a man's voice, a voice yelling at something."

"I'm glad we're here, anyway," he said. "I did think for a second I heard something different—something I'd call animal."

"You have laughed at me, but now you are confessing the power of suggestion," I said. "I mentioned a theory that you think is absurd. Now you are beginning to be affected by it."

I was much more affected than Arthur could have been, but I wanted to protect him—as my friend and as Hope's friend—from the presumably idle terrors of my own thought. I did not want him to have the sensations I had—the emotions or the suspicions.

I had begun to think of Arthur in new terms. He was nothing, in his own consciousness, but Hope's friend; but he was, in his orderly, controlled, certain, and undemonstrative way, much more than that. She remained indelibly in his mind, imagination, and affections. She was, and yet she never could be, all the things she was to him, and he, a self-disciplined man, restrained—a realist as well as a romanticist—took his life without tears, complaint, or grumbling.

Sarah had opened for me a door into Arthur's sanctuary. He had become in a real fashion strange—strange because with so profound an emotion hidden he had been so commonplace—the discovery of a volcano crater in a geranium bed. Possibly if I had seen a citizen of no apparent consequence pull out of his pocket a handful of thousand dollar bills as he hunted for 5 cents for carfare I might have had something close to the sensation which Arthur was beginning to produce.

He so little suggested drama. He was so placid, so apparently content and happy, so satisfied, with such a complete life, seemingly, and yet under his placidity he was discovered in a complex of emotions not at all revealed. He might have suffered a great deal, excruciatingly, in the lion's den of the emotions into which people are thrown occasionally and out of which they do not come untouched.

We came to the house. Gerald was sitting with Hope and Richard—if so truculent an attitude as his could be called communion of any sort. Gerald, I saw, made few compromises and had few hypocrisies. Such social graces he ignored. He was sullen and in spite of circumstances remained sullen.

Hope and Richard were both in their best mood—towards us. They may have been having a very disagreeable time with Gerald, but they did not show it.

Gerald was an anomaly in the house. I could not imagine these three sitting down in the conditions which we knew to be so genial.

Richard wore a sweater and had laced boots on and was smoking a pipe by the fire.

Gerald was a big hulk in another chair. His hands grasped the chair arms. I noticed not only their suggestions of power but the extraordinary length of the fingers. He was holding the chair arms so tightly that the skin whitened over his muscles—as if in his thoughts he were strangling something—but his expression was not unusually unpleasant. I even thought that he looked as nearly amiable as he ever could.

"Gerald has been telling us—or rather me—stories of Uncle Jasper," said Hope. She had tried from the time her brother came to accept him as a normal person and by her acceptance have others see him as such—a generous and kindly imposition of her sweetness upon the intelligence of others—as if she were to say, "This skunk cabbage is a rose," and have you see it as such.

Richard said he would change his clothes—put on house slippers instead of the boots and a house coat instead of the sweater. He had been out, he said, fixing some things against the coming storm. He found pleasure in doing some of the things about the place, as if he were its sole means of provision and prevision for comfort and security.

He sat with us, in the careless but always gracious habit which so well became him, unlacing his boots.

"Being out and seeing to things on a night like this," he said, "is like reefing sails before a storm. You get a sense of danger and you have a feeling that with a little luck and some ordinary precautions you'll survive it in comfort. I like it. It's going to be a beautiful storm. I'll be down again in a minute."

"While you were out did you hear a strange noise?" I asked. "We were up on the hill and heard something."

"Yes, I did," he said. "Nothing particular, but a man yelled and a horse screamed from the stables—just about the same time. I remember it because I hate to hear a frightened horse."

"I imagine that's what we heard," I said.

"It sounded as if something had terrified the horse, but I can't imagine what," said Richard, "something animal. If we had wolves around here you might think that was it. I noticed it but didn't give it much thought."

He got up and said he would be back in a minute.

Gerald had said nothing. He had acknowledged our presence by a glance. His hands rested on the arms of his chair, strangling something—powerful, long fingered hands. You did not expect Gerald to say anything. The peculiar quality of his sullen taciturnity was its normality. His presence did not inject anything abnormal into a gathering. He was so much what you instantly expected him to be that he was therefore a piece of furniture. You accepted him, made a point of not running into him, and could then forget him—that was true or would have been true for people who did not have, as Arthur and I had, reason for thinking that he might be responsible for the attacks upon Hope.

For an instant his long fingers stopped strangling the arms of the chair and he half raised up and, to my astonishment, began to speak.

"I think I'll go to bed," he said.

"All right, Gerald," said Hope. "I know you are tired."

At that moment one of the servants, a woman, came in with the breathless abruptness which declares a reason for ignoring ordinary decorum.

"Mrs. Browning!" she exclaimed.

Richard had gone upstairs. The rest of us looked at the woman with curiosity.

"Yes, Milly," said Hope.

"One of the men has something I think he ought to tell you, but he's timid and backward and he's been scared and doesn't want to do it. I think he ought to."

The Brownings' establishment had been entirely changed, the servants being all of date since the return of Richard and Hope from the south, but Hope's influence was such that it soon gave new people a sense of attachment. Hope could be forced to reorganize her household every six months, as she had, and yet keep within it all the values of long establishment.

"Who is it, Milly?" she asked.

"Abner," said the woman. "I'll admit he isn't the brightest thing in the world, but he's honest, and he's been honest scared."

"What scared him?" Hope asked.

"That's what he ought to tell you," said Milly.

"Can't you tell it—if he is backward?"

"I could tell you what he has told us, but you ought to hear what he would tell you."

"Ask him if he won't come in," said Hope. Tell him we want him to."

"I'll tell him you say he's got to."

"No, don't do that," said Hope. "Just say we want him to tell us. I think he will."

Milly looked disappointed, as if she wanted to be in suggestion and power a posse comitatus, but she went on a merely persuasive errand.

Gerald, his sullen face showing an interest which might have been one of curiosity or suspicion, settled back in his chair and his long fingers again strangled the upholstering. Presently Milly came back with a man, young, sturdy, awkward, timid, still frightened, and in his embarrassing duty of narration very reluctant.

"Thanks, Abner," said Hope. "Milly says you were startled by something that we ought to know."

"Yes, ma'am," said Abner, looking at her, then around the room, and then at the floor.

"Take that chair by you," said Hope. "Milly, you stay. And Abner, you tell us what it was."

Abner sat on the edge of the chair and looked over his shoulder towards the door by which he had entered—as if he were making sure of an open avenue of escape. He looked steadily at the floor for a while, but presently, turning his eyes towards Hope, he seemed to find the encouragement he needed and thereafter during his story looked at her.

He had been in the barns, he said, doing his evening's work, a little later than usual because he had had to make a trip to Appleton and had been delayed in getting home. The storm—which had not yet broken—was gathering. The horses were nervous and excited, he said. At first he thought it was the storm.

The two thoroughbreds that were used as saddle horses were on edge—Jim particularly. He was so fidgety that Abner had to be careful in going into his stall.

"He r'ared and plunged bad, Mrs. Browning," said Abner, "and quivered, and Aster wasn't much better. Jim got to r'aring and kicking and I couldn't get them quiet. It was thundering low, and the thoroughbreds hate the thunder. Three of the dogs was with me—that snappy little fox terrier Minx, and Bob, the mongrel collie, and Tam Car, the Airedale."

Tam Car was Hope's favorite dog—Thomas Carlyle was his inspired name, which he got by the suggestions of his own appearance. For ordinary usage he was Tam or Tam Car.

"Minx got wild with barking," Abner said, "and Jim nearly kicked her into the hayloft. Tam is always afraid of thunder, and at first he tried to hide, but he came out after while, growling kind of down in his throat. Bob isn't afraid of thunder, and he lay on the floor, but the bristles were up about his neck and he was growling."

Abner got a little more confidence in the validity of his story and, with his eyes fixed on Hope, continued with more assurance.

The irritation, nervousness, and apprehension in the stable, which he had first attributed to the coming storm, seemed, he thought, to have another cause. The storm was not sufficient reason. He tried to say that he began to suspect that the animals were conscious of something threatening or dangerous near them.

In this attempt he was a semi-articulate man, dealing with emotions he could feel, the simple emotions of superstitious fear started by natural phenomena—a most alarming start of primitive fear because it is a natural prompting for human caution—an alarm of birds cautions the Indian in hostile country, the bristling ruff on the dog's neck warns of the wolf, a scurry of hens in the barnyard of the hawk.

The keener perceptions of domestic animals afford premonitions of unperceived dangers, and Abner in the stable with the nervous, excited animals began to feel the sense of something near by, and something not good.

If it had been the frontier, if danger were a thing in the normal, he would have been instantly on guard. The signs were such as frequently form a pioneer's warning, but it was hard for him to get away from the idea that the ominous approaching storm had upset the animals and that nothing else had to be thought of.

He tried to explain himself, but would have been hopeless without sympathetic interpretation. From the stable he had gone into the apple orchard. In the morning he had been trimming dead limbs off the trees and had left a saw there. He wanted to get it before the rain.

The distance was less than a hundred yards from the stable. None of the dogs had come with him—an unusual thing, because ordinarily they wanted nothing more than a run with him. They were fascinated by something about the stable, were jumping, barking into corners, and would not leave.

Abner had gone down into the orchard, with the gathering storm rumbling more ominously. Except for the flashes of lightning it was utterly dark, but he knew the paths and ways so well that he could go into the orchard without a lantern.

He had been impressed but not startled by the demonstrations in the stable. It at once takes a great deal and requires very little to disturb the equilibrium of such minds. A great deal of disturbance which is wholly normal or explicable normally is accepted normally. The barn on fire would not have excited Abner unusually. A bat, unexplained, in the hayloft might have terrified him.

He had found the saw. He had just picked it up. He was then conscious of a rustling near him. There was no wind at that moment, but something, something with bulk and substance, moved close to him. He thought it was an animal, and he thought it was not an animal he might expect to find in the orchard—a dog or a cow or one of the sheep.

Abner in telling tried to be precise and utterly realistic. I am reading much of my imagination into his stuttering narrative. Abner, on the edge of his chair, never ceased to be embarrassed and never ceased to falter.

What had happened to him he hardly knew. There had been the distinct and appreciated presence. It was animal. It was not animal in a sense he was accustomed to.

"I kind of thought," he said slowly, with his eyes held by Hope's sympathetic attention, "that whatever it was dropped out of the tree. I was under that old Ben Davis in the orchard. That's where I had left the saw.

"Maybe I'm foolish about it all, but something did happen, and I am not naturally skeery. I didn't see anything, because it was too dark, but I fancied I smelt something—something like a menagerie—and I know I felt something."

Abner stopped for an instant and looked at Hope with focused attention.

"I know I felt something," he said again, "because something hairy hit me and some

FIGHTING SYMBOLS

NOW that the combat divisions of the United States army are returning to America, it is noticed that their members are wearing varihued insignia unknown to those who saw them march away in their plain khaki.

These fighting symbols which encompass almost all of the colors of the rainbow are worn on the left sleeve at the shoulder. They became necessary through the fighting in the Argonne, so that the men of one division or army corps could quickly recognize their comrades and rally after a hard fight in which many of them might have been widely separated from their units or mixed up with other units.

The Thirty-third division from Chicago wears a yellow cross on a black circle. The Rainbow division wears a red, yellow and blue segment of a rainbow. The Twenty-ninth, coming from both the south and north, wears a circle of blended blue and gray. The Eightieth division from Virginia wears a reproduction of the Blue Ridge sky line. There are symbols for the armies, the corps, and the divisions.

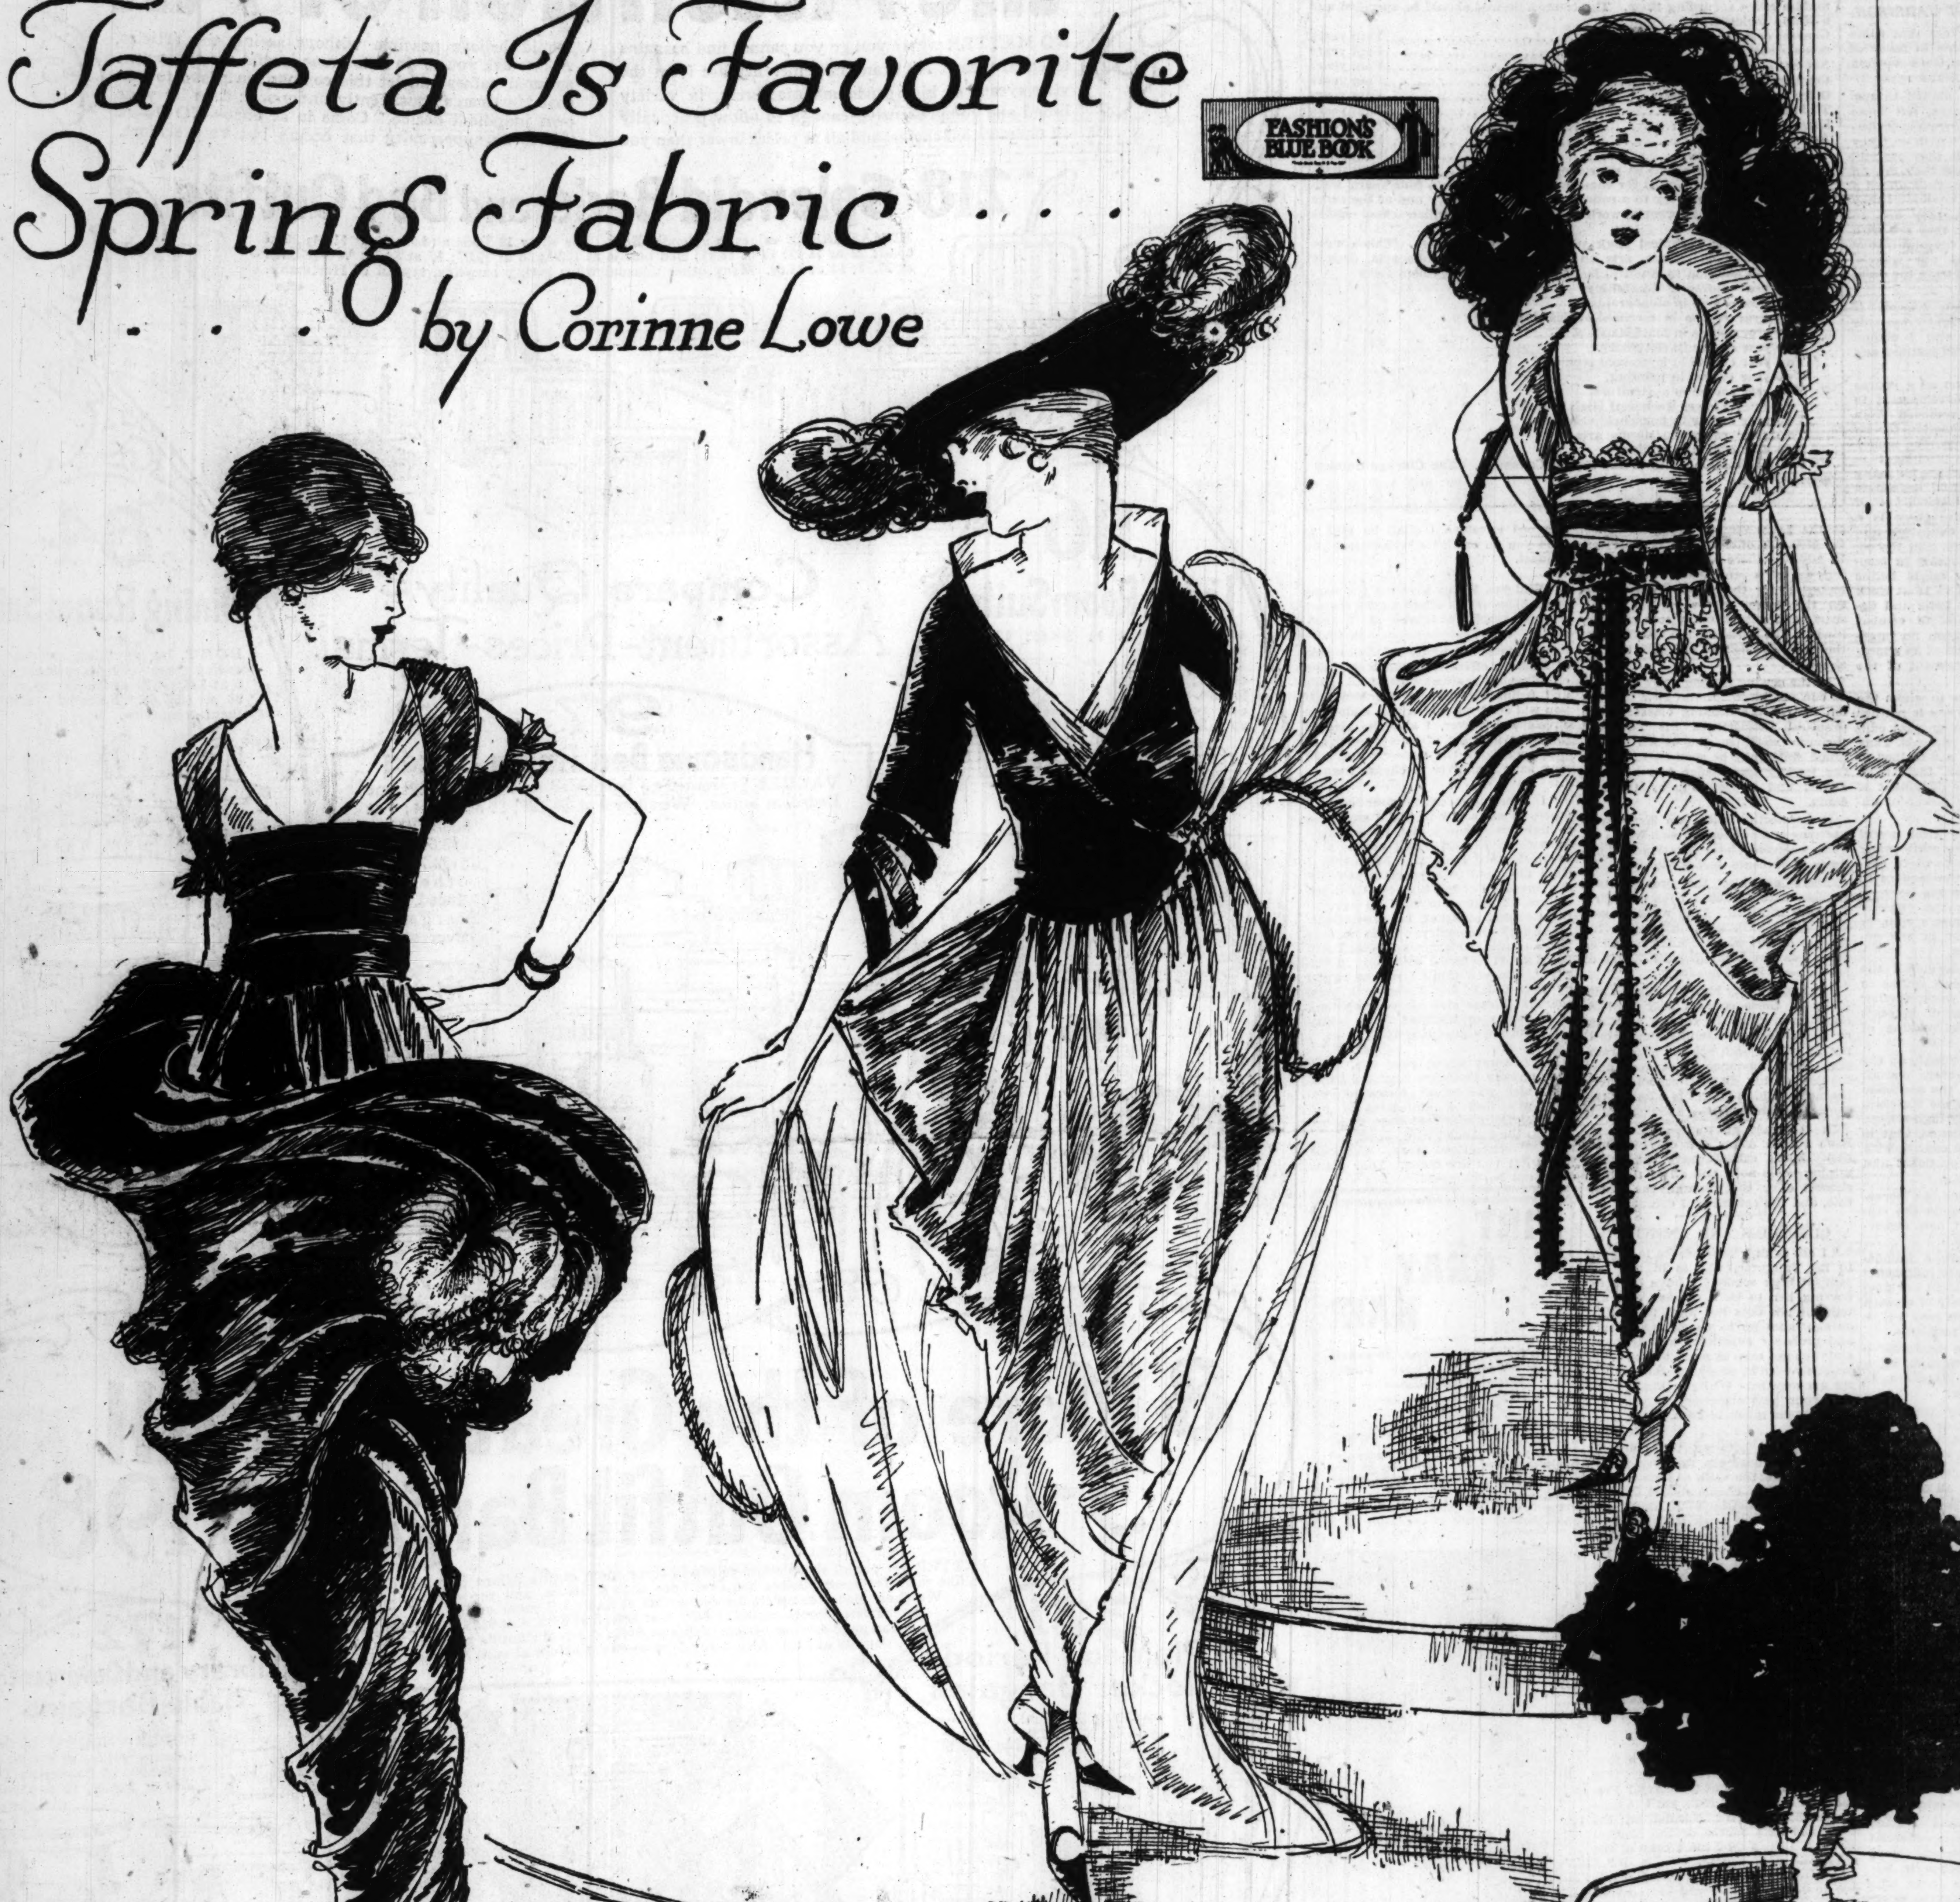
Taffeta Is Favorite Spring Fabric . . .

. . . by Corinne Lowe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

In the spring "taffeteria" we find at the left a taffeta of midnight blue held over the shoulders with blue velvet ribbon and caught in the voluminous overskirt with the prevalent ostrich plumes—these in French gray, mustard color, and old rose, respectively. Next is a dinner frock which, joining apple green taffeta skirt with black velvet surplice bodice, illustrates the new tendency to serving collars high in the back. The last is a turquoise taffeta with a Medici collar which rolls backward to display a tiny apron of gold lace held by vari-colored ribbons.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Several of us were looking on at a dance given by one of the men's clubs here in town. "Well," said my friend Polly, "what do you make of it, anyway? What would you say was the style?"

It's a proper question to ask just now. People are wearing everything. They seem to have got out clothes that were committed in the year 1898 and are wearing them just as if the scent of the camphor didn't cling round them still. No wonder Polly went away from that dance with the remark that most of the clothes there seemed to have come straight from the moth ball to the February ball.

Nor does Paris seem to have done anything toward unscrambling the mode. The earliest of the American buyers are just now scuttling back from the French openings, where the foreign dressmakers always announce to the world just what is going to happen to the clothes line for the next six months. And their tidings are vague.

Of course the Directoire does seem to be somewhat in the ascendant. We've been doing a great deal of summer catalogue work on that same Directoire ourselves. Now it seems that along with the vogue of the poke-bonnet we are to have many features borrowed from the late days of the French revolution. Short waists, little short sleeves, the rather long line, coats that are long and fitted and have perhaps the rolling Robespierre collar, sashes such as those dapper dudish gentlemen known as the Incroyables used to wear, many striped materials and trimmings—they did stripes a great deal, please remember, during the Directoire period—are featured by the French leaders of dress thought.

Regarding this, the buyer of a store who has just been over to Paris picking out his foreign models, was telling me about a frock made by Bulloz.

"It's the quaintest thing you ever saw," said he. "Taffeta made with short waist, very short sleeves, long skirt, and lingerie guimpe. Might have walked straight out of Malmaison, you know."

In evening and dinner frocks the taffeteria is again working. Taffeta—usually in high shades—vies with the still popular metallic effects. These evening gowns of taffeta are often trimmed with jet cabochons, but the ostrich plume sprouting from some spot—shoulder or girdle or skirt—is a feature which one sees most frequently.

We are giving here today a page of taffeta evening frocks and the one at the left illustrates how the landscape ostrich do thrive. For here in that wave of a skirt which, brought about from the back, billows about the hips are caught three tips—French gray, mustard, and old rose. The taffeta of this frock is midnight blue and old blue velvet ribbon is brought over the shoulders to fall in little bows over the arms. Soft silver net fills in the bodice.

The stunning dinner gown to the right points to no less than three tendencies in the mode. One is to combine bodice of one material and color with skirt of another. The second is the partiality to that surplice waist which is so becoming to the perfect thirty-six. Last of all, we see a fondness for the bodice which forms a high collar in the back.

The draped skirt here is apple green taffeta, which appears again in the lining of collar and the inner fold of the waist. The tight fitting bodice—which requires, by the way, careful corseting—has the short sleeves so much worn nowadays and they are finished with a charming bracelet arrangement in which a strip of green taffeta is placed between those of velvet.

Turquoise blue taffeta with a picturesque Medici collar is expounded in the next frock. The most striking item here is the skirt where five tucks hold the taffeta out stiffly at the sides. There is an adorable little apron of gold lace covered with bands of old rose over which appear in turn mustard color and violet ribbons, picot edged and ending in long ties. The puff sleeves and inner fold of the bodice are gold net.

FULL EQUIPMENT AT HARRISON.

IT is an interesting fact that some of the best arguments in favor of a liberal education were written 2,000 years ago. Cicero says:

"Other pursuits are limited to special times, seasons, places, but these intellectual pursuits know no such limitations; they are always with us. They develop us in our youth, they are still a delight in our old age; they are an honor in our prosperity, they afford a retreat and comfort in adversity; they give joy in the home, they are no drawback in the forum; they are with us in the long hours of the night, they are the companions of our travels, and they still abide with us in the quiet of our country life."

Then Cicero continues: "Even if pleasure alone were sought from this pursuit of knowledge, still I should consider such pursuit well justified and full of reward."

This view of education as a source of joy and means of development to the individual is far removed from the consideration of education for its money value. This latter, the money value, has been made prominent in these columns; partly because for many that must be the first and legitimate consideration in any expenditure of time; also partly because there is a widespread belief that education and money do not go together; that the educated man is not a success in business, and that the boy might better spend the years from 14 to 18 at work than in school. So the facts and figures quoted have aimed to combat that view. There has been no intention to ignore other values of an education—that is, the development of the man and the citizen.

In truth, it is for those to whom the immediate getting of money is neither a necessity nor an ambition that education offers its highest rewards. They make haste slowly, they are trained in more and different lines, their sympathies are wider, their judgment is more reliable, and their power of enjoyment is increased.

Furthermore, they are most useful citizens. They repay the state many times for the effort put forth to educate them. They are the leaders in the community, they are the lawyers, the doctors; they head the citizens' league or the business men's club, or they are found foremost in the enforcing of law and order.

Thus education has developed the thinking man. The general course in high school begins the work; further training either in college or in one's own study continues the making of the good citizen.

We cannot insist too strongly on the value of this quiet, leisurely pursuit of the varied subjects in the academic course. We have chosen the Harrison Technical as a typical city high school, for it combines the academic, that is the general and scientific course, with the technical and the vocational and the prevocational courses.

The science course trains in observation and reasoning and puts the student in position to meet new discoveries with understanding.

The history courses are a foundation on which one can base judgments of our current history. Even our government is urging the study of modern European history that we may better meet new international problems.

English—can it ever be mastered?—English as a spoken language, as a written language, as a literature, is a boundless field for study.

As for the foreign languages, each one in turn is a connecting link with a new national life and thus gives wider understanding and sympathy.

The architectural, the agricultural, the normal, and the arts all offer special preparatory training, as an excellent foundation for work during the years to come.

But the best result of all of this general education, the finest fruit that true education bears, is the awakened spirit, the inspiration to go on, the impulse of the soul to seek new truths. If education does not inspire, it has failed. If the student does not continue to advance intellectually and spiritually after his formal schooling, then he has missed the highest end of his training. The object of education is not to "furnish the mind, but to forge it," to give it strength, direction, purpose.

Beneath all the details of a too rapidly growing school system like our own and back of all the hurry and criticism and strife live these ideals.

Besides the general and science courses at Harrison, the commercial is another strong department. Here again the academic influence is felt in the effort to persuade those who have taken the two year course to remain and complete the four year.

The war, which has taught us the great need for trained workers, has shown us that the need is no greater in any line than in stenography. The high school offers four stenographic courses—a two year course, with a modest attempt at some general education; a four year course, which offers a good general education; an office preparatory course, which gives still more attention to stenography, allowing three or four years of daily work on that subject, and there is also a special five months' course offered to high school graduates.

Nor are there any finer technical courses offered in any high school, not even Lane and Crane, which are exclusively technical, than are to be had at Harrison. There are nearly 2300 pupils in the school and many more of them are boys than girls.

Here may be had work in the forge and foundry classes; work in the machine shop rooms; pattern drafting, tin and sheet metal work, and for the last year in high school a year of electrical work, in which the student makes various electrical articles, such as toasters, etc. Here are given the two year courses and the four year courses but the boys are urged to stay for four years if they possibly can. Fully 60 per cent of the boys, it is claimed, go on from the school to college and other advanced institutions.

All of the courses which are offered at the Lucy Flower Technical school for girls are offered here at Harrison. In addition there are classes in weaving; the girls are taught to make the materials for their own dresses, rugs for the floors, towels for the home, scarfs and needlework pieces of many kinds. The girls do a great deal of their own dyeing also and their own designing.

In the sewing classes there are power run machines for the girls to work on, and in the cooking classes much practical experience is afforded through work in the lunch rooms. Much work may be seen on exhibit in the jewelry line, which has been designed and carried out by the students.

In connection with two large gymnasiums is a swimming pool, which affords exercise and relaxation to hundreds of students during the year.

There are also the prevocational courses here for both boys and girls who are retarded. This work in seventh and eighth grade classes is for the boy or girl who for some reason or other has not kept up with others of his own age in the grades.

In all of the city high schools the majority of these courses may be had. Sometimes, as in the case of printing, or electricity, or machine shop work, not all of the high schools offer training. In this instance the student must inquire of his district school where the nearest high school is offering the work he wishes.

In the case of weaving Harrison High school offers the only instruction. Many schools have the swimming pools now, and all of the high schools offer the general, the scientific, and the commercial courses.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"I am asking your advice in regard to my daughter, who is in her last year at high school. I have been expecting her to be a teacher, but she tells me she does not want to do this, as she must go to normal two years and probably substitute a year more and then not earn as much as she could probably earn by studying stenography for six months. Will you kindly give this your best attention, as your answer means much to both of us.
"R. D."

Comparison between the teacher's life and the business woman's life is hard to make; the work of each is widely different; the choice should lie with the individual entirely. To those who like teaching the work with the children, the associations of the school, the long vacations in summer and the Saturday holiday make teaching infinitely more desirable than business. In business the hours are longer, the vacations shorter, but for the first few years at any rate the average pecuniary returns are considerably larger. If your daughter has no liking for teaching and does not think she would care for the life I should certainly send her to some business college after she leaves high school and fit her for a business life.

"I am in high school taking a four year course in household arts. Will this course admit me to Normal Preparatory school, and if so, am I to take an examination for Normal on the household arts course or the Normal course? Please send me a copy of the household arts course. R. F."

The household arts course will admit you to Normal. You will be required to pass an examination on the household arts course since that is the one you have been taking in high school. If you will send me an addressed, stamped envelope I shall be glad to send you an outline of the course you request.

"Will you kindly give me the name of a college which offers a good mathematical teacher's course in Wisconsin? S. W."

The state university of Wisconsin at Madison offers excellent instruction on advanced mathematics of all kinds and trains directly for teaching. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope, however, I shall be glad to to send you a list of colleges and private schools in the state so that you may have a number to choose from.

"I would appreciate your opinion much. I am a boy 21 and I am going to high school half a day, I stand high in my studies and I will not be able to finish until I am 22. After that I shall not need to support myself but can spend all of my time until I finish college. I intend to take an agricultural course at Ames, Ia., specializing in animal husbandry. It is a four years course, which means that I will be 26 or 27 before I start out in the world. Do you think I will be so old by that time? Did I choose a good course? Please give me your opinion, as it seems to me that 27 is pretty old; most boys graduate at 22 or so.
"C. D. B."

Don't worry about your age. You have already had some business training which will be of service to you. You will find a statement in the "School Counselor" of Feb. 2 in regard to the financial value of an education in agricultural work. Continue just what you are doing. Your plans could not be improved.

Wants a Wig.

"I have been sick for a long time and have lost my hair. I must work, and I would like a dark brown or a black wig. I am willing to pay parcel post or call for it. V. S."

This is certainly a worthy cause and deserves assistance.

No Clothes, No Money.

"Since you have done so much for others through your corner, I wonder if you can help me? I am crippled, but have been taking treatments and am about ready to accept a position; but I need clothes, and have no ready money. As my home is in the country, twenty miles from my work, the monthly railroad ticket will have to be paid for in advance. I am tall and wear size 40. Anything will be acceptable, as I can sew and will have all the evenings to do it in. I have some latest copies of the popular songs and magazines that can be had for the asking and address. I am giving a friend's address of street number, and she will call for anything given to me and see that I receive it. M. L. B."

Any outgrown clothes would be gratefully received by M. L. B.

Wants An Incubator.

"I wonder if anyone has a small incubator they are not going to use this year. My husband is sick, and I am trying to make ends meet by raising chickens. I have a hard time keeping my two little girls in clothing. MRS. H. J. P."

Perhaps not only the incubator, but some warm clothing for the little girls will be forthcoming.

Sick and Lonely.

"I am confined to my bed all of the time and would like so much to get hold of some discarded phonograph to keep me from getting so dreadfully lonesome. G. E. B."

Any one who has been sick for any length of time at all will appreciate something of what it is to be bedridden, and will surely communicate with this young person if they have any kind of musical instrument to give away.

Wants Clothes for Her Boys.

"I wonder if your readers have any clothes for my three boys, 6, 7, and 9 years? I am a widow, working every day, but I only earn $12 a week and have to pay $8 rent each month. If you have the addresses of any people that will help me I shall appreciate their names and addresses. "MRS. A. K."

I surely will keep on the watch for some one to help you out and am certain that it will not be long before you will receive some clothing for your small boys.

Crochet Patterns.

"I would like some crochet patterns of lace and insertion. My husband is totally disabled and I do crocheting to meet part of the necessary expenses. Through you I ought to be able to get some new patterns. Of course I have nothing to offer in return. Six years of sickness has left us very poor. Can you help me in this matter? MRS. J. R. T."

I am sure some readers have attractive crochet patterns which they will be glad to send you and help you in your effort to support your husband.

To Beautify a Bungalow.

"I am asking an unusual favor. We have just finished building our house, which took us two years. I desire some shrubs, and bushes, and also some peonie roots. Do you think that some readers might have overgrown lilac or snowball bushes? I would be very glad to get them and dig them myself. I will also return the favor if it is in my power to do so. I would also be glad to advise any one on building a home. We have a six room bungalow which I painted inside and out; we started on our nerve two years ago and now have an acre lot and have raised 200 quarts of vegetables. It is work, but it is worth while, and I will be glad to show others how I got started. MRS. G. W."

This is certainly a woman worth helping. Perhaps some one would like to hear more details of her story of how she started her bungalow, too, especially with the war over and spring coming on.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers to Inquiries

IRENE: USUALLY IT'S WHEN nails are hard and brittle that they break off easily. I never heard of soft nails tearing that way. There is on the market a preparation that women are using that has been complained about frequently to me by women as having a most destructive influence on the nails. Will you tell me if you are using anything of this sort? The irritated skin you describe is comparable to the roughened, pimply condition on the upper arm, and it is due to a lack of vigorous rubbing after the bath. You can rid yourself of this trouble by scrubbing the affected part vigorously and rubbing equally vigorously with a coarse towel until the flesh glows warmly.

MILLIE: A GIRL FIVE FEET eight inches, age 17, should weigh 136 pounds. Your letter gave me pleasure, too. Mutual admiration society, is it not?

MARIE: IF YOU DO NOT REACT easily from the plunge, don't take it. Some can't stand the cold plunge. Take a shower until you are better trained to the plunge. You can tell if you do not warm up quickly after the rubbing which follows the plunge.

* *

LOUELLA: YOU LOSE. BLACK won't get the feminine vote because it is an ageing color. Blue is more universally becoming. Unless you can afford an extra good quality of black don't buy it.

* *

MARY U.: AS LONG AS YOUR hair is in such a poor condition have it cropped. I'd have it cut quite close and give it a chance to grow in more evenly. Won't you have your mother write to me and tell me more about your physical condition? I take it you must be a delicate little girl and that is why your hair is in such poor condition. It may be you are not getting the kind of food that children of 10 should be eating. If your mother and father both have heavy hair it would seem that your birthright also was a nice head of hair.

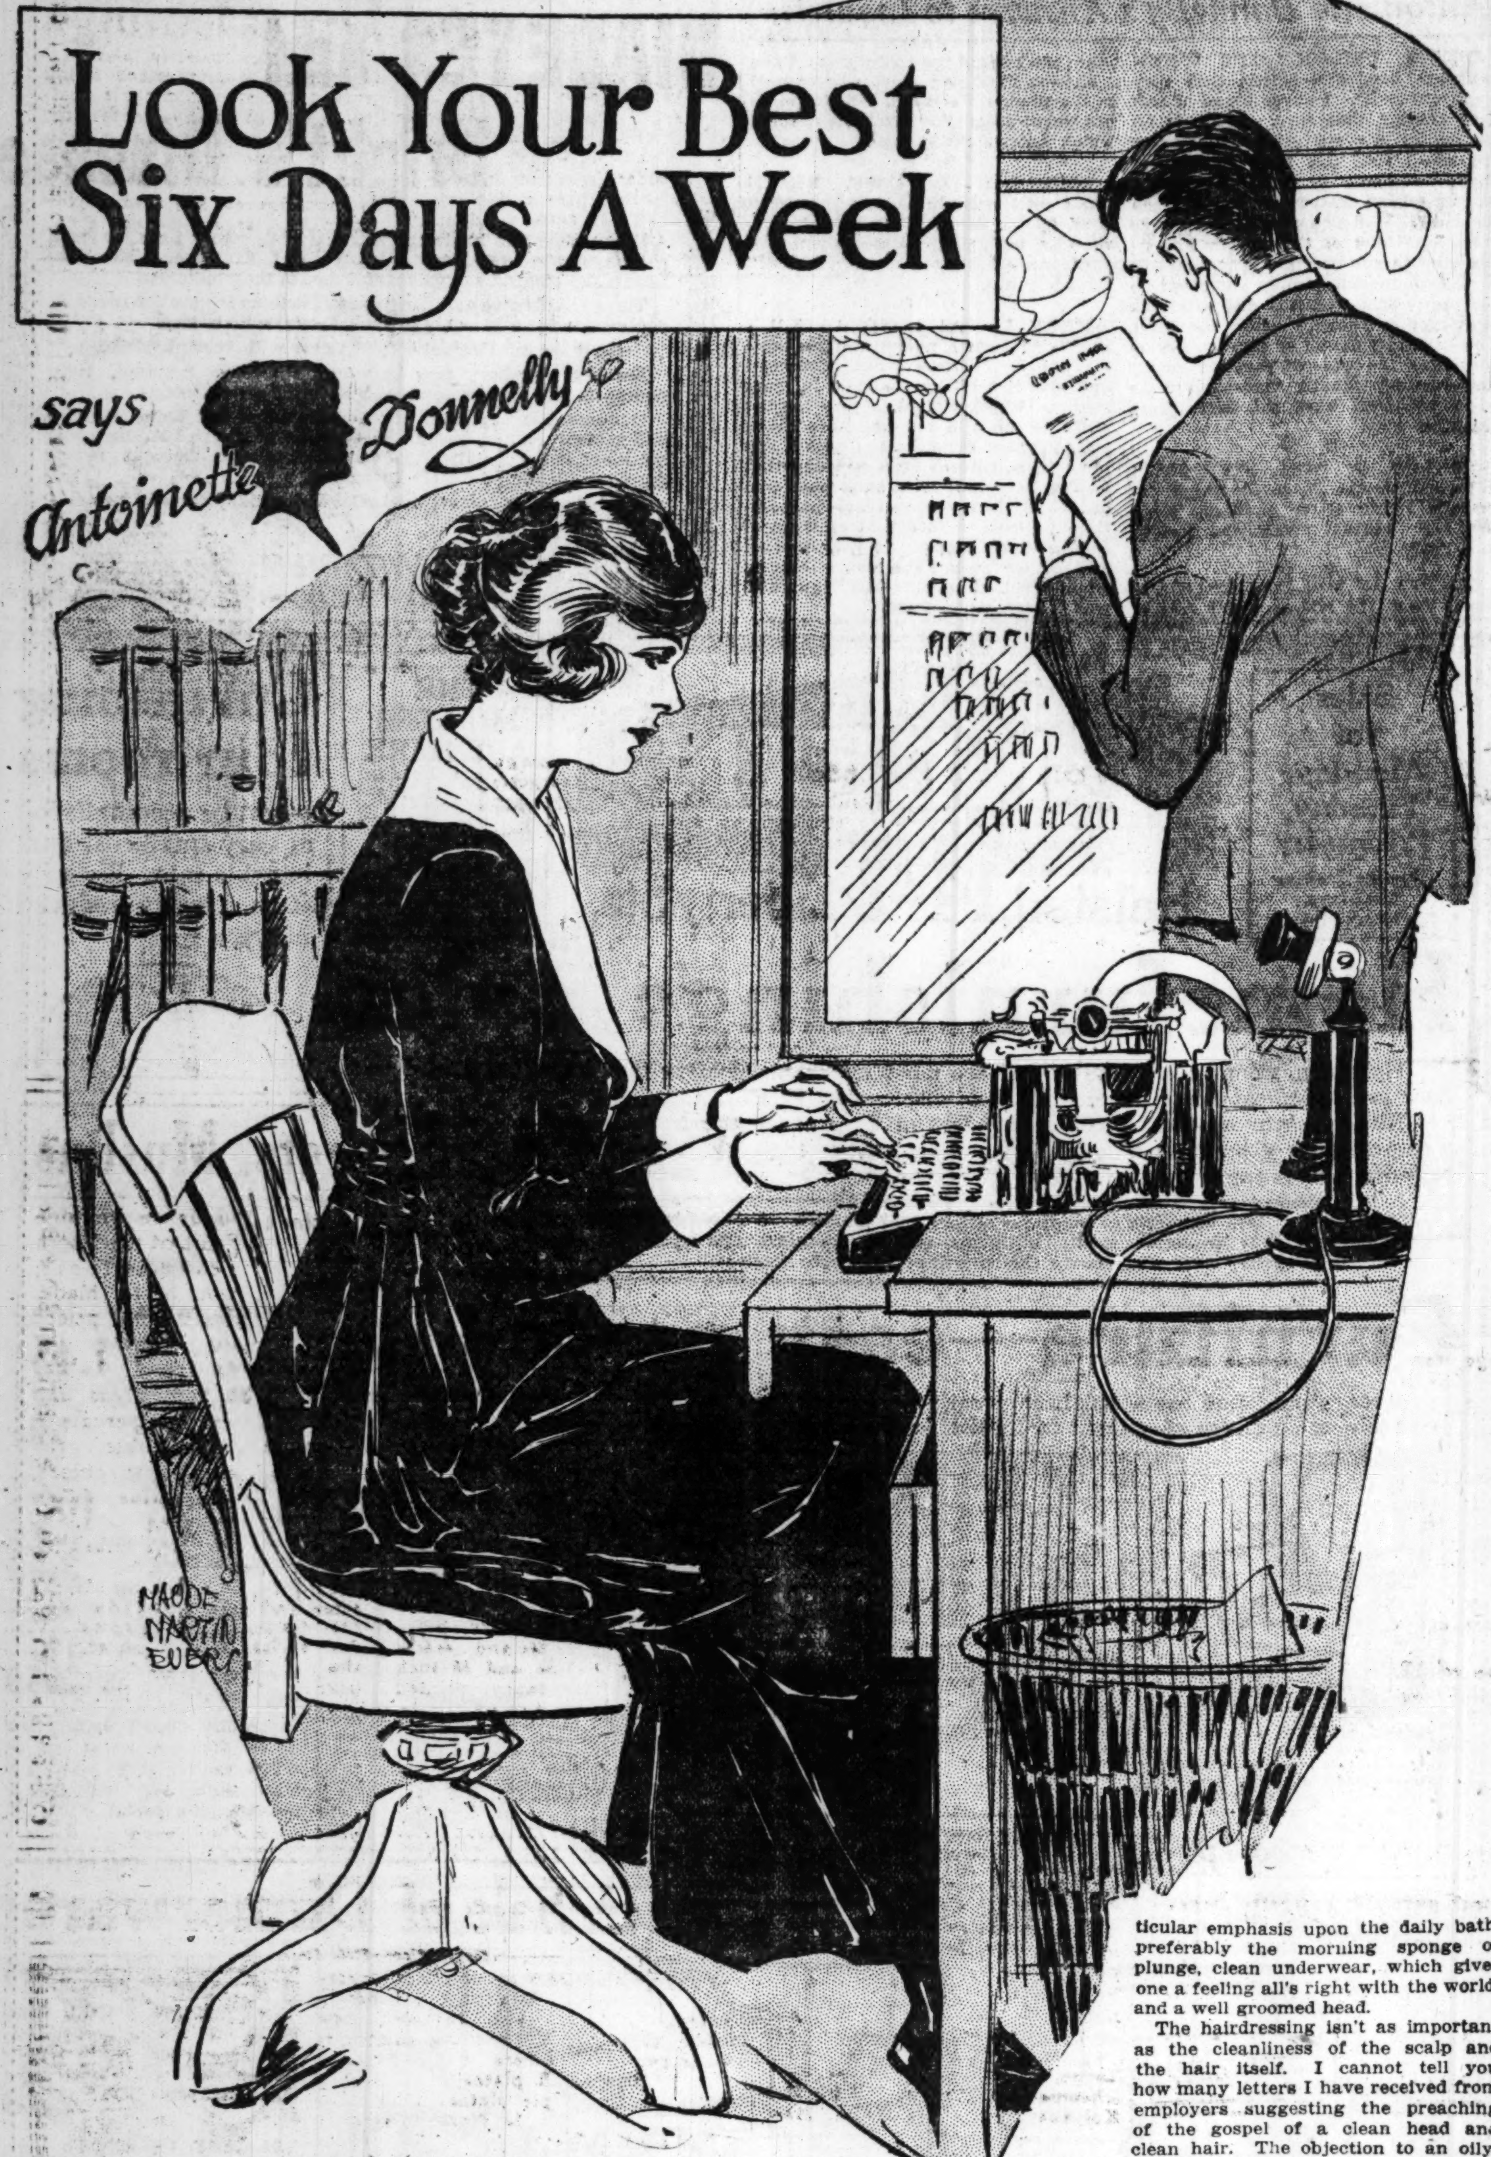
Look Your Best Six Days A Week

says Antoinette Donnelly



> What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Or, what is your beauty ill? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NOW, my dear young business girl, here is a little problem in economics for you. Suppose you have so many dollars a week to spend on clothes, and seven days in the week to cover, six days you're on view from eight to ten hours in a world where personal appearance is as important a factor almost as business efficiency—now, where do you think you should concentrate your best clothes efforts?

"On the six days of the week," answers the bright young modern business maid. And she proceeds to figure out what is the best manner of dress for these six days and how much she may spend on it, leaving the Sunday dress and the party dress to take care of itself out of what's left over.

When you think it over we women in active business life find that our social life resolves itself closely around our working life. So that if we must look our best before our friends we may and should do it on our business days. The vanity reason, however, is a minor one in the present scheme of workaday things. There is a vitally important one. It is the indisputable fact that a woman's personal appearance in business is as important to her success as is a man's, and you don't find men who are badly dressed, unkempt, unclean linened, and run down at the heels being called into the manager's office when promotions are being distributed. The same ruling applies to women.

When you think it over there aren't many social hours left in our day when you deduct nine for sleeping and nine for working, so that is another reason why our dress for social purposes is not the important one. The problem of our sleeping dress is simply solved with most of us. So that our big dress problem is the day one. And our best bet is to look our best during the hours we are most on view and to plan and buy clothes with that deliberate intent, always keeping in mind the fitness of the occasion, of course.

As to fitness. Recently I was a luncheon guest at one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country. While I was there a hundred or more girls came into the luncheon room, and I was greatly impressed with the smart way in which many of them were dressed. I was pleased because they demonstrated my pet hobby of a one piece dress with nice white collars and cuffs as the ideal dress for women in business. With a well groomed head and well groomed feet there is a trigness about this office get-up comparable only to the uniformed figures we saw in the women war workers and in the soldiers, which never ceased to bring forth exclamations of admiration. There is an efficiency about this business style for women that the eye of a superior officer doesn't fail to register.

The one piece dress of serge or such quality may cost a bit more in the beginning, but it is not outside the modest pay envelope by putting aside a dollar or two a week until the purchase is made possible. And our Liberty bond purchases have taught us working women that we can do things with a pay envelope we didn't dream possible before. I wouldn't say that saving for a dress were as high principled an object as paying for a bond, but if it is going to be the means of increasing our money earning power it's high principled enough to give a trial.

There are many girls who prefer the separate waist and suit, and when the waist is of exquisite freshness if it be white or with dainty collars and cuffs if it be dark it is a good style of office dress. But a soiled waist is a demoralizing thing, and in these soot laden days it is difficult for a light waist to survive the day with any dignity.

The laundering expense of a white waist is an item against it, or if the girl to save that expense washes her own waists out at night that is another item against it, for the reason that the less work a business girl maps out for her evenings the more efficient she will be on the morrow. A distraction other than work is what one needs after a routine day.

Transparent waists worn over much beribboned corset covers and low cut as these usually are, are as out of place in a business office as a coatless turned down collar and flowing tied young man would be. Flimsy waists from an economic view are not good investments. The cheap ones never look well, while the more expensive ones, besides the laundry expense, have not the wearing quality demanded of office clothing.

Into the same category of office misfits goes the girl who appears in the early a. m. done up in a Palm Beach sweater of gorgeous hue, worn as a waist. It just isn't good office style. Neither are light suede shoes, light topped shoes, or white kids. And a good office style is worth striving for.

To sum up the qualifications of good office style, first I would lay particular emphasis upon the daily bath, preferably the morning sponge or plunge, clean underwear, which gives one a feeling all's right with the world, and a well groomed head.

The hairdressing isn't as important as the cleanliness of the scalp and the hair itself. I cannot tell you how many letters I have received from employers suggesting the preaching of the gospel of a clean head and clean hair. The objection to an oily, dandruffy head is strong. Frequent shampooing is the remedy.

Then attention to shoes—no run down heels—and the frequent shine. If necessary provide yourself with a "kit" which you may get for a quarter, for there will be days when time will be too short for the shine and that will be sure to be the day you are observed by the higher up.

Then, buy as good a dress—or waist and skirt, if you find that more logical—with changes of collars and cuffs which should be put on clean every day—and the result will be not only an efficient looking young business woman but a most attractive looking girl.

Better Than Calomel

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive colored tablets.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c a box. All druggists.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

> Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

AT THE TABLE.

TABLE manners may make or mar a good impression with astounding quickness, and to those people who desire to create an agreeable effect in the dining room as well as in the drawing room, the following dos and don'ts may prove valuable:

Do sit up straight and at a comfortable distance from the table (not so close as to be awkward, and yet near enough to prevent any danger of a slip 'twix the cup and lip).

Don't put your elbows on the table or toy with the silver at your place.

Don't begin to eat until all present have been served.

Do follow the example your hostess sets in the choice of the knives, forks, and spoons. You may thus be saved many embarrassing moments.

Do push your soup spoon away from you; then sip the soup quietly from the side rather than the end of the bowl of the spoon.

Do take small mouthfuls and chew silently. I once heard it said that a well bred man makes no more noise when he eats toast than when he eats custard. A difficult task and a high standard, it is true, but an excellent precept to attempt to follow.

Don't cut lettuce or potato with a knife, or take hot sandwiches or chicken bones in your fingers (unless you are in the bosom of an indulgent family).

Do your best to keep the conversation going, except when your mouth is full. Then silence is the better part of valor.

L. A. P.: For a 5 o'clock wedding the well dressed bridegroom and best man wear dark morning coats, gray striped trousers, gray waistcoats, ties, socks, and gloves; white shirts, patent leather shoes. Evening dress at that hour is not correct and should not be worn.

C. H.: The fork is held and used in the right hand, except when cutting meat, when it may be retained in the left. In the former case, the tines point up, the handle being caught between the index and middle fingers, balanced by the thumb; in the latter it is grasped by means of all the fingers, the index finger guiding it. The fact that the salad is placed at the left of the dinner plate does not necessitate its being eaten with the fork in the left hand. In fact, this would be not only awarkward but incorrect, except for a left handed man or woman.

* *

J. E. L.: The invitations to a formal evening party are engraved or written in the third person; full evening clothes are worn and things are managed with more than usual ceremony. For example, there is a reception line down which each guest must go that he may meet and greet his host, hostess, and the guest of honor; moreover, the program for the evening is usually prearranged. To introduce a man and woman to another woman, present the latter of the two first. You need merely say, "Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Jones." Next comes the man's turn; in his case it is correct to say, "Mrs. Smith, may I present Mr. Jones?" The customary form in the case of an older man and a young woman is, "May I present you to Miss Smith, Mr. Jones?"

"Mother and Her Pets Love Candy Cascarets"

Careful mothers know that Cascarets in the home means less sickness, less trouble, less worry, less cost. When one of the kiddies has a white tongue, tainted breath, sour stomach or a cold, a Cascaret quickly and harmlessly works the poisons from the liver and bowels and all is well again.

TO MOTHERS! While all children detest castor oil, calomel, pills and laxatives, they really love to take Cascarets because they taste like candy. Cascarets work the nasty bile, sour fermentations and constipation poison from the child's tender stomach, liver and bowels without pain or griping. Cascarets never disappoint the worried mother. Each 10 cent box of Cascarets contains directions for children aged one old and upwards as well as for adults.

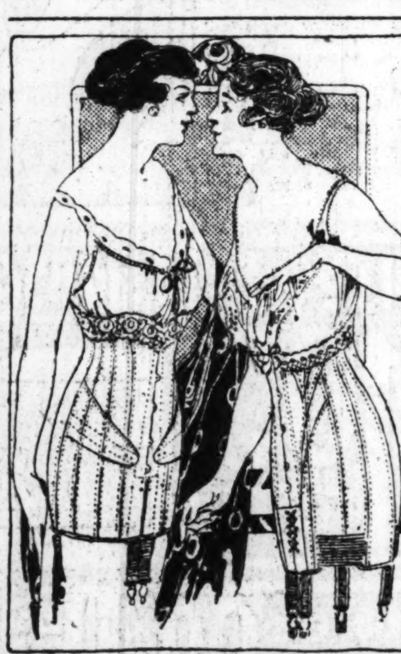
If You But Realized the Corset's Importance

Third Floor—Center



You would read our Corset Talks with greatest care, for they point the way to both the fashionable figure and health as well. Monday we feature Nemo self-reducing corsets, because they enable women of full or stout figures to preserve good health and good proportions by preventing an accumulation of excess flesh. The relief bands envelop, take up, reduce, and firmly support a heavy abdomen with utmost comfort, the self-reducing straps give additional support and produce a passive massage which eventually disposes of excess fatty tissue. You should not buy a Nemo corset without having it properly fitted. Our corps of Scientific Corsetieres, conceded to be quite the best in Chicago, are always at your service. The fittings here are free.

Nemo Wonderlift Style 552, as illustrated, has very low bust. The special function of this corset is to reduce an abnormal abdomen, due either through continual illness, which weakens the muscles, or through a falling of any of the organs. The Wonderlift bandlet, which is underneath the corset, tends to put these organs back and hold them in correct position, thereby once more establishing the natural symmetry of the body. All sizes to 36, special Monday at only............ 6.00

Special Nemo Self-Reducing Corset, style 361, as illustrated, is for the average full figure, of medium height, with excess flesh evenly distributed, low bust, medium long skirt, of durable white coutil, well boned, sizes 22 to 36, at.......................... 3.50

Nemo Corset, style 511, as illustrated. This model is adapted to that larger class of women who do not particularly require abdominal reductions, but are too heavy in hip and thigh. This corset has bands of semi-elastic webbing and gores of elastic cloth in back next to back wires, whereby the corset skirt is made flexible and comfortable, while producing extreme reduction of back, hips and upper limbs. Very low bust. This model is in flesh color. Sizes to 36, at.................................... 6.00

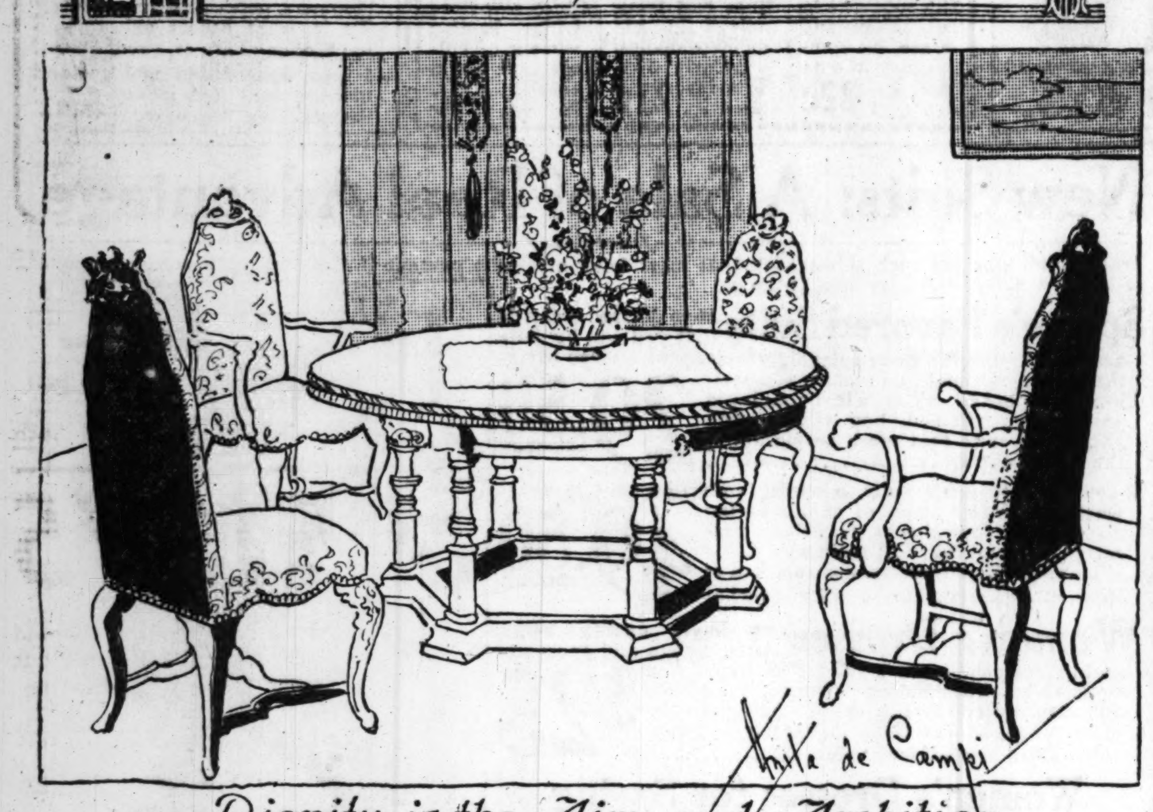
The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi



Dignity is the Aim and Ambition.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped addressed envelope for personal reply.

SUNLIGHT FOR BREAKFAST.

YOU may awaken to a gray day. In that respect you will be like unto many another mortal. The birds awake and chirp, but humans don't. It is in the morning usually that we feel the grumpiest. But there is a home cure for this trouble. It is the sunlit dining room, which turneth gray to gold and transposes the weather bulletins of one's mentality.

Sunlight and simple furnishings—that is the formula for the household banquet hall. Plenty of windows. Light window draperies. Roominess. Few annoying decorations. You can't improve on that arrangement. It makes so completely and beautifully for comfort. In the stiffer, more formal dining room you have the "please pass the cream" atmosphere, while in this product of the newer mode you sink into your chair, send a circlet of smiles about the festive board, and experience a sort of "thank goodness for mealtime" emotion.

There has been of late a new and tremendous appreciation of beautiful wood. In the breakfast room or dining room, with its appropriate scarcity or absence of wall decorations, there is splendid opportunity for displaying it. Paneling is good, and excellent effects in remaking walls in old—houses or apartments are achieved by nailing molding to the wall, so that it forms panels of well balanced lines, and painting over in one color with the walls themselves. This can be done in French gray, and in the extremely small dining room it will offer a suggestion of expansion. While the gray is more or less cold, it proves a beautiful background for warm colored rugs and upholstery. The window fabrics may be of one of those useful neutralizing shades that bring about friendliness between colors of opposite natures. A Chinese rug of old blue, bronze, and a fragmentary blush of deep rose looks well with gray walls.

The Chinese influence is showing up strongly in dining rooms designed by good artists, and such a room has a good setting when the walls are gray. No other color brings into such clear distinction the present interesting style of Chinese furniture of black lacquer with gold and jade spots. Add a Chinese rug with mulberry foundation, a floor lamp of black lacquer, with ornate Chinese designs in color, some Chinese prints for the wall, and brass sconces, and you have an assembly of mobiliary treasures that combine for real results. And you will have no difficulty in finding a good screen to stand before the doorway leading to the butler's pantry, for Chinese screens of marvelous loveliness are to be found a-plenty.

All Chinese furniture need not be black or heavy. There are beautiful pieces in yellow lacquer, especially appropriate for your sunlit dining room. Have your screen then with fold frame and panels of brocade in black and blue; your rug to match, with design in gold. Fill your flower bowls with blooms of vivid red. La-la! The guest will love it. To you it will be a constant joy.

Another idea that is good and unusual is the paneled wall and beamed ceiling, with pleasing frieze between. To continue the idea, a heavy fringe in the form of a valance can unite the doorway hangings.

A well arranged dining room has an old fashioned marble fireplace and mantel. The overmantel effect is an old Georgian mirror, so leaded as to form a wide border. At either end of the mantel is placed a decorative pot containing linen flowers that supply the necessary color spots. On the center of the mantel is placed a Staffordshire group, showing two children, and this group—as well as the linen flowers—is reflected in the mirror. Glass doors are covered with shirred fabric of cream in which a shadowy design of florettes appear. A Chein Lung lacquer screen in black, red, and old blue drifts along happily in the color current of this attractive room.

Another dining room shows the early colonial note. Hook rugs are laid upon the floor. The chairs are colonial in shape, and the long mahogany console is early American empire style. Over the console hangs a portrait of Martha Washington. In either of the four corners of the room stand tapering pedestals bearing Wedgewood figures. In this room, which is not particularly light, yellow gauze is used for inner curtains at the windows to provide a simulated sunlight. The gauze is overhung with soft olive green sunfast material. The floor is dark brown and highly polished.

It is a perfectly safe guess that the average dining room shows less originality than any other room in the average home. Dignity always has been the aim and ambition. The result is that one dining room is much like another, and all seem lacking in inspiration and personality. The stock "sets" sold in the shops have been our undoing, and the everlasting plate rails and center chandelier in colored glass have become horrors to many of us who live in apartments.

The idea of the old time landlord seemed to be that the side walls of the dining room should be patchy. So he built a high wainscot, added the plate rail, and from that to the ceiling he slapped on burlap or paper in imitation of tapestry. All this can be improved by filling the space between plate rail and ceiling with paneled effects. That at least gives the impression of completeness of design. Also it gives height, and forms a much better background than the strip of paper or burlap.

There is no reason why the furniture should not be composed of individual pieces instead of a "set." Even the chairs need not be all alike. If the room is large enough, every one who sits at the table should have an armchair. What a piggy notion it was that only host and hostess should be provided with comfortable chairs, while guests should sit in those that are armless. This armchair plot came to us from the days of old, when the lord of the manor graced the head of the board and his retainers lined up on either side of him.

Strange Weddings Contest.

Worse for the Bridegroom.

Bessie was about to be married and wanted everything "swell." She had the whole house decorated with garden flowers and a large wedding bell of white roses was hung between the parlor doors where the ceremony was to be performed. Everything went along fine until the minister uttered the words "for better or worse," when the wire holding the bell snapped and the bell fell right on the bridegroom's head. The white dove struck Bessie's shoulder and fell to the floor, when the cat made one spring for it and was about to tear it to pieces.

An Elaborate Affair.

The wedding was to be an elaborate affair at the bride's home in Albany, N. Y. On the morning of the appointed day it became apparent that the prospective bridegroom had lost the marriage license. A frantic search failing to disclose this precious document, the young couple hurried to the city clerk's office, where they were informed that in the absence of satisfactory proof that the original had been actually destroyed, a duplicate license could not be issued.

That afternoon the minister explained the situation to the guests, and after a weddingless dinner the young couple left for Syracuse, where they hoped to be married next day. Here they were told that in New York state it was necessary that the bride be a resident of the county issuing the license. The clerk suggested the Canadian side at Niagara Falls.

Accordingly to Niagara Falls the wanderers hastened, only to learn that a similar law had been recently adopted there and that elopements from the States were no longer welcomed.

Returning to Buffalo, the despairing hero consulted a lawyer, who, after a deliberate search of numerous statutes, recommended Illinois as being the nearest state in which a license would be issued to nonresidents.

Sixteen hours later they were married at the courthouse in Chicago, a trifle over 800 miles from home.

Their Lives Were Spared.

When Sue, my chum, was married she had an elaborate wedding. There were many guests, and, since a supper was to be served afterwards to the whole bunch, all the neighbors and friends had to help out.

The salad was made at our house, and later in the afternoon Walter, the bridegroom, and I started over to Sue's house with the whole of it in an immense pan. The back steps were slippery with ice. Walter slipped first, and after him came myself and the pan with the salad, all dumped into the snow. Dusk was falling, no one had seen us, and Walter said, "Let's shovel it up. They will never know the difference." Using our hands as scoops, we soon had the salad back in the pan.

That night, since I was maid of honor, I sat at the bride's table. During the salad course Walter and I nibbled the salted crackers and conversed volubly. The salad plates were about to be taken away when Sue noticed that I had not eaten my portion and remarked upon it.

"I ate too much turkey," I said. "I haven't any room for salad."

And Walter said, "That is the way I felt about it."

If we had not looked at each other, possibly no more would have been said; but his eyes met mine, and we both burst out laughing. Every one then clamored to know the joke, and Walter, much to my disgust, told them.

All were silent after his explanation. Sue's eyes fairly blazed with anger or astonishment. I thought for a minute that we were going to be mobbed. Then the rector remarked dryly, "I thought there must have been something unusual to make it taste so good." Everyone laughed and our lives were spared.

Overlooked in Explanation.

One day while at the office where I am employed as a telephone operator I was given a new girl to coach. It was a nickel board, so I tried my hardest to explain it. When I had finished with my explanation, I asked if she understood all. "O, yes, I understand it all perfectly, but where do the nickels come through?"

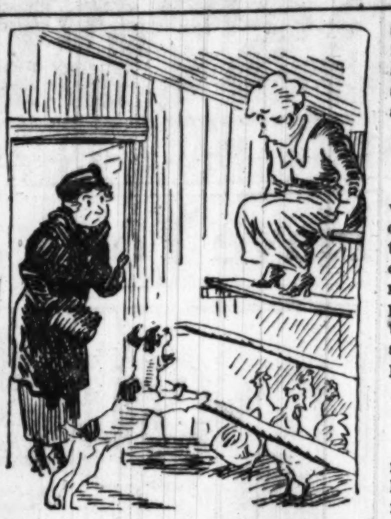
It Looked Suspicious.



My new neighbor was much annoyed by something robbing her hencoop of eggs. One day, knowing that she was not at home, I resolved to trap the thief. It was cold, but in my haste to be neighborly I rushed over without wraps and into the coop. A new watch dog of whose existence I was not aware appeared upon the scene and kept me shivering upon a roost until my neighbor returned home and released me. Her look of cold scorn would have embarrassed a cigar store Indian.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

One evening while attending a vaudeville show with my husband a comedian on the stage was asking all the men who were there with some other man's wife to stand up. At that moment some people arriving late compelled my husband and I to stand to let them pass. The comedian laughed and said he was glad to see one honest couple.

Why He Didn't Write.

Alice had not heard from her soldier friend in a long time. When she did hear he excused himself for not writing sooner by saying that he "had had such a terrible cold he simply couldn't say a word!"

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

ECONOMICAL CAKES.

PEOPLE are taking to cake as though they were famished. They are reveling in cakes made with the old fashioned quantities of sugar, sugar straight, and with fine wheat flour, and especially with thick icings.

"I want to learn how to make cake," young women are saying and we do not have to seek far to find out why this has become one of the highly feminine desires of the moment.

The nation of housekeepers took to apple sauce cake some years back. You can always get attention if you advertise a cake as eggless and that is what apple sauce cake usually is. It was because the idea of eggless seems to be a highly economical one probably that so many people put apple sauce cake forward last summer as a wartime cake, which it could not truly be. The cup of sugar or more required took it out of that category, even though substitute flours in various proportions were used in it.

As far as I know, recipes for apple sauce cake did not get into cook books until the year 1913. That year two vegetarian cook books had the recipe and so did "The Economy Administration Cook Book" and "The Pure Food Cook Book," and perhaps all others published that year. Cook books have since appropriated word for word, without giving credit, one or the other of these early recipes. One loses a good deal of faith in the honesty of humanity when one begins to compare recipes from book to book.

This is mentioned here, as casually as possible, because there are certain moral frailties peculiar to humanity which seem more reprehensibly petty in certain feminine spheres. As for this business of appropriating recipes in toto and in quantity to make a cook book to be sold for private or personal profit, it is time something was done to stop it. Of course, there are hundreds of recipes that are common property, but any woman who thinks she is intelligent enough to put together a cook book ought to be able to put some individuality into even these. It looks as though those who purloin in wholesale manner felt sure of not being found out and perhaps they are reasonably secure because most families have no more than one or two cook books.

Formula of Many Names.

But about this apple sauce cake, or a variation of that formula which has appeared under so many names in our cook books. Somebody had thought of this variation certainly as early as 1911, for I have the recipe for it clipped from a newspaper of that year, but as printed it was imperfect.

The general cake formula, of which this is a variant, is that with one cup of sugar, one-half cup butter, two cups of flour, some wetness, and a leavening agent. We know it best, perhaps, with milk and eggs, under the name of cup cake. With nuts and fruits we can make delicious fruit cakes with this cup cake variant formula, and nine variations of it appear in one of the amateur cook books, while a study of cook books would enable us to find the general formula in cakes of fifty different names.

The cup cake contains commonly two eggs and a cup of milk. With perfect mixing the eggs are sufficient for the leavening, but when sweet milk is used two tablespoons of baking powder appear in the formula, or one-half teaspoon of soda when the milk is sour. By omitting egg yolks, a white cake is made; by omitting the whites an inexpensive gold cake. Crazy cake is made of the batter by dividing it into parts and coloring these differently; chocolate cake by adding half a cup of grated chocolate or this amount melted with a bit of water; marble cake is much like crazy cake; raisins make its variant, etc.

All these mentioned have been variants of the cup cake formula. The apple sauce cake is a variant of the more general formula mentioned, one cup of apple sauce appearing in place of both milk and eggs. Baking soda is used to neutralize the sour apple sauce and in the process does the leavening. This cake is varied in numerous ways by the addition of raisins, nuts, etc.

"Devil's Food."

The latest variation of the apple sauce cake I have known about makes of it that great national favorite, a chocolate cake, and it may be baked in layers, which seems to be the favorite form of that much exploited cake. This variation came from another state to a friend of mine, and her accomplished maid, Helen, makes a most successful cake of the thick sheet type which she ices with a heavy, creamy icing. It is then a chocolate cream with the cream on the outside.

Here is the formula which had the title "Devil's Food": "One cup of sugar, one-half cup of fat, one cup of sour apple sauce, one teaspoon of soda, pinch of salt, two scant cups of flour. Add two squares of melted bitter chocolate. Flavor with cinnamon or vanilla. Chopped nuts or raisins may be added."

Most of the recipes for apple sauce cake show that the probable starting point for this particular variation of the butter cake—containing one-half cup of butter, two cups of sugar, etc.—was the eggless spice cake.

By studying eight or ten variations of the recipe, I decided that the following was pretty nearly the most general formula in use for it: One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one cup of unsweetened apple sauce, one teaspoon of soda, two cups of flour, or flour according to the wetness or dryness of the sauce, a pinch of salt, and spices to taste, anywhere from one-quarter teaspoon to a teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves, and nutmeg, and finally some chopped raisins and nuts.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

The success of a cake depends about two-thirds on the care with which the ingredients are combined, while circumstances alter cases but not in reference to the flour. That, added a little at a time and well beaten in, always makes toward perfection. Whether the butter and sugar shall be creamed together depends upon circumstances. In one of the cook book recipes it is melted and added last. Fruit must be floured, many cooks maintain, but a careless cook may then give us little lumps of unblended and so uncooked flour. Fruit put into the wet part before the flour will be well distributed with good mixing.

Here were some of the circumstances that altered my method in making apple sauce cake by the last formula. The raisins were rather dry, so after putting them through the fine knife of the food chopper with some candied citron that had all dried up and a handful of nuts, I put this mixture with half a cup of apple sauce to soak while general preparations like oiling tins, sifting sugar and flour, and preparing butter were being made, beating the two together finally as well as I could with the cup of sugar and the melted butter. Dried citron responds to moisture like the desert. You can use it even if it is bone dry.

Here was another circumstance that altered the case. It was some unsalted butter which was on the verge of rancid, too stale for a spread, and there was only one-third instead of half a cup of it. After melting this I added enough sour milk to it to make the half cup and beat them together most thoroughly to sweeten the butter. Poor butter, untreated, ruins a cake, but almost any fat that has no forms of mold in it can be sweetened.

In the flour was sifted the spices and salt, and the whole was sifted, about three tablespoons at a time, into the mixture of fruit, sugar, and butter, until most was used up. Then into the other half cup of the apple sauce was stirred a little more than a level teaspoon of soda, rubbed smooth of lumps, before measuring, and this into the batter. The batter then showed that it would take the remaining flour, and it was added.

By the way, Greening apples, or, perhaps, Baldwins, undoubtedly are the best apples to use. The sauce I made had only one cup of water to two pounds of apples. Cooked in a covered kettle, not much of the water evaporated, but even so the sauce might be called a dry one. It might be so dry that two cups of flour would be too much for this cake.

It seems to me that one hour is none too long for the baking of any apple sauce cake in a moderate oven, but most of the recipes mention a shorter time. It needs the hour to dry out enough.

Boiled Icing.

Now, as to the icing, a thick and creamy one, beneath a glazed surface. This is a boiled icing or frosting, and it is not necessary to boil a sirup to drop stage, add seven tablespoons to the beaten egg whites, then boil the rest to thread stage, etc. The important point is to beat the whole after the sirup has been added to the egg whites until it is nearly cold and to a degree of stiffness that when the whisk is lifted that which runs off as a ribbon or cord will hold its form for a minute.

The old cook books say that this icing hardens quickly, and should be put on the cake before it stiffens enough to drop. When you are doing the whisking you are not likely to think so. It is generally called ice cream or soft icing, and in perfection it was really responsible for the great vogue the Lady Baltimore cake had at one time, since this icing, finished with chopped raisins and perhaps some nuts, makes a delicious cake filling and a thick covering.

Although neither Mrs. Hill nor Miss Farmer mentions the fact that it must be beaten until nearly cold, I think this is now taught in the cooking schools. People have failed with the Lady Baltimore cake because the directions for the icing have not been more explicit.

How to Make.

The complete procedure should be as follows: Dissolve perfectly two cups of sugar in one-half cup of water and cook till it spins a thread or to about 220 degrees. Pour this slowly in a fine stream into two stiffly beaten egg whites, whisking constantly. When the sirup is all in the whole will be hot, and it must be whisked until cool enough so that it will not run off the cake, even if a rather thin icing is desired. It must be cooler for a thick icing. Flavor at the last or add fruits and nuts then.

Miss Farmer calls this icing "White Mountain cream," and the larger and last half of her recipe reads: "Pour sirup gradually on beaten white of egg, beating mixture constantly, and continue beating until of right consistency to spread; then add flavoring and pour over cake, spreading evenly with back of spoon. Crease as soon as firm. If not beaten long enough, frosting will run; if beaten too long, it will not be smooth. Frosting beaten too long may be improved by adding a few drops of lemon juice or boiling water. This frosting is soft inside, and has a glossy surface. If frosting is to be ornamented with nuts or candied cherries, place them on frosting as soon as spread."

This is a sort of frosting or icing that is rarely rejected by the eater, while those that harden to rocks are rejected.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

By Elizabeth O. Hiller.

Boiled Fowl, Spaghetti Filling.

Boil three cups of spaghetti, broken in one inch pieces, in four cups of boiling salted water until tender; drain and blanch. Season with salt, pepper, three tablespoons of butter, one-half tablespoon of finely chopped parsley, and one tablespoon of finely chopped onion. Set aside in a warm place, covered. Dress, clean, and singe a four pound fowl; fill with the above mixture as for roasting, truss neatly, and tie in a piece of cheese cloth to prevent scum from settling on the skin; place on a trivet in a kettle of boiling water to cover and cook slowly from five to six hours, or until tender, turning occasionally. Add a tablespoon of salt to the water the last hour of cooking, with five slices of carrot, one small onion sliced, one stalk of celery cut in small pieces, two sprigs of parsley, one-half teaspoon of peppercorns, and a small piece of bay leaf. Serve with oyster or celery sauce made from the strained stock in which fowl was cooked. Serve on a bed of cooked spaghetti. Sprinkle spaghetti with grated cheese.

Oyster Sauce.

Wash two cups of oysters. Put one cup of oyster liquor, heated and strained, in a saucepan; bring to the boiling point; strain. Plump oysters; put them in a warm sauceboat; melt four tablespoons of butter in a saucepan; add four tablespoons of flour; stir to a smooth paste; let cook one minute. Add hot oyster liquor slowly while beating constantly. Add one cup of scalded thin cream or milk and stir until smooth and glossy. Season well with salt, pepper, and celery salt; pour over oysters.

Doughnuts with Mashed Potatoes.

Sift together four cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon of salt, three-fourths teaspoon of nutmeg, and one-half teaspoon of soda. Beat three eggs until thick and lemon tinted; add gradually one and one-fourth cups of sugar, continue beating; add three tablespoons of melted shortening and one teaspoon of vanilla. Add one cup of warm mashed potatoes; beat mixture thoroughly, then add flour alternately with one cup of sour cream or buttermilk, stirring constantly until a smooth dough is formed. Add an extra cup of sifted flour if dough is too soft to handle. Chill dough. Divide into three parts; take one part at a time on a floured board, knead slightly, roll to one-half inch thickness, shape with a doughnut cutter, and fry in deep hot fat. Drain on brown paper; when cool sprinkle with powdered sugar.

These doughnuts are particularly good for packing into lunch pails or boxes, as they do not dry out readily owing to the potato which furnishes moisture.

Green Peppers Stuffed with Canned Corn.

Select sweet green peppers of medium size; cut a thick slice from the stem ends, remove seeds and veins. Parboil peppers fifteen minutes in boiling salted water to which add one-fourth teaspoon of soda. Drain and fill with the following mixture: Put three cups of canned corn into a saucepan with two tablespoons of finely chopped green pepper, and moisten with milk or cream; simmer slowly fifteen minutes, stirring often to prevent burning. Season with salt, pepper, three tablespoons of butter, and onion juice to flavor delicately. Cover tops of peppers with buttered crumbs and bake in oven until heated through and crumbs are brown.

Excellent Sunshine Cake.

Beat the yolk of ten eggs until thick and light. Beat the whites of ten eggs until frothy and add one-eighth teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of cream of tartar; continue beating until stiff. Add gradually one and one-half cups of confectioners' sugar that has been sifted three times while beating constantly. Add the beaten yolk of eggs and one teaspoon of orange extract; continue beating until the ingredients are thoroughly blended, then fold in one cup of sifted pastry flour, sifted four times after measuring. Turn into a large sized angel cake pan and bake fifty minutes in a moderate oven. Spread with marshmallow frosting and sprinkle thickly with fresh grated cocoanut.

Marshmallow Frosting.

To two cups of granulated sugar add one-half cup of cold water. Place on range and bring to boiling point, stirring constantly. Then let cook without stirring until the mixture drops from the tip of a wooden spoon like honey, remove from range, and add seven tablespoons of the sirup to the whites of two eggs, previously beaten with one-fourth teaspoon of cream of tartar until stiff. Continue beating; return remaining sirup to the range and cook until it spins a thread; brush the sugar and starch from ten marshmallows, put them in the open on a pie tin to plump, but not to brown. Then add them to first mixture; add remaining sirup and beat until ingredients are thoroughly blended. Add one-half teaspoon of vanilla extract and continue beating until the mixture glazes slightly on the side of the vessel. Pour over the cake and spread smoothly with a spatula. Sprinkle at once with freshly grated cocoanut.

HERE'S WARMING, SOOTHING RELIEF FROM YOUR RHEUMATIC ACHES

For prompt relief from Rheumatism, Neuralgia, or Lumbago, you can depend on Sloan's Liniment. The warming, soothing, counter-irritant effect is the quickest way to overcome the inflammation, swelling or stiffness. A fed drops go right to the sore part, draw the blood from the congested place and remove the cause of the ache.

The great penetrating power of Sloan's Liniment makes rubbing needless. It is easier and cleaner to use than plasters or poultices. It does not stain the skin or clog the pores. A bottle of Sloan's Liniment is all you need for quick rest and relief from the pains of sprains, bruises, backache, stiffneck, and most forms of rheumatic twinges. Generous size bottles at druggists everywhere. 30c, 60c, $1.20.

Our liberal plan of Extended Payments
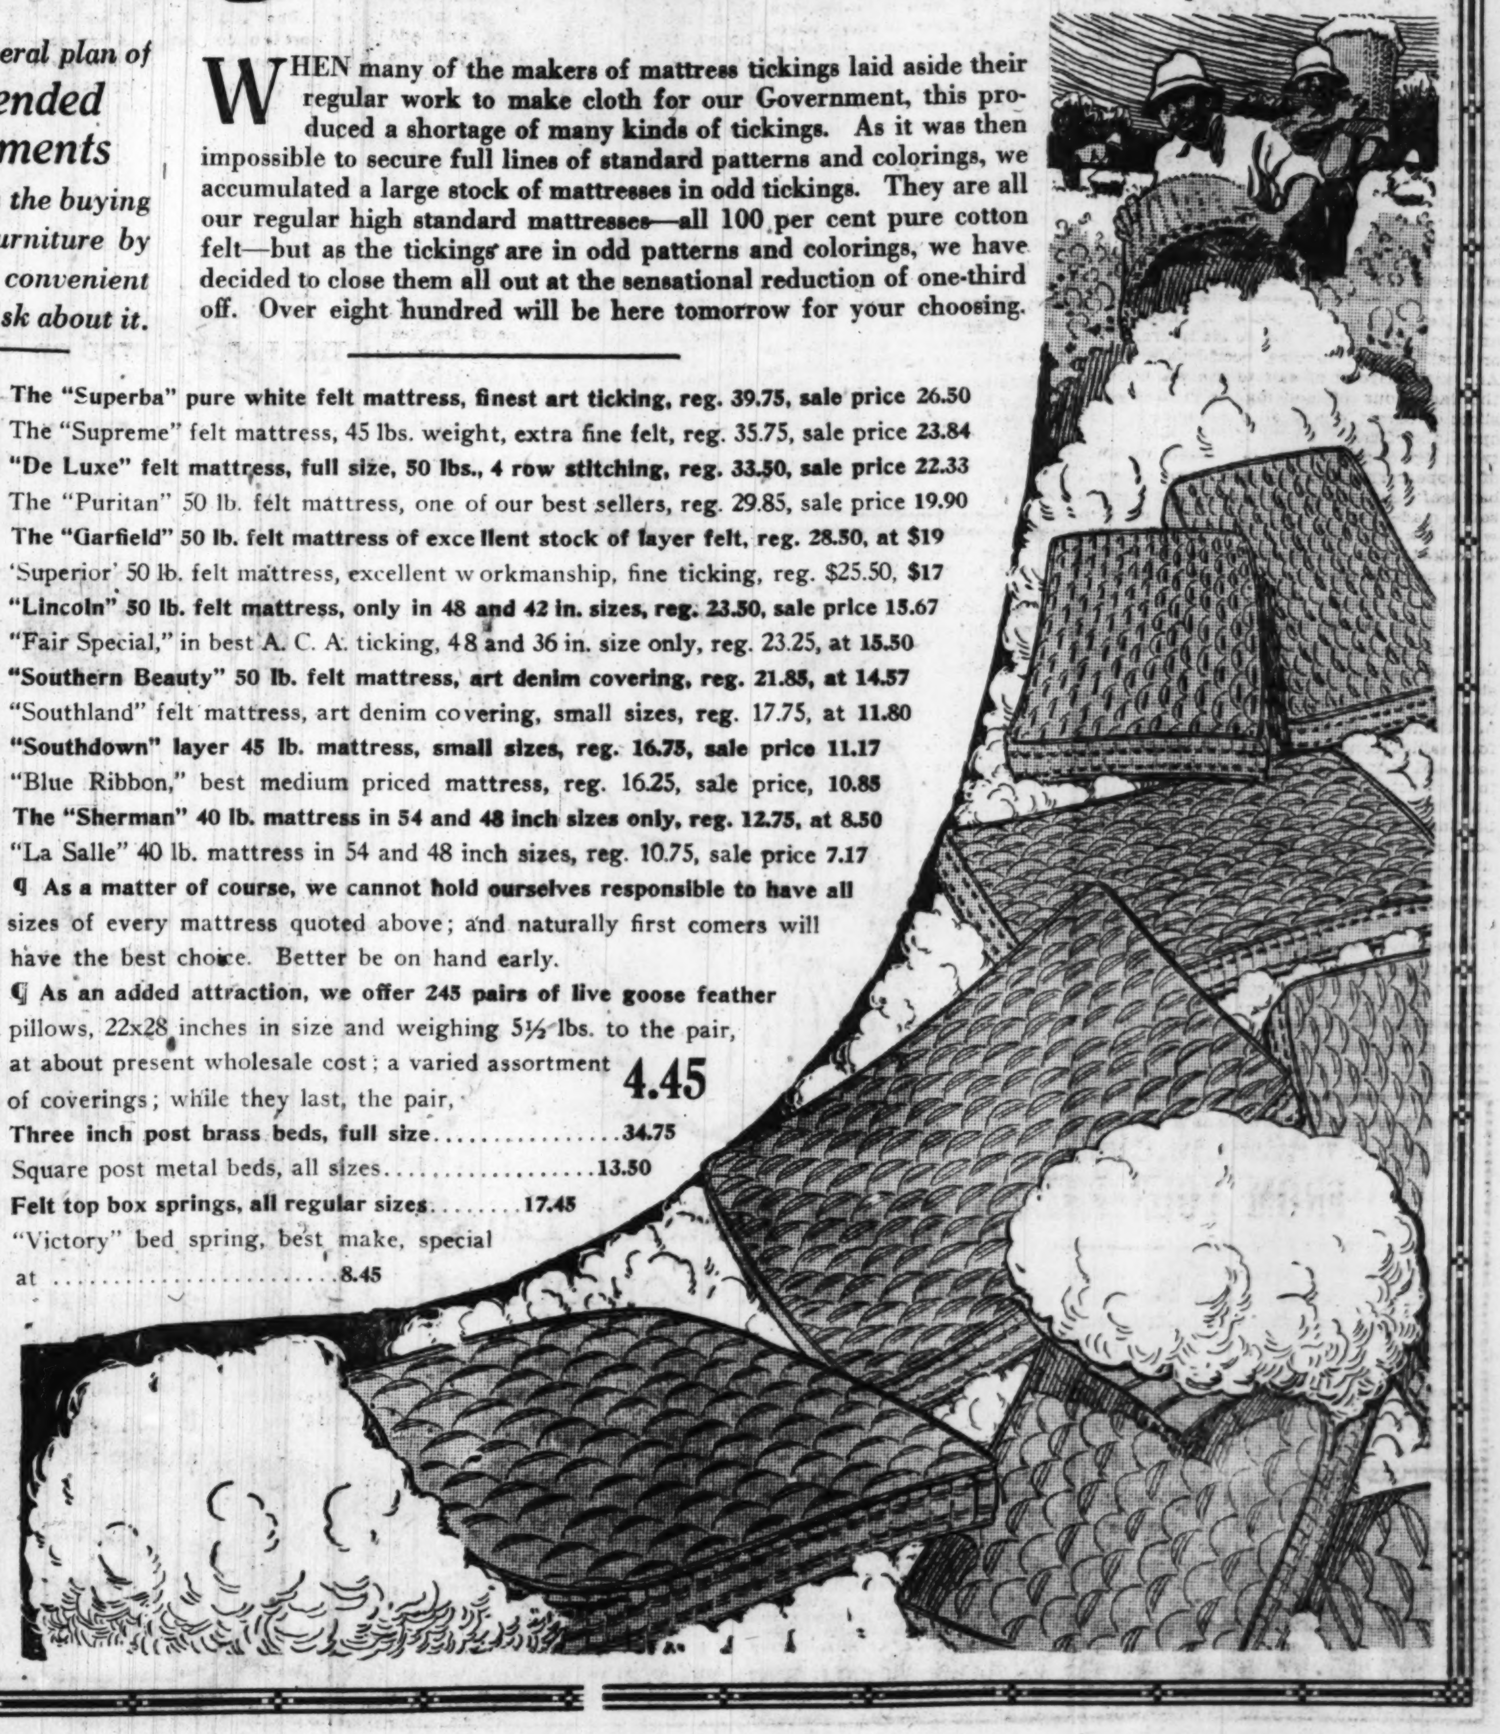
simplifies the buying of fine furniture by affording convenient terms. Ask about it.



WHEN many of the makers of mattress tickings laid aside their regular work to make cloth for our Government, this produced a shortage of many kinds of tickings. As it was then impossible to secure full lines of standard patterns and colorings, we accumulated a large stock of mattresses in odd tickings. They are all our regular high standard mattresses—all 100 per cent pure cotton felt—but as the tickings are in odd patterns and colorings, we have decided to close them all out at the sensational reduction of one-third off. Over eight hundred will be here tomorrow for your choosing.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

THE ALPHABET.

In last Sunday's article the first half of the alphabet was given. These initials are of the Old English alphabet and run from N to Z. The directions are repeated for the benefit of those who may have missed them last Sunday.

Pad the initials with the long or darning stitch, arranging the padding so that the heaviest portion comes in the center of the widest points of the letter. The larger part of the success of the embroidering depends on the padding and how carefully it is done. The satin stitch is used in the covering and the vine or outline stitch in the single lines. A good thing to do with the single lines is to come back over the line just stitched and restitch by running the needle through each loop of thread. This raises and makes your vine stitch stand out as the padding does the other part of the lettering.

To transfer the letter design follow these directions: If the material is sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp pencil. If the material is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper, the kind that does not rub off, lay it on the material, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil.

LONG OFFICE HOURS.

THE question of office hours is one seldom raised by business women, as employers as a general rule have been for the last few years considerate in the matter, and now, except for some retail stores and a few other business houses, the Saturday half holiday is becoming an established custom.

However, if a girl working unusually long hours finds that the strain is too much for her health, the wise thing for her to do is to change her position to one where the office hours are not too confining, and so I would advise the writer of the following letter:

"Dear Miss King: The place where I am employed at present is an hour's ride from my home, and as the office hours are from 8:30 to 5:30, including Saturdays, I have absolutely no time to give to the many necessary chores that a business girl finds she must do to keep herself well and presentable.

"I am conscientious about my work, and therefore grind steadily away during office hours, and occasionally, when the work is unusually heavy, stay after hours to catch up. I would not mind the long hours, as I find my work interesting, but when it comes toward the last of the week I am entirely used up, and reach home on Saturday nights so tired that it is an effort for me to eat or talk. My health has always been good, but this extreme tiredness frightened me, so I consulted a doctor.

"He told me there was nothing wrong, but I probably needed a rest, and suggested that I spend a day or two in bed. I followed his directions to the extent of spending one day in bed, and found that when I went back to the office the next day I was able to accomplish almost twice as much work as I had been doing lately in one.

"Since then I have stayed home occasionally for a day, and find in that way I can accomplish all the work that is given me to do, and a little bit more.

"I do not like the idea of having to stay away from the office, as in excuse I must say that I am ill, when I really am not, and that goes against the grain with me.

"Frankly, I know that I am capable, and I am never so happy as when I am working, so it is not that I am lazy, but that I feel it is probably injurious to my health, and I want to preserve that above everything.

"I have been considering changing my position, and, in fact, had an interview the other day with the proprietor of a small business, with that end in view. As it was a small office, I thought that perhaps Saturday would be a short working day. Without solicitation I was informed that the office hours were from 8 to 5:30, with no curtailment of time on Saturday, at which I remarked 'The hours are long.'

"Whereupon I was treated to a lecture about the failures of those who continually watched the clock, and was told that any one who made the office hours a consideration in seeking a new position, would undoubtedly prove an undesirable employé.

"That ended the interview and also my quest for a new job, as it discouraged me from mentioning anything so unbusinesslike as office hours when being interviewed by a prospective employer. Do you think that length of office hours is not to be taken into consideration when looking for a position? L. T."

As a rule, it is fatal to raise a question of hours with a prospective employer. But since in the above case it was deemed necessary to the health of the applicant to secure a position with less confining hours, and that was the principal reason for changing jobs, it was simply honest of her to have commented on the subject.

It has come under my observation lately that in a business establishment where the employés work from 8:30 to 5:30, including Saturdays, there is an unusual proportion of them absent every day. In one department where there are about twenty girls two or three are out every day, and as many as nine were out one day this week.

I had occasion to compare notes on this office to one where the hours were the same except that at the latter the Saturday half holiday was allowed, and I find that except for the days when the "flu" epidemic was raging it was a rare occurrence to have one of the girls stay away from the office for a day.

Camp Stories Contest.

> Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Easier on the Feet.

We were a company of rookies, and our duty was to guard a strip of hilly country along a lake. I was tumbled out just before daybreak, and it was mighty chilly. Our detail fell in and went on the rounds, relieving the old guard. We had a hard time marching over the hills, as it was as dark as a hat. When we came to one post there was no sentry, and after some searching we saw a light down in the valley a hundred yards away. We marched over and there was the missing guard walking up and down smoking a cigaret. The corporal demanded to know why he was off his beat, and the sentry replied, "It's easier walking here, corp." At that we all threw a fit.

No Use for a Register.

A chap who ran a little general store at a certain crossroads in New Mexico was reported for failing to register. An official swooped down upon him who asked: "Don't you want to fight for your country?"

"In course I do," was his reply. "Be you a recruitin' man? I was figurin' on enlisten' the first chanst I got."

"Well, I'm afraid you've got into trouble, as you failed to register."

"Shucks, you don't say so! I never had any use for them new fangled things. I puts the money in a cigar box an' gives the customer his change. But I don't see why the fack that I haven't a register oughter prevent me from havin' a chanst to lick them Huns."

He got the "chanst." M. B.

AS A MEANS TO HAPPINESS.

CHARLIE and I were about as good friends as friends can be. For nearly eight years we roomed or "kept bach" together and during this time we sometimes traveled together, in cars, on cars, and underneath cars.

We both ridiculed marriage as a means to happiness, and we both were happy enough in our state of single bliss until he met a fluffy little dame that, so far as I could see, possessed nothing but a fair amount of beauty and a peculiar little laugh that she never failed to spring when Charlie got off some old stuff that grandfather laughed over.

I thought Charlie was too wise to fall for her cute little ways, but I began to notice he was neglecting his home life something shameful. I drew his attention to some interesting facts and warned him that she was trying to put something over on him. He glared at me and called me a nut. I knew then that it was all up with him, and it was. He married her.

It was some months before I got around to visit them, and then I was on my way to Des Moines, Ia., on a matter of business.

"Why," said Mrs. Charlie, "Des Moines is my home town! Would you deliver a message for me while you are there?"

Of course I would; I couldn't very well refuse, even if I wanted to, since they had treated me fine.

Charlie gave me a little fatherly advice about getting a nest of my own, so I wouldn't have to be bumming around restaurants all my life. Rest assured, I laughed.

"You're a confirmed old hard crust, aren't you?" Mrs. Charlie said.

That was me all over. I was glad they were happy, and all that; but no wedding bells in mine.

Mrs. Charlie's message was by way of a letter to a "Miss Laura Smith" of a certain avenue in Des Moines. I delivered it, but Miss Smith was not at home, so if Mrs. Charlie was trying to put anything over on me, which I suspected, she got stung.

Well, a week or so later I was back in Chicago and a letter from Miss Laura was waiting for me. She was awfully sorry and all that. I answered her and we got to carrying on a lively correspondence for a time, exchanging photographs as well.

There wasn't anything in either our photographs or our letters to justify anything serious, and by the spring of 1915 our correspondence dwindled down to a stray letter now and again. By July, when I left and joined the Canadian forces at Toronto, we had given up writing entirely.

In May, 1917, after nearly sixteen months' service abroad, I was invalided "home" and lay in a hospital at Montreal, recuperating.

I had had some experiences that thrilled me, but I am giving it straight when I say that the most thrilling moment I ever had was when a young woman as fresh and beautiful as the flowers she carried came and plumped a big, fat kiss right on my lips.

It was Laura, sure enough. She was visiting relatives in the city and just happened in.

It wasn't the last kiss, by any means, and while I lay there as weak as a sick cat she made me so dawgone happy and glad to see her that I nearly cried when she went back to Des Moines.

It wasn't long after when I followed and—you guessed it—we were married.

That was in the fall of 1917, and an important event can happen in a year of married life, and it happened in ours. He is quite a big boy now.

Of course, Mrs. Charlie takes the credit for our match, but all I have to say is that there is no place like home; and home isn't home without a wife and a baby. That is my experience.

How You Can Quickly Remove Hairy Growths

(Aids to Beauty)

A well known beauty specialist advises this treatment for the removal of hair from the face. Mix into a paste some powdered Delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. This method is quick and entirely safe. To avoid disappointment, however, it is well to make certain you get genuine Delatone.

A Child Doesn't Laugh and Play if Constipated.

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, breath feverish and stomach sour, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups on bottle. Remember name, "California."

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Inquisitive.

> Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped addressed envelope

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

If you were born during the week beginning today you are still under the influence of the sign Pisces. This sign is of the element water, and of mutable quality. You are like the "fishes" the symbol of your sign, always moving around in a quiet way to learn what more you can gather that will be of interest. You are just naturally inclined to question everything and always want to know the reason for things.

You are possessed of will and reasoning power in a greater measure than most Pisces people, and have more faith and confidence in your power to do things and a more dogged persistence in carrying your undertakings to a successful end. You know how to apply the lessons of experience, and delays and apparent defeat do not drive you back. You are cautious, careful, far from reckless, and, if a financier or public official, you can steer between rocks that a more careless man would run on to. You are faithful students, never considering your education finished, but always striving to improve your minds and bodies.

You know how to hold your tongue and if you feel the need of a confidant you know how to make a wise choice of one. You are true and faithful to one whom you like and make many friends. Your friends do not always retain your friendship, however, and you are at times much dissatisfied, and become morose and fault finding. You are spiteful and bitter toward your enemies, although you would not enjoy doing them any serious harm. As a weapon of vengeance, you prefer a cowhide to a dagger—or a stone to a bullet.

You are close in money matters, somewhat apprehensive of the approach of a rainy day, but at times reckless, though seldom dishonest. You pay your bills to the last cent, but when that is gone, your creditor can wait. You are fond of finery—want good things if you can get them. You like a full course dinner but you can dine on a doughnut, if that is all there is in the house.

You have a fashion of meaning what you say and saying what you mean, and when people know you, they do not fool with you much. You demand a reason for everything. You seem to take in everything, even to the smallest details, in a glance. Your perceptive faculties are abnormally keen, a mistake or defect never escaping you, which tends to make you severe and accurate art and literary critics. You love art and beauty in all its forms.

All things considered, you are thoughtful, faithful people, generally reliable, worthy of confidence, and not given to making failures. And it would not be surprising to find you a leader of men, for you have much tact, and an honest, good natured, honesty and determination that give people confidence in you. You are intensely fond of sports, hunting and fishing.

Inasmuch as you demand a reason for everything, if you should be thrown in contact with a Libra person, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, who refuses to give any reasons for what he does, the result will be perilous for those concerned. Your congenial friends and companions will be found among Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23, and Capricorn, Dec. 23-Jan. 20. Cancer, June 23-July 22, would also be a happy marital companion for you.

Pisces' most fortunate weeks are those beginning Nov. 12 and Aug. 5; birthstones, moonstones and chrysolite; colors, gray, green, pink, and black.

Let Him Talk.

"Dear Miss Blake: What do you think would be a good subject to talk on when you are entertaining a boy friend at your home? E. J."

Talk about movies that you've been to and the stars in plays you like and those you don't; talk about books you've read, also the current news in the papers. Talk about the dances you've been to—if you've been to any—and the parties. If you're clever you will let the boy lead the conversation and you'll be an interested listener. One of the things that every woman knows—but that she doesn't tell the other sex—is that a man has the best time when he is allowed to do most of the talking and he will admit quite frankly that the girl who is a good listener is bright and attractive and that he has had a wonderful time.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 15 years and am acquainted with quite a few boys and they ask me for dates and I cannot take them up because my folks will not let me go out evenings alone when they ask me for a date what would be a good thing to say to him. E. M. A. J."

You tell them that your parents will not let you go out, which is as it should be for one as young as you. I hope in the evenings you are alone that you will use your time to improve your spelling. It is quite bad—as is your writing. Now you don't want to grow up into an illiterate young woman, do you? When you get a little older and want to write letters to young men friends they will be shocked to get one so badly spelled and punctuated.

ITCHING BURNING SKIN TROUBLE

In Pimples On Face. Was Disfigured. Cuticura Heals.

"My skin trouble started with little red pimples. These started to run and later I had my face full of crusts. The pimples scaled over and were in blotches over my face. The itching and burning at times was terrible, and I had to scratch. My face was disfigured.

"I used Cuticura, and I used two cakes of Soap and two boxes of Ointment when I was healed." (Signed) Miss Agnes Bosman, R. R. 7, Box 117, Holland, Mich., June 15, 1918.

Clear the pores of impurities by daily use of Cuticura Soap and occasional touches of Cuticura Ointment.

Cuticura Talcum is delicate, delightful, distingué. It imparts to the person a charm incomparable and peculiar to itself.

Omega Oil

For Sprains and Bruises

A woman asked Earl if his baby brother had cut his teeth since she last saw him. Earl replied: "He is still going through his gum days." MRS. L. S.

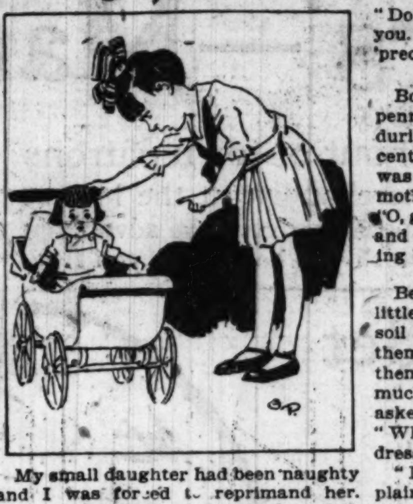
Myra had heard much about brother's being cross on account of cutting teeth, and appreciating the honor of being allowed to push his perambulator in front of the house she was quite prepared to answer an inquiring woman as to his crying, which she did thus: "Me thinks' him's got a mad on, but maybe it's 'cause him's hatchin' teef." L. A. G.



My small daughter had been naughty and I was forced to reprimand her. Later I heard her say to her doll: "Dolly, I hopes I'se a good mother to you. Some folks have childs and don't 'preciate 'em." O. D.

Bobby was good about saving his pennies and buying thrift stamps all during the war, but with the first 50 cents he accumulated after the war was over he bought candy, for which mother scolded him. Crying, he said: "O, gee, a feller can't even be patriotic and have a little peace celebration withing being called down." A. C.

* *

Beulah's mother always starched her little girl's dresses so they wouldn't soil so easily, but Beulah didn't like them that way, and generally crushed them so they wouldn't stand out so much. On one occasion her mother asked her why she did it, adding, "What do you suppose I starched your dresses for?"

"I don't like it that way," complained Beulah, "it makes me look so stuck up." E. M.

"TIZ" FOR FEET

For Tired Feet, Sore Feet, Tender, Aching, Swollen, Calloused Feet and Painful Corns

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe crinkled, aching, burning, corn pestered feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get, how comfortable your shoes feel.

INVESTIGATE THE FORD-NEWBERRY CASE.

It is vital to the integrity of popular government in America that all of the facts in the Ford-Newberry contest be examined by the next senate and made widely public. Evidence in the contest must be preserved.

Senator Newberry is charged with misuse of money at the polls. It is a serious charge and one with which unfortunately the United States has had too much experience. The facts ought to be easy to determine. If they are true Senator Newberry must not retain his seat.

Charges against the Ford organization and against Mr. Ford include these accusations and another more sinister. It is asserted that he used his undoubted financial dominance of certain parts of Michigan to compel political support.

There is no doubt of the financial dominance. The bank deposits of the Ford company alone make such a dominance almost inevitable. It will be remembered that Mr. Ford threatened several years ago to withdraw deposits from such banks as took Anglo-French bonds. Mr. Ford is in a position to coerce Detroit and much of Michigan. Large businesses in Detroit and in Michigan are dependent on business from Mr. Ford for a large part of their trade. Banks are dependent on Mr. Ford because he is a large depositor. The city itself is under obligation to him financially because of his public works, and the directors of public charities are interested in his good opinion. There are more than 50,000 employés directly dependent on him for their livelihood and 20,000 more who earn their living in businesses whose prosperity is involved with Ford's good will. He is the financial dictator of a part at least of Michigan.

The Newberry forces are asking how much this dictatorship was used in bringing political support to the Ford banner. Substantial Republicans like Mr. Ford's friend and banker, William Livingstone, for the first time in their lives found themselves converted to the Wilson democracy in the person of Henry Ford. What is known in Detroit as the "Ford Spirit" changed their political complexion.

The Ford Spirit, as it is known in Detroit, is merely the name given Ford's financial dominance. It means in its essence that loyalty to the Ford interest and Ford organization is healthier financially than assertive independence of the Ford interest.

Popular government must be vitally interested in this thing. No argument or elaboration is needed to prove the sinister danger of such a situation. If it is used or has been used, as the Newberry forces assert, to compel political support, popular government does not exist. If Mr. Ford by controlling the finances of his bankers and associates made it impossible for them to vote and work politically as they believed he is cutting at the roots of democracy.

The United States saw the influences of financial dominance at work in the exposure of the political activity of the National Manufacturers' association several years ago. It saw that an invisible government had grown up in the United States which threatened the integrity of the electoral system. Nothing of the sort must again come into being.

There must be a full and searching investigation of the Ford organization. The exact relationship between Ford and the banks of Detroit must be determined. Just how far did this coercion extend in the senatorial contest, and by what means can a financial dominion of the political opinions of others be broken and destroyed? This thing and popular government cannot live side by side. One excludes the other.

The whole history of the Ford candidacy was shabby. Mr. Ford's backers, obviously with his consent, attempted to take advantage of Michigan's badly formulated election law to put Ford into the senate without any election. In Michigan a candidate may run on both tickets in the primaries. Mr. Ford abstained from announcing his political affiliation. He did not say whether he was a Republican or a Democrat. The scheme was to give him the Republican nomination in the primaries. It was agreed with the Democrats that if he won in the primaries no Democratic candidate would be offered against him. The idea was to give Mr. Ford the senatorship without an election. The senate should go on record whether it will tolerate such practice in future.

That did not end Mr. Ford's activity. His personal attorney, Mr. Alfred Lucking, appeared before the senate on several occasions in an attempt to have the present Democratic congress pass on the legality of Senator Newberry's election. Senator Pomerene introduced a resolution, which was favorably reported by a subcommittee, favoring immediate investigation of the election by the present senate. Mr. Lucking urged immediate investigation.

Was this an attempt to make the present Democratic congress self-perpetuating? Can the public look without apprehension on an attempt to hold in power a party which the people had repudiated at the polls? Does not such a suspicion, even if it is only a suspicion, justify the most searching investigation by the next senate?

What influences permitted the present senate to consider so startling a subversion of our electoral system? What of the present senate?

And what of Mr. Ford? How much influence did he bring to bear to further this plan? Did it amount to a conspiracy?

What have been his political interests since he became interested in them? The government wanted troops to guard our border against Mexicans. Did Mr. Ford assist in recruiting? The government wanted to prepare defenses. Did Mr. Ford assist?

Has he been conspicuous in his political campaign for support of those principles of free election which America has struggled to guard for generations?

In fairness to Mr. Ford, but chiefly in fairness to the American nation, there should be answers to all of these questions.

Can the new senate permit such a series of allegations and facts to go without inquiry?

The evidence in the Ford-Newberry contest must be preserved. The investigation must be searching and far reaching. It is imperative that the new senate discover the truth.

DUNES PARK: A MID-WEST NEED.

We would like to arouse in each inhabitant of the middle west a real, conscious interest in the project of making a national preserve of the dunes. We would like each man, woman, and child of this great neighborhood to realize the real importance of keeping intact this vast, majestic domain of the azoic.

Our national parks should be constant reminders of natural beauty, constant invitations to the people to shake off the dust of toil and walk among elemental things. There is no inspiration like that of the virgin forests, the sweep of sand, and the never ending turmoil of vast waters. In the middle west we have small lakes and small forests. But not without hundreds of miles of travel can we immerse ourselves in the essentials of the primeval—the age old forests, the great scars of the glaciers, and the vision of the sea.

Dunes park is this. No ocean more suggestive of the might of the waters, no stretches of beach more imposing, nor wooded hills and valleys more peaceful and infinite in variety.

We do not lack for purposes devoted to the traditions of the nation. The name of Roosevelt and the life of the man match well with the rugged and powerful character of the region. We believe the suggestion of Roosevelt park will meet with approval throughout the middle west. There has been a tentative plan to honor Roosevelt in connection with the Sequoia park preserve; this, however, need not interfere with a like tribute from the middle west.

From a point of accessibility the position of the dunes could hardly be bettered. Lying at the foot of Lake Michigan, its southern border is the natural highway between the east and the west. A number of railroad lines pass within a short distance of the region, electric railways are almost within a stone's throw of the principal places of interest, and fine highways attract automobilists. Walking clubs have their rendezvous in the district, so it may be seen that even pedestrians are not denied the privileges of the park.

Residents of Chicago are best equipped to know the value of setting aside picturesque regions for the use of future generations. The knowledge has been gained not through employment but through neglect. Had the early residents of Chicago been able to correctly judge the value of the lake front in the years to come it is extremely doubtful if it would now be occupied by a network of railroad instead of being a playground for all the people.

The dunes region offers a fair comparison. At present the territory is at the disposal of the people; there is not the slightest commercial reason why the government cannot take it over. There will be no personal interests to conflict; no industries will be affected, and the people will not be forced to pay exorbitant prices under process of condemnation. The principle of eminent domain will, we believe, apply and the value of the land is negligible.

Historically the region is full of interest. It is one of the few spots in the middle west that possesses the wild and unmaimed beauty of a thousand years ago. La Salle and Tonty knew the district as it is today. Boys of this generation can have as free scope in adventure and exploration as had the early French.

Persons of an investigative turn of mind can find a world of treasure there. Northern scrub pines, common in Alaska, are found in abundance, probably the souvenirs of the glacial period that thrust the sands back where they now lie. Red barberry and trailing evergreen are profuse. Even patches of prickly pear are common, suggestive of the Arizona deserts.

The region is accessible winter and summer. Many dunes enthusiasts spend winter week ends in the cottages, finding more satisfaction in the glowing grate and the whistling winds than in the ease of more metropolitan communities.

We say again that we hope for support in the project of a middle western national park. Friends of the movement will advance it by writing their ideas to Senator Harry New of Indiana.

Editorial of the Day

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

[New York Commercial.]

Daylight saving worked so well last summer and added so much to the pleasures of life that congress should heed the wishes and welfare of the vast majority instead of bowing to the will of a few of our farmers, who allege that they have trouble with their help. If 7 o'clock is too late an hour for rising under the daylight saving schedule, make it 6 o'clock. The cows pay no attention to the law, but that can easily be arranged.

It is estimated that fifteen million people did more or less gardening last year and found the earlier closing hours in the factories and business houses a great advantage. Other millions enjoyed longer evenings in all parts of the country. It is time that the plain people rebelled against the rule of aggressive minorities, and this is a good time for reviving the spirit of independence and the rule of the majority. We are ruled too much by noise instead of the will of the majority.

IN "The Wine of Astonishment" [Appleton] the course of true love skids and bumps, dashes against the stone wall of modern materialistic ideals, and proves itself true love by waning now and then into an ironic passivity. Mary Hastings Bradley has succeeded in maknig a picture of young love that isn't a caricature. It is a simple story of a boy who lived on the west side, a girl who lived on the north, their college days at Smith and Amherst, their engagement, the girl's marriage to a man of wealth, his death after five years, the uncompromising demands of the man that they live on his salary and not on her widow riches, the war—and their meeting in France.

"The Case for the Goat" is not, my dears, a contribution to B. L. T.'s pet, Evangeline, but a serious volume on food economics, published by Dutton, with introductions by Rider Haggard and the Duchess of Hamilton and Brandon, who is president of the British Goat society.

INSANE MAN CAN REASON.

ABOUT fifteen years ago a certain Yale graduate became insane. He spent three years in insane asylums, public and private, and then, having regained his reason, resolved to devote his life to improving the condition of the insane. He wrote a very wonderful book called "A Mind That Found Itself," and using this as an instrument he organized the national committee for mental hygiene. This active, vigorous organization now has state societies in practically every state, and both locally and nationally is actively working with the problems of insanity. As I read the book and as I ran through the activities of the Mental Hygiene society it seems to me that neither the author of the book nor the committee fully comprehend the meaning of the term mental hygiene.

The author seemingly came of a family in which there was a strain of bad mental poise. Whether this is true or not it is certain that he was poorly poised. Had some one with a knowledge of mental hygiene taken an interest in the author I think it altogether probable that he would not have become insane. Proper mental training should have kept him on his keel.

All through his book there runs evidence that what the author had in mind was correction of the abuses to which the insane are subjected. Many observations on the mental processes of the insane will be quoted presently. But nowhere do I find observations or opinions on the prevention of insanity. Likewise in the work of the society there is but little having to do with the prevention of insanity. They have widely circulated one pamphlet dealing with the care of nervous children, but not even that is exactly suited to mothers' use. I find no pamphlets or primers on the training of nervous adults, the home care, and especially the mental care of epileptics, the care of the violent tempered, or the pessimistic, the care of those tending toward insanity, on worry or insomnia.

The society is doing a great work and I would not be understood as thinking otherwise. It is exceedingly active and capable in caring for insane and mentally disturbed soldiers and sailors both abroad and in this country, and this work is keeping the organization's hands full just now. It has surveyors in the field discovering conditions that affect the insane in the different states. Three field corps are now engaged in surveying three states. It is very active in securing better care for the insane in all parts of the country. It is working to secure better trained medical and nonmedical attendants in asylums. It is especially active in persuading the authorities to lessen restraint and punishments of the insane. It gathers together all the literature and all the information about the insane available any and everywhere in the civilized world.

And this is a great, a needed, and a commendable work. It is natural that mental hygiene should start that way. In doing so it is following in the footsteps of other hygiene. The natural first step is custodial care. The next, making custodial care as good as possible, freeing it of abuses. The third, curative care. The fourth, prevention, but prevention written and spoken in technical terms for the technically trained. The fifth and last is prevention written in terms of the man on the street. This society is doing great work in fields one, two, and three. It is just beginning to enter field four, while field five will be a later development.

These things having been said, we are ready to quote from "The Mind That Found Itself." Had we done so before htey were said, there might have been disappointment over not finding in the book some things expected. "This story is derived from as human a document as ever existed, and, because of its uncommon nature, perhaps no one thing contributes as much to its value as its authenticity." This is the opening sentence of the book—the story of three years of the life of an insane man. To those interested in the conduct of institutions the book is especially interesting in those parts which deal with institution methods and their effect on the inmates. To me and to many others the chief interest lies in the statements as to what an insane man thinks and why he thinks that way.

The author at first suffered from delusions. A brother had died from traumatic epilepsy a short while before the author had his breakdown. Therefore the first delusion suffered by the insane man was that he was an epileptic. After harboring various delusions more or less fixed he passed from that type of insanity into a form of excited mania. During his delusion period he had suicidal tendencies—in fact, almost succeeded once in killing himself. During his period of excitement he was anxious to live. Throughout the entire period he retained his memory and after being released from institutions was able to set down from memory in minute detail his thoughts, emotions, spoken and written words during the period of his insanity.

He records not only the acts but the words and the facial expressions of attendants. Having become sane, he acquired a capacity for valuating himself while insane, his point of view, his conduct, opinions, emotions, and their underlying factors. He had an opinion, and a sane one, as to the relative responsibility for their acts of the insane with whom he was thrown in contact. All of this he records in "The Mind That Found Itself," and just that revelation has proven most interesting.

"Most children are afraid of the dark until they learn that its hidden terrors are imaginary," he says. "But this childish fear is a sublime mental process compared with the unreasoning dread of insanity that prevails in the minds of most adults throughout the civilized world. Under certain conditions an insane person is without doubt the unhappiest of men, but I shall prove that he is sometimes happier than a sane person under the most favorable conditions. . . .

"Now, if a brother who had enjoyed perfect health all his life could be stricken with epilepsy what was to prevent my being similarly affected? This was the thought that soon got possession of my mind." He harbored this thought several years prior to the onset of his insanity.

"During the night of June 18, 1900," he goes on, "my persistent dread became a false belief—a delusion. Soon my disordered brain was busy with schemes for death. So far as I had control of my faculties, it must be admitted that I deliberated."

From 1894 until June 23, 1900, he feared epilepsy. During the latter part of the time he had imaginary attacks of epilepsy and delusions. A serious injury June 23, 1900, cured him permanently of this delusion but substituted another. There followed a period of delirium with hallucinations. During this time his mind reasoned, but in such a way as to furnish bases for his delusions. Every hallucination and every delusion were founded on some sense impression and a line of reasoning started by it. Having become sane, he analyzed the reasons for each delusion and hallucination. While in his wildest delirium his mental processes were often shaped by sound memories and correct reasoning.

In one place he says: "My brother's mistake was grave, for the unintentional breaking of that promise broke the only remaining thread that bound me to the world. And it is now clear to my judgment that the most trifling promise, direct or implied, made under such circumstances should, if possible, be carried out to the letter. It should never be taken for granted that a perverted mind cannot detect a perverted moral act."

An interesting account is that in which he analyzes the steps by which his perverted reasoning capacity built delusions out of ordinary sensations, step by step. He says: "That one's memory may perform its function in the grip of unreason itself is proved by the fact that my memory retains an impression, and an accurate one, of virtually everything that befell me. . . .

"In the strict sense of the word, there is no such thing as a genuinely stubborn insane person. The stubborn men and women in the world are sane. . . . Most sane people think that no insane person can reason logically. But this is not so. Upon unreasonable premises I made most reasonable deductions, and that when my mind was in its most disturbed condition. . . . Let every sane relative of an insane person remember the golden rule. Go to see them with as much of the light of sanity as you possess, treat them sanely, write them sane letters, keep them informed about the home circle; let not your devotion flag nor accept any repulse. . . .

"Investigation has convinced me that the libraries in existence in hospitals for the insane are not made the most of; for it frequently happens that those most desirous of reading are least likely to ask for books. Instead of being kept in one ward, books should be distributed and redistributed throughout the several wards. . . . The quiet patients need to read, and would be benefited by it, but they will not ask for books, nor for anything else they want. . . . The contents of the books I read made perhaps more of an impression on my memory than most books make on the minds of normal readers. . . .

"Delusions are very real to those who harbor them. . . . Many can testify to the vividness with which good and bad impressions of their lives rush through their confused minds. . . .

"Though based on fancy, the delights of madness are real. . . . Senseless as this act of mine appears, it was, like so many acts of the insane, the result of logical thinking. . . .

"Experience teaches that a patient who is treated honestly from the beginning usually enters a hospital with comparatively slight reluctance. . . .

"What fostered my sense of self-control was a sense of gratitude. The attendants treated me as a gentleman. Therefore it was not difficult to prove myself one."

HIVES.

R. G. writes: "I want to ask you about my disease. In the morning when I get up my face and hands are all swollen. I can hardly see. I can hardly close or open my hands. I have a terrible itch all over my body sometimes. It forms big bunches under the skin and sometimes my back aches. Is it the hives? How long do hives last? Do you think it can be dropsy? Does too much meat cause it?"

REPLY.

Your description fits hives. It does not fit dropsy very well. Hives may continue recurring repeatedly for many years. The cause of hives varies. In some cases a heavy meat diet is the cause. In most cases the trouble is due to some other food.

QUININE BAD FOR HABIT.

Reader writes: "Would appreciate very much if you would answer a question for me. Kindly tell me if there is any harm done in taking quinine in doses of five grains. I don't mean when one is really ill, but just feeling a little indisposed and to 'ward off a cold,' etc. I think that it does, but to help convince others, would like your expert advice on the subject."

REPLY.

No one should take quinine unless he needs it. Quinine will not ward off a cold. Quinine is a poison. It has caused death. It not infrequently causes deafness; occasionally blindness. Even in ordinary doses it causes a skin eruption in a person now and then. Any drug capable of causing these effects when given in full doses should not be taken needlessly in any case, even in small doses.

DISCHARGES IN EUROPE.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—May a man who enlisted in the army and is now overseas be released before his unit comes home? Do the authorities release any men while they are in France? If so, to whom should a man apply for discharge? H. R. H.

The latest instructions from the war department treating of this matter, read that any officer or enlisted man who entered the service since April 1, 1917, and who submits good and sufficient reason for requesting discharge in Europe, may be discharged in Europe; provided that the officer or soldier waives any claim for sea travel allowances from Europe to the United States. Officers and men of this class shall be paid travel allowances from station to port of embarkation and from Hoboken, N. J., to the place of entry into the service.

Application for release should be made to the soldier's immediate commanding officer.

CAN BE HELD TO LEASE.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—[To the Friend of the People.]—About a year ago two young ladies leased a furnished flat, both signing the lease, which was for one year.

On the seventh month one of the young ladies was called home on account of sickness. She was unable to return. The other young lady moved out without giving the landlord any notice. In the meantime the girl who was away was married.

1. Did her part of the lease automatically expire when she became married?
2. Can any one be held to a lease on a furnished flat? F. M. F.

1. No.
2. Yes, those signing are liable. If they have unexempt property or wages you should employ an attorney to collect.

FUNERAL EXPENSES PREFERRED CLAIM.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A woman who died several months ago left a diamond ring, valued at $200, and other jewels which she used to wear. All these valuables are in possession of the husband. Can he or his attorney lawfully claim in court that the above mentioned property was necessary for her funeral expenditures? If yes, please refer under what particular page, paragraph, or section of the revised statutes can this be found. He, of course, has no excuse otherwise, as he is actually in business for himself and draws, besides, a regular salary of about $100 weekly. The deceased wife, on the other hand, left a child 10 years of age and he was her stepfather.

2. Does the law provide anywhere in such case that the stepfather is legally bound to support the child until a certain number of years, as long as the marriage was legal? If yes, kindly state under what particular page, paragraph, etc., of the Illinois statutes can this be found. M. S.

1. Depends on the facts as to the condition in life whether the money was actually spent, etc. Funeral expenses are a preferred claim. See Sec. 70 of the chapter on administration.

2. Not unless he had in some way assumed the obligation of a parent toward them.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

MINDING THE NEIGHBORS' BABIES.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Without wishing to exalt your motives, nor will I impugn them, your editorials dealing with the senate, the league of nations, and the president are impressive because they do not reason the issue on the "either or" basis. "Minding the neighbors' babies" may be fine, altruistic business, yet it is not only most unthankful but generally tends toward engendering a bitter hostile feeling.

Our state is represented in the United States senate by two safe stalwarts. (I do not use the term in the sense employed in the days of Roscoe Conkling.) Senators Sherman and McCormick may have the opportunity of learning the position of this historic people, so well reflected in this instance by the views published in your editorial column, but if they hear not the voice of the people who believe that "minding one's own business" is good, sound, safe American doctrine, and "minding it well," then let them refute publicly the fine argument developed in your leader, "Mr. Wilson and the Senate," so we can meet them fairly. HILTON B. SONNEBORN SR.

Weird Fashions Among New Era's Fads aud Foibles

By Mme. X.

IT'S a pretty tumultuous world on which we look out these days. The big conflagration is over, but everywhere there are lesser fires and smoldering heaps of ruins that befog the new era's dawn.

Returned visitors from London and Paris report evidences of what seems like a violent reaction from the strain and anguish of the last four and a half years. Hotels are so full that the casual wayfarer, before he finds lodging, may be obliged to spend the night in a taxi going from pillar to post.

Restaurants, especially the gayest and most fashionable, are thronged until the closing hours with hilarious and changing crowds. And prices in both hotels and restaurants make New York prices look small and mean.

Theaters are so popular that one has to engage a seat a week in advance. And gowns—that sure indication of the mood of the moment—are of every rainbow tint. Black is the one color which is taboo.

No Tailored Suits in Paris.

Is the American woman breaking away from the French traditions which have guided her taste in dressing, decorations, and manner of living for so many years? A clever, trained observer of mankind—or rather womankind—and the fashions who has just returned from Paris, says that the Parisienne of today is in appearance utterly different from her American compeer.

Over there in gay Paree there's no such thing as a tailor suit—that standby of the average daughter of Uncle Sam. Everything in the way of a day or street costume is "robe chemise," with the waist line down about the hips and—ye gods and little fishes! —the short, tight skirt of the period stops at the knees or an inch or so below. Between this and the extra high kid boots gleams an expanse of silk stocking. Hats are of every shape under the sun and worn at any angle.

Evening frocks are sheathlike, with queer little perky tails. The material is either richest gold or silver brocade, or a loose tunic of embroidered net over a slim simple satin foundation.

The English swell continues her custom of wearing fullest evening dress for theater or restaurant, while her French neighbor always caps her decolleté evening gown with either a small glittering jet toque or a big "chapeau de gaz."

True to Type.

The proper walk is to stoop slightly forward á la poilu, carrying his eighty pound pack. Long waisted, short skirted, queer hatted, with a modern version of the Grecian bend—can you visualize and accept this conglomerate figure and fit it into the France of your dreams, the France that was nearly bled white, the France that suffered so bitterly in the destruction of the flower of its youth, its most cherished historical monuments, and its greatest industries?

Yes, because of that Gallic quality of elasticity, that quick recoil, this present phase is true to the French type. There's no abnormal sentimentality in the French. They do not sit down and weep over their ruins. To them this existence is essentially the business of the living. Neither their enemies nor their friends shall see them hesitate or stagger in their forward march. Every grave of poilu, Tommy, or doughboy in French soil will be tended and garlanded in the years to come, but all their flowers will not be for these mounds. Weddings, christenings, and other festivals will have plenty of blossoms.

Adopted Here in Part.

But to return a moment to the great question of French fashions for American women—will these Paris modes be adopted here? I think the answer is yes, with certain modifications. We always give an American touch to foreign importations.

Adaptable as the American woman is, she keeps her national type so distinctively that she can almost always be picked out in any assemblage. Nor are her distinguishing characteristics ungainly, unattractive, tasteless, or dowdy. Rather the contrary. She is decidedly chic, alert, dainty, complete in appearance, with the subtle intimation about her that everything clear through is of the best and most expensive.

Also, she is annually developing more confidence in her own judgment in matters of taste. So, if she adopts the knee high skirt, the loose and waistless robe chemise, the sheathlike robe de bal, it will be because she is sure of the shape of her legs and the lines of her figure and of their value in the picture. She may even be sure of the first two and yet doubt their value in the picture and so reject the Paris fashion edicts. It remains to be seen.

Word from Red Cross Workers.

Of the Red Cross work in Europe reports are gratifying. Those associated in this great enterprise are continually penetrating farther into the war stricken parts of Europe. That popular medico and fellow citizen, Dr. Samuel J. Walker, who went over a year ago with a Red Cross medical mission to Greece, is now on his way into the remoter districts of Macedonia whence he writes that conditions are appalling. One member of the party reports that from what they have seen of the civilians and the returned war prisoners the Bulgarians, as he expressed it, "out-Germaned the Germans in inhumanity."

He perhaps would not have said this had he stood with Laird Bell and other Americans as they received the returned American prisoners at Nancy, when men drooped and died at the feet of the reception committee.

Chicagoans in France.

Before I pass to more local chronicles I want to record that Miss Mary Waller of River Forest is doing canteen work—yes, I believe it's a Y. M. C. A. canteen—at Coblenz. I do hope she's not succumbing to the openly conducted propitiatory propaganda being carried on by the Germans in the territory occupied by our troops—a piece of work considered by a high up military official in this part of the world as being insidious and dangerous to a high degree. But I'll wager no American woman will "fall for it," whatever influence it has on our men.

The latest news from other Chicagoans working in France is that the "Billy" Hibbards and Mrs. "Joe" Winterbotham were all in Paris a fortnight ago. Miss Eleanor West is still at Metz, while Miss Cornelia Conger is busy at Aix-les-Bains, serving cigarets and postal cards to the American troops passing through there. The modern edition of the vivandiere is a great improvement on that cheerful but none too respectable hanger-on of other times and other wars.

Plan for Peaceful Pursuits.

Tuesday evening Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen and her thousand guests will sit down to dinner at the Morrison hotel and set the seal on the heirs to that war organization, the women's committees of the state councils, the community councils.

The duties of these councils, of which there will be over 2,000 in Illinois, will be to act as a sort of coordinating force in their various localities. Much of the work they inaugurated, like public employment, hygiene, sanitation, etc., has been taken over by some branch of the state government, but other undertakings, like child welfare, must still be carried on with their help.

The Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs is said to be resenting the perpetuation of these councils as an intended invasion of their field of action. This development of a war born organization into one to work in peace times is not a local or a state undertaking. It is being carried out all over the country, at the behest of the secretary of the interior, Mr. Lane, under whose jurisdiction these state councils rose and flourished.

It is not the intention of these community councils in any way to usurp functions already held by other organizations. It is rather to do away with overlapping work and to act as a coördinating force. All this will doubtless be explained at the two days' conference and at the Tuesday dinner, which comes in the middle of the conference.

Luncheon for Dr. Shaw.

Almost all the places have been taken for the luncheon the Chicago Equal Suffrage association is giving on Wednesday at the Casino in honor of that veteran suffragist, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw. Mrs. Jacob Baur will preside and other members of her committee who will assist her will be the Mesdames Arthur Ryerson, Charles Dempster, Augustus Peabody, Tiffany Blake, Kellogg Fairbank, and Mitchell Follansbee, and Miss Rozet.

Mrs. George W. Patterson (formerly the charming Suzette Ryerson), fresh from honors gained in nearly two years of splendid work in France, will also be a conspicuous guest of the occasion. She is going to speak on her work in some of the French military hospitals. She was frequently under fire, on one occasion being part of a hospital cortége over which a boche aviator swooped low and showered with machine gun bullets.

Reception for Gen. Wood.

On Thursday afternoon the postponed reception for Maj. Gen. Leonard A. Wood will be held at the Chicago Historical society, on the corner of Dearborn avenue and West Ontario street.

Clarence Burley, the society's president, and its librarian, Miss Caroline McIlvaine, will be assisted in doing the honors of this shrine of Chicago's past by Mrs. Frederick T. West (niece of Chicago's first mayor, William B. Ogden), Mrs. H. M. Wilmarth, Mrs. Malcolm Caruthers, Mrs. Frank Logan, Mrs. Joseph Adams, Mrs. William R. Linn, Mrs. William Odell, Miss Mary Newberry, and Miss Cora Williams.

Among those who will pour tea will be Mrs. T. B. Blackstone, Mrs. George L. Dunlap, Mrs. Charles Hitchcock, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Mrs. Samuel Insull, and Miss Helen Drake.

I wonder if the distinguished guest of the occasion will have any realization of the many associations which those crowded rooms have for the old resident. Chicago is so essentially a city of today—and has always been so—that few pause to become acquainted with the centuries which have led up to the present. This is rather the fault of this city, which hangs up its past like a worn out overcoat in a dark closet, instead of wearing it like a glorious coronet as Boston and Philadelphia wear their crown of years.

Gen. Wood is at present here with his good looking young son, Lieut. Wood, as secretary (or adjutant or whatever the correct military title is), getting his department in order. When his wife joins him, which will be late this month, they will set up their lares and penates at Fort Sheridan, in the commandant's home, which through a grove of young oaks overlooks the lake.

The Woods will be a great social acquisition and are in deadly peril of being dined to death. We've killed or permanently crippled many agreeable acquisitions in the past who were unable to protect themselves from Chicago's overwhelming hospitality. The general is too valuable a national asset to be so victimized, but in himself lies his only protection.

For the Welfare of the Negro.

We recently gave a gallant and a clamorous welcome to the "Fighting Eighth" and other colored regiments who returned from European battlefields. It is said that there was no adversary the boche so dreaded as he did the charging, colored American soldiers. Their gleaming teeth, blood curdling yells, and flashing bayonets sent cold shivers down the stoutest Teuton spine.

And yet the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in its various pamphlets throws a light on our home treatment of that part of this race for whose happiness and welfare we are so largely responsible which reveals a state of things that would make William Lloyd Garrison, Owen Lovejoy, John Brown, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Frank B. Sanborn, and other champions of this oppressed race turn in their graves.

These pamphelts were dropped in my editorial lap by Mrs. Arthur Mason, Mrs. John A. Carpenter's sister, who is the publicity agent for this society. As I read the account of the lynching of Hayes Turner and of the indescribably brutal murder of his wife by a mob of white men of Brooks and Lowndes counties, in Georgia, in May, 1918, I felt that we owed an apology to the Turks for our harsh criticism of their treatment of the Armenians. In all the annals of Turkish atrocities there's nothing worse than the details of this infamous deed committed in the president's native state. It was but one of a series of lynchings and burnings the whites carried out in that district at that time.

In the year preceding the East St. Louis Negro massacre of 1917 (when more than 175 colored men, women, and children were shot, knifed, or burned to death) there had been fifty-eight lynchings in this country. You and I read with hardly an emotion of lynchings in southern states, so common is the occurrence, yet in English and continental papers a great deal of comment is given to these events. It is not understood why we are so keen on setting other houses in order when our own is so far from clean, or sweet smelling.

This association for aiding the colored people was started in 1910, largely by the endeavors of Miss Mary White Ovington of New York, assisted by William English Walling. It now numbers 175,000 members, white and colored. Its national president is Moorfield Story of Boston, while among those active in its support are Oswald Garrison Villard (grandson of the great anti-slavery agitator, William Lloyd Garrison), John E. Milholland, and Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois.

The Friends of Opera.

Abandoned by its legitimate parents, Mrs. R. T. Crane, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, and left to the tender management of as noble an aggegation of foster parents as any young, fragile organization could have, the Friends of Opera burst its swaddling clothes last Thursday afternoon and took its first steps across the Casino's dark and glistening floor. Its foster parents were Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, who smiled on it from her presiding officer's throne; Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. John Borden, and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham. Watching it with calculating, critical eye was a carefully culled group of 100 representative folk.

"Is this an exotic picked and handed us by Chicago's socially prominent?" they asked; "or is it something of real value to the community?"

Time alone will show; our hope is that it will prove to be a sturdy bulwark to Chicago grand opera—an institution in which we believe.

Much interest in their respective circles of friends is aroused by the fact that the "Ben" Carpenters have bought for their own family habitation the Dr. Dudley residence at 1545 Astor street. The Dudleys will hie them to an apartment at 242 East Walton place. "How the world do move!"

Ask Any McCray Owner

WE are perfectly willing to rest our case with the McCray owner. Ask the woman-of-the-home what she thinks of the McCray Refrigerator—ask your next door neighbor, or the grocer, or the butcher.

For more than 30 years we have been building refrigerators. During those years our constant aim has been to make refrigerators that satisfy; from the standpoint of health—convenience—durability—economy.

McCray cooling principles insure a constant circulation of cold, dry air through every compartment — thus insuring perfect preservation of food. McCray insulation confines the cold air currents within and excludes the warm air from without.

In Chicago the place to see and buy the McCray Refrigerator is at the McCray Salesroom 1000 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

Frock No. 4678. Few frocks may boast an interesting back as well as one of the most becoming button-decorated fronts. Price $1

A complete showing of new pattern designs, charming hand-colored sketches of every design, the favored materials for Spring, are now on exhibition at the Vogue Pattern Room.

The line of the new silhouette—interpreted in the straight, slim frock, and the softly draped, graceful, essentially feminine one, both markedly different from war-time fashions—is embodied in these new spring patterns, modified to suit the requirements of the woman who wishes to be correct, but not extreme.

Vogue Patterns are easy to follow. Every difficulty of cutting, fitting, and combining is forestalled. Every piece is marked in plain English with full directions. Every seam is indicated with a perforated line. Lining, goods, and trimming are cut in paper of three different colors. There is no endless changing and trying on and refitting. Just follow directions and the result is a success.

Thousands of women bridge the gap between a limited and an unlimited allowance by the use of Vogue Patterns. By using Vogue Patterns you halve your dress expense and double your dress distinction.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Wide Field Open to Women Who Helped Win War

By Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen.

[Chairman of the Woman's Committee, State Council of Defense.]

THE war work of women is rapidly being ended. The woman's committee believes that the habit of public work ought not to be lost. We believe that the women who have accomplished such notable results during the war ought to continue in some form of public service.

The war indeed opened vistas which render it impossible for women now to retire from the kind of activities into which war drove them. We were for example told that 29 per cent of the men called by the draft boards were rejected because of physical disabilities. Most of these defects could have been cured had the nation been alive to the possible benefits of medical service. Is it conceivable that women who know of this great source of national weakness are now to forget what they might remedy?

Again the medical examinations of the war department showed the appalling numbers of those suffering from venereal diseases. Out of the first million men accepted under the selective service act 3 per cent were victims of these infections. A situation such as that is a menace to the nation. It certainly cannot be neglected.

The draft examinations again showed that one in every four men taken was illiterate. So great was this handicap that the inability of men to read orders, to obey instructions, to locate themselves in unfamiliar country, became a serious danger. The presence of such a vast number of citizens insulated from every influence which education makes possible cannot be overlooked.

The women who have been aroused to public work by the call of war will continue, I am sure, until these national weaknesses are eradicated by rational health supervision and by a proper educational system.

I cite these only as the types of things which have been brought to the attention of women war workers and as types of things which women cannot and will not forget until they are cured. The variety of employment of the 700,000 women who offered themselves for war service is endless.

Work enough remains in assisting the soldiers and sailors who are returning to establish themselves at work. If every community in the country does not prepare to do justice to its own fighters, there will inevitably be trouble. The suggestion of the Council of National Defense is that through the organization of these community councils which are nothing more than combinations of all the existing clubs and associations doing public work, the needs of the various localities might be met.

Two thousand committees were organized for war work by the woman's committee. Why should not these committees, through the establishment of community councils, continue on their own responsibility and leadership the work which they have done with outside advice since the war?

Many of the same variety of services must be continued by some one. Child welfare work cannot end with the war. No more has the need for social hygiene vanished with peace. Society still has a responsibility to control the conditions under which women and children are employed in industry. The necessity for Americanization is not less great, while the need to develop a wholesome community is almost one of the discoveries of the war period.

The woman's committee, because it believes so firmly that the state has still need of patriotic service and because it knows that every community has great resources, usually untouched resources, in the public spirit of its men and women, has called a statewide conference to open Tuesday morning at the Hotel Morrison to consider the proposal made by the Council of National Defense that community councils be developed. To this eight states are sending delegates and the men who served as county executive chairmen under the State Council of Defense are invited.

Big North Shore Club to Stage Play This Week

A PLAY will be given by the drama committee of the Rogers Park Woman's club on Tuesday afternoon, under the direction of Mrs. Clarence Cole. Mrs. Arpad Barothy, chairman of the art committee, has charge of the stage arrangements, and music will be furnished by Mrs. M. J. Hammer. The cast includes Mrs. James J. Barbour, Mrs. James Lee Kirkland, Mrs. Louis Kempf, Mrs. Stephen L. Walker, Mrs. Edmond Graf, Mrs. John W. Barnhardt, Mrs. Webster H. Burke, Mrs. E. Coulter Davies, and Miss Sylvia Campbell.

The education committee, of which Mrs. Jervis O. Newton is chairman, will have charge of the day.

Tomorrow evening the junior auxiliary of the club will give an entertainment under the title of "A Trip to the Emerald Isle," arranged by Miss Edith Anna House, one of the members. A number of Rogers Park boys who have lately returned from France will be present and will tell of their experiences in the service. Dancing and refreshments will follow the program.

The club will have charge of one Sunday evening in March at the Khaki and Blue club, furnishing chaperons and hostesses, and, perhaps, most important of all in the eyes of the soldier and sailor, an abundance of home made cake for the boys.

The Rogers Park Woman's club activities cover a wide range. Committees on conservation, education, art, drama, home economics, civics, philanthropy, legislation, public health, and child welfare give constant attention to all matters pertaining to these subjects. Upon the entry of the United States into the war the clubhouse was thrown open to the community for Red Cross and other war work. Mrs. Horner, the president of the club, was made chairman of the central committee of Rogers Park, which comprised representatives from all of the organizations in the vicinity, and the clubhouse was made a clearing house for all material used in war relief work.

Not the least of the enterprises of this group of energetic women is the conducting of the lunchroom at the Nicholas Senn High school, which they have handled successfully since the school was opened. This entails voluntary service in the cafeteria on the part of twenty-five to thirty clubwomen every day, nearly 2,000 pupils patronizing the lunchroom daily.

The All-Artists Phonograph

AT a turn of the hand the Ultona plays any type of record A child can do it. It is practically automatic.

Now your library of records can be bought according to your favorites. For instance, each record maker has a famous tenor. On a one-record instrument, you can hear him only. Others are barred. And who likes to be restricted?

The Ultona is the greatest feature offered any music lover. And it is obtainable solely on the new Brunswick.

Another vast improvement in tone projection is the Brunswick Tone Amplifier, built of moulded wood, like a violin.

Let us explain the Brunswick Method of Reproduction. Hear your favorite records. Then decide on merit alone.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

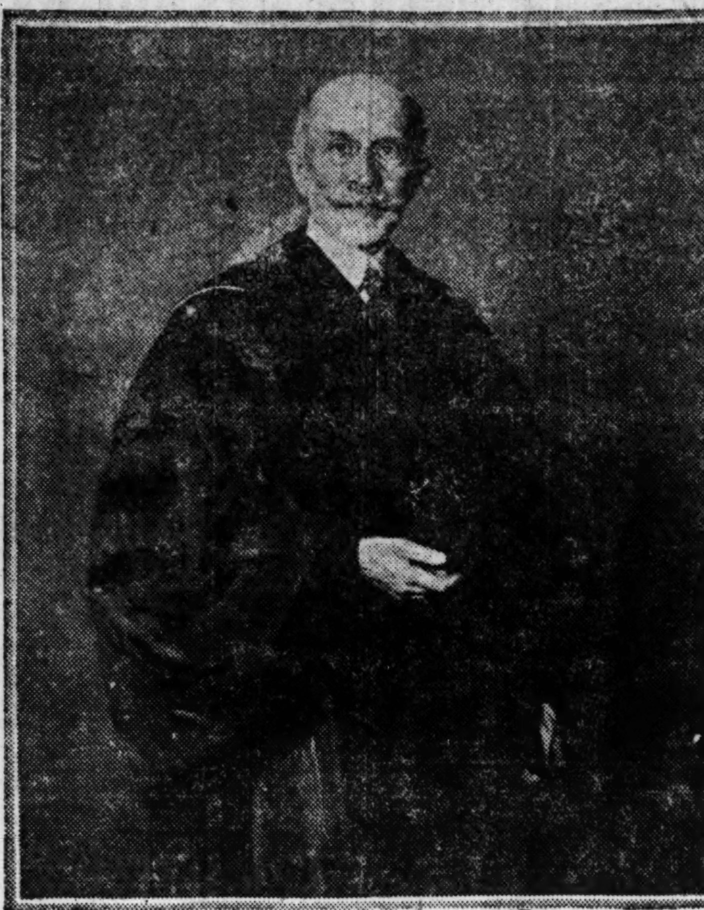
'Miss Pan' Forms Pleasing Feature in Varied Exhibit

A narrow pool, flanked by green hedges low,
Through which the summer winds forever blow,
Lies like a lost star stricken from the sky
One golden night when Love himself passed by,
Brushing aside the curtains of the dawn
In hurry for the black night to be gone.
And, where Love passed, Pan's daughter pipes a lay,
Tossing the notes like jugglers, wise, at play
Throw far their silver balls and then with laughter
Let a cascade of shining hoops fall after.
So Miss Pan pipes, and from the rushes near
An ancient frog climbs clumsily to hear,
While water lilies dreaming on the pool
Cup her wild strains in their gold chalice cool.

IT was a pleasant conceit of those who installed the exhibit of sculpture by Chicago artists in the present exhibition at the Art institute to place the graceful figure of "Miss Pan," modeled by Sylvia Shaw—in—if one may term it so—a suitable environment.

The slender, quaint marble child is crouched on a rock at the head of a narrow pond bordered with low growing shrubs. In the limpid depths lilies drift like perfumed boats of white and gold, and out from the reeds a frog with clumsy gait hies him to the sun kissed rock about which the sapphire ripples lap with a caressing, lilting, eternal undercurrent of melody to match the music of the pipes.

One passes from the hall where the sculpture is shown to a long gallery where there are hung a group of interesting etchings. One of the most powerful is "Toilers of the Sea," by Armand Wargny. Exactly what the muscular sailors are engaged in doing is difficult to state. One is, it seems, pulling in the sail which the wind obstinately refuses to yield. The others are pulling on ropes that may reach down in the green deeps to anchors or nets or other fishing gear. But the tale of the scene, unexplained, stands tense and vital and needs no footnote to command fair praise.



PORTRAIT OF Dr. Albion Small OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO by RALPH CLARKSON

Belle Silvera has several pencil drawings which are of interest. One of the best portraits in the entire exhibition of work by the Chicago artists is her simple, sincere, and convincing likeness of Ralph Clarkson. It is intensely pleasing. The two drawings, "At Aidenn, December, 1918," and "At Aidenn, September, 1917," are delightful. In the one a winter scene is shown with the northern lights streaming across the frosty sky. In the second a file of Indians is silhouetted against the black, star-studded heavens.

The three panels illustrating the story of St. Francis of Assisi are from the brush of Edith Jane Bacon. There is a feeling of primitive values in them and an old world charm. The figures are stiffly drawn, vigorously painted. The children and the wolf, and the child and mother, and the saint himself with the little birds crowding about him, are each in turn enthrallingly important to the reader of this pictured history.

On another wall in the gallery hang various water colors which might well have been taken from a child's book of verse. There is "Garden Flowers," by Helen A. Haselton. But an equally correct title would have been "Mary, Mary, quite contrary, how does your garden grow?" For it is a little contrary Mary's garden blooming with delicately colored flowers and tended by Mary herself, armed with a vast watering pot.

James McCracken has painted "Little Miss Muffet" with a jolly fat spider as black as coal, and "Red Riding Hood" with, or without, I forget which at this moment, her dreadful enemy, the wolf.

Hazel Frazee, who is also a member of this fraternity of dainty conceit, has, in a way, lost touch with her idea in the complicated twists of the painted plot which she calls "The Victory." There comes a point in imagery where the line dividing fancy from frenzy is dangerously approached. It seems to me that Miss Frazee has crossed with one foot this line in her water color.

In the print room of the Art institute there is now on exhibition a collection of books on ornithology, belonging to the John Crerar library and shown under the auspices of the Caxton club. It is a paradise of feathered gentry, for the heavy volumes are gayly illustrated with colored pictures of birds from all over the world. The sauciest bird is the blue winged pitta, a cocky, short tailed, long legged, close set little thing which, hopping gayly on a log, still bears thoughts of murder in its breast as it advances valiantly upon a bow legged spider, its lawful prey.

Shades of the long lost mariner drift from the pictured albatross that crouches impressively upon the sea's edge. The Algerian pied woodpeckers are a motley crew, gayer than any of the same group native to us. Elliot's bird of paradise is a gorgeous, green, brown, and blue feathered creation. And so one might go on detailing each radiant bit of living plumage, but space lacks, and the birds must content themselves with our unexpressed appreciation of their merits.

In the same room are hung dry points by Mary Cassatt, etchings by Donald Shaw MacLaughlan—one of which, "Treviso Waters," is truly charming, and etchings by Whistler, beside whom the others are as nothing.

Ralph Clarkson has recently finished a brilliant portrait of Dr. Albion W. Small of the University of Chicago. The pose is simple, but with something of grace in it. The coloring is sympathetic. Dr. Small is shown in his scholar's robe of black with full sleeves and a deep collar of purple that blends admirably with the dark of the gown, the gray-black of the background, and the fresher tints of the flesh. Wisdom tempered with kindliness shines from the face. The keen blue eyes are softened by their glasses, the full red lips are cleverly quick to gentle irony. A sincere, vigorous, immensely likable personality is revealed in this canvas.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. X.

News and Gossip of the Doings of the Smart Set

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—For goodness sake—I thought I had just successfully got the people planted for the winter, in Palm Beach and points south, when here they are bobbing up already with plans for the hot spell in August! Mrs. French Vanderbilt has just been down from her charming home in Newport with advance word that the flowers are going to be lovely this spring. She has inside information, being in the confidence of the flowers. They will grow for her when they won't for any one else at Newport. They must think she is one of them.

Advance returns state that nearly every cottage is taken, houses are getting their rugs dusted already, and the Superior court has got its stage set for a trial. Ogden Codman of Newport, New York, and Boston is suing George Peabody Eustis of Newport, New York, and Washington because Mr. Eustis knocked him down. They do stage such playful pranks at Newport! There is always some innocent pastime to amuse the idle summer loiterers, and this early spring it promises to be a spicy trial. The way of it is that somebody accused somebody of uttering language that somebody else said was the language of a spy.

The most important thing about the season at Newport is that Mrs. Vanderbilt, reigning sovereign of the Ocean drive, promises to open her mansion early—very early indeed—and the season will be gay in honor of the returned heroes and others not returned on account of never having been away.

Away for Winter Sports.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont is in the Adirondacks for a season of winter sports. Presently she will open her house at Newport.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt Jr. has had a few days' visit with the Perry Belmonts in Washington, but she never stays long away from town these days because she is so wrapped up in that hostess house of hers called Chateau Thierry on Beekman hill. I described it to you when she opened it. She has made it awfully attractive in its months of occupancy. She actually plans to spend a large part of the summer in town on account of it and the remainder at Newport.

It is reported that Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. will go to West Point this fall. He has been serving as a wagoner in France. I knew him when he was a boy of 14, and I should have said then and there that he was not strong enough for such service. He just missed getting a commission when the armistice was signed and his recommendation cancelled. He will pass the summer with his parents at Newport.

Three years ago I wrote a letter from England describing the marriage of John Jacob Astor and Lady Violet, daughter of the Earl of Minto. There was a note of sadness in the charming romance and its happy ending in matrimony. I caught it at the wedding. Perhaps it was because all England was enveloped in a haze of sadness then. At any rate, the young bridegroom hurried away to his regiment. Now he is here in New York and with one leg gone. He and his wife arrived the other day.

He has served his two countries, America and England, and he bears the marks of it on his shattered, weakened body. But he looks happy, and so does Lady Violet. There is a certain superb elation from doing one's part and passing through the worst that can ever happen. With this memory serenely back of that they have come over to enjoy a belated honeymoon. They arrived on the Olympic and will remain for several months. John Jacob Astor is a cousin of Vincent Astor.

James L. Breese Weds.

Romance is sparkling in this brisk February air. Last week a marriage took place which made even old Trinity stop, look, and listen—although romance to it is something of a stock in trade, of a material whose warp and woof are interesting only for weaving into something more useful and lasting, more plain but durable, which constitutes the bulwark of the nation, the thing on which it is based and for which it fights.

Have you all heard of the famous pie girl dinner given by James L. Breeze in 1895? Of course, you do not remember it from that date—dear me, no! Nobody of fighting age can remember, first hand, incidents that far back. But the story has been taken out, dusted, and employed by raconteurs for one occasion and another, something like every four years since. Anyway, the author of that pie dinner got married last week at old Trinity. He is 64 and his bride, who was Miss Grace Lucille Momand, is 24. His first wife has been dead for two years. He met his bride at the home of her mother, Mrs. Ragland Momand, on Long island five years ago. One of his sons, Lieut. James Breeze, acted as his father's best man, and another son, Lieut. Sidney Breeze, was an usher. Fashionable folk flocked to the wedding. The bride wore dark blue charmeuse embroidered in oriental beads and a small blue hat, and she carried orchids and orange blossoms.

Mr. Breeze is rated at several millions by the financial directories. He has one of the most gorgeous studio apartments in New York, where he and his bride will live when they return from their six weeks' wedding trip.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT

INSTALLMENT XLI.

[Copyright: 1919: By the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

IN New York state, United States Senator Platt was the absolute boss of the Republican party. "Big business" was back of him; yet at the time this, the most important element in his strength, was only imperfectly understood. It was not until I was elected governor that I myself came to understand it. We were still accustomed to talking of the "machine" as if it were something merely political, with which business had nothing to do. Senator Platt did not use his political position to advance his private fortunes—therein differing absolutely from many other political bosses. He lived in hotels and had few extravagant tastes. Indeed, I could not find that he had any tastes at all except for politics, and on rare occasions for a very dry theology wholly divorced from moral implications.

But big business men contributed to him large sums of money, which enabled him to keep his grip on the machine and secured for them the help of the machine if they were threatened with adverse legislation. The contributions were given in the guise of contributions for campaign purposes, of money for the good of the party; when the money was contributed there was rarely talk of specific favors in return.

It was simply put into Mr. Platt's hands and treated by him as in the campaign chest. Then he distributed it in the districts where it was most needed by the candidates and organization leaders.

Ordinarily no pledge was required from the latter to the bosses, any more than it was required by the business men from Mr. Platt or his lieutenants. No pledge was needed. It was all a "gentleman's understanding." As the senator once said to me, if a man's character was such that it was necessary to get a promise from him, it was clear proof that his character was such that the promise would not be worth anything after it was made.

Virtues in Wrong Place.

It must not be forgotten that some of the worst practices of the machine in dealings of this kind represented merely virtues in the wrong place, virtues wrenched out of proper relation to their surroundings. A man in a doubtful district might win only because of the help Mr. Platt gave him; he might be a decent young fellow without money enough to finance his own campaign, who was able to finance it only because Platt of his own accord found out or was apprised of his need and advanced the money. Such a man felt grateful, and, because of his good qualities, joined with the purely sordid and corrupt heelers and crooked politicians to become part of the Platt machine.

In his turn Mr. Platt was recognized by the business men, the big contributors, as an honorable man; not only a man of his word, but a man who, whenever he received a favor, could be trusted to do his best to repay it on any occasion that arose. I believe that usually the contributors, and the recipient, sincerely felt that the transaction was proper and subserved the cause of good politics and good business; and, indeed, as regards the major part of the contributions, it is probable that this was the fact, and that the only criticism that could properly be made about the contributions was that they were not made with publicity—and at that time neither the parties nor the public had any realization that publicity was necessary, or any adequate understanding of the dangers of the "invisible empire" which throve by what was done in secrecy.

Many, probably most, of the contributors of this type never wished anything personal in exchange for their contributions, and made them with sincere patriotism, desiring in return only that the government should be conducted on a proper basis. Unfortunately, it was in practice exceedingly difficult to distinguish these men from the others who contributed big sums to the various party bosses with the expectation of gaining concrete and personal advantages (in which the bosses shared) at the expense of the general public. It was very hard to draw the line between these two types of contributions.

Contributions of Corporations.

There was but one kind of money contribution as to which it seemed to me absolutely impossible for either the contributor or the recipient to disguise to themselves the evil meaning of the contribution. This was where a big corporation contributed to both political parties. I knew of one such case where in a state campaign a big corporation which had many dealings with public officials frankly contributed in the neighborhood of a hundred thousand dollars to one campaign fund and $50,000 to the campaign fund of the other side—and, I believe, made some further substantial contributions in the same ratio of $2 to one side for every $1 given to the other.

The contributors were Democrats, and the big contributions went to the Democratic managers. The Republican was elected, and after his election, when a matter came up affecting the company, in which its interests were hostile to those of the general public, the successful candidate, then holding a high state office, was approached by his campaign managers and the situation put frankly before him. He was less disturbed than astonished, and remarked, "Why, I thought So-and-so and his associates were Democrats and subscribed to the Democratic campaign fund." "So they did," was the answer; "they subscribed to them twice as much as they subscribed to us, but if they had had any idea that you intended doing what you now say you will do, they would have subscribed it all to the other side, and more too."

The state official in his turn answered that he was very sorry if any one had subscribed under a misapprehension, that it was no fault of his, for he had stated definitely and clearly his position, that he, of course, had no money wherewith himself to return what without his knowledge had been contributed, and that all he could say was that any man who had subscribed to his campaign fund under the impression that the receipt of the subscription would be a bar to the performance of public duty was sadly mistaken.

The control by Mr. Platt and his lieutenants over the organization was well nigh complete. There were splits among the bosses, and insurgent movements now and then, but the ordinary citizens had no control over the political machinery except in a very few districts. There were, however, plenty of good men in politics, men who either came from districts where there was popular control, or who represented a genuine aspiration towards good citizenship on the part of some boss or group of bosses, or else who had been nominated frankly for reasons of expediency by bosses whose attitude towards good citizenship was at best one of Gallio-like indifference.

At the time when I was nominated for governor, as later when Mr. Hughes was nominated and renominated for governor, there was no possibility of securing the nomination unless the bosses permitted it. In each case the bosses, the machine leaders, took a man for whom they did not care because he was the only man with whom they could win. In the case of Mr. Hughes there was, of course, also the fact of pressure from the national administration. But the bosses were never overcome in a fair fight, when they had made up their minds to fight, until the Saratoga convention in 1910, when Mr. Stimson was nominated for governor.

Senator Platt's Politics.

Senator Platt had the same inborn capacity for the kind of politics which he liked that many big Wall street men have shown for not wholly dissimilar types of finance. It was his chief interest, and he applied himself to it unremittingly. He handled his private business successfully, but it was politics in which he was absorbed, and he concerned himself therewith every day in the year. He had built up an excellent system of organization, and the necessary funds came from corporations and men of wealth who contributed as I have described above.

The majority of the men with a natural capacity for organization leadership of the type which has generally been prevalent in New York politics turned to Senator Platt as their natural chief and helped build up the organization, until under his leadership it became more powerful and in a position of greater control than any other Republican machine in the country, excepting in Pennsylvania. The Democratic machines in some of the big cities, as in New York and Boston, and the country Democratic machine of New York under David B. Hill, were probably even more efficient, representing an even more complete mastery by the bosses and an even greater degree of drilled obedience among the henchmen.

It would be an entire mistake to suppose that Mr. Platt's lieutenants were either all bad men or all influenced by unworthy motives. He was constantly doing favors for men. He had won the gratitude of many good men. In the country districts especially there were many places where his machine included the majority of the best citizens, the leading and substantial citizens, among the inhabitants. Some of his strongest and most efficient lieutenants were disinterested men of high character.

There had always been a good deal of opposition to Mr. Platt and the machine, but the leadership of this opposition was apt to be found only among those whom Abraham Lincoln called the "silk stockings," and much of it excited almost as much derision among the plain people as the machine itself excited anger or dislike. Very many of Mr. Platt's opponents really disliked him and his methods, for esthetic rather than for moral reasons, and the bulk of the people half-consciously felt this and refused to submit to their leadership.

The men who opposed him in this manner were good citizens according to their lights, prominent in the social clubs and in philanthropic circles, men of means and often men of business standing. They disliked coarse and vulgar politicians, and they sincerely reprobated all the shortcomings that were recognized by, and were offensive to, people of their own caste. They had not the slightest understanding of the needs, interests, ways of thought, and convictions of the average small man, and the small man felt this, although he could not express it, and sensed that they were really not concerned with his welfare, and that they did not offer him anything materially better from his point of view than the machine.

Reformers' Mistakes.

When reformers of this type attempted to oppose Mr. Platt, they usually put up either some rather inefficient, well meaning person, who bathed every day, and didn't steal, but whose only good point was "respectability," and who knew nothing of the great fundamental questions looming before us; or else they put up some big business man or corporation lawyer who was wedded to the gross wrong and injustice of our economic system, and who neither by personality nor by program gave the ordinary plain people any belief that there was promise of vital good to them in the change. The correctness of their view was proved by the fact that as soon as fundamental economic and social reforms were at stake the esthetic, as distinguished from the genuinely moral, reformers, for the most part sided with the bosses against the people.

When I became governor the conscience of the people was in no way or shape aroused, as it has since become roused. The people accepted and practiced in a matter of course way as quite proper things which they would not now otlerate. They had no definite and clearly outlined conception of what they wished in the way of reform. They on the whole tolerated, and indeed approved of, the machine; and there had been no development on any considerable scale of reformers with the vision to see what the needs of the people were, and the high purpose sanely to achieve what was necessary in order to meet these needs. I knew both the machine and the silk stocking reformers fairly well, from many years' close association with them.

The machine as such had no ideals at all, although many of the men composing it did have. On the other hand, the ideals of very many of the silk stocking reformers did not relate to the questions of real and vital interest to our people; and, singularly enough, in international matters, these same silk stockings were no more to be trusted than the average ignorant demagogue or shortsighted spoils politicians. I felt that these men would be broken reeds to which to trust in any vital contest for betterment of social and industrial conditions.

Way He Beat Bosses.

I had neither the training nor the capacity that would have enabled me to match Mr. Platt and his machine people on their own ground. Nor did I believe that the effort to build up a machine of my own under the then existing conditions would meet the needs of the situation so far as the people were concerned. I therefore made no effort to create a machine of my own, and consistently adopted the plan of going over the heads of the men holding public office and of the men in control of the organization, and appealing directly to the people behind them. The machine, for instance, had a more or less strong control over the great bulk of the members of the state legislature; but in the last resort the people behind these legislators had a still greater control over them.

I made up my mind that the only way I could beat the bosses whenever the need to do so arose (and unless there was such need I did not wish to try) was, not by attempting to manipulate the machinery, and not by trusting merely to the professional reformers, but by making my appeal as directly and as emphatically as I knew how to the mass of voters themselves, to the people, to the men who if waked up would be able to impose their will on their representatives. My success depended upon getting the people in the different districts to look at matters in my way, and getting them to take such an active interest in affairs as to enable them to exercise control over their representatives.

There were a few of the senators and assemblymen whom I could reach by seeing them personally and putting before them my arguments; but most of them were too much under the control of the machine for me to shake them loose unless they knew that the people were actively behind me. In making my appeal to the people as a whole I was dealing with an entirely different constituency from that which, especially in the big cities, liked to think of itself as the "better element," the particular exponent of reform and good citizenship.

I was dealing with shrewd, hard headed, kindly men and women, chiefly concerned with the absorbing work of earning their own living, and impatient of fads, who had grown to feel that the associations with the word "reformer" were not much better than the associations with the word "politician." I had to convince these men and women of my good faith and, moreover, of my common sense and efficiency. They were most of them strong partisans, and an outrage had to be very real and very great to shake them even partially loose from their party affiliations.

Moreover, they took little interest in any fight of mere personalities. They were not influenced in the least by the silk stocking reform view of Mr. Platt. I knew that if they were persuaded that I was engaged in a mere faction fight against him, that it was a mere issue between his ambition and mine, they would at once become indifferent and my fight would be lost.

Method of Attack.

But I felt that I could count on their support wherever I could show them that the fight was not made just for the sake of the row, that it was not made merely as a factional contest against Senator Platt and the organization, but was waged from a sense of duty for real and tangible causes, such as the promotion of governmental efficiency and honesty and forcing powerful moneyed men to take the proper attitude toward the community at large. They stood by me when I insisted upon having the canal department, the insurance department, and the various departments of the state government run with efficiency and honesty; they stood by me when I insisted upon making wealthy men who owned franchises pay the state what they properly ought to pay; they stood by me when, in connection with the strikes on the Croton aqueduct and in Buffalo, I promptly used the military power of the state to put a step to rioting and violence.

In the latter case my chief opponents and critics were local politicians who were truckling to the labor vote; but in all cases coming under the first two categories I had serious trouble with the state leaders of the machine. I always did my best, in good faith, to get Mr. Platt and the other heads of the machine to accept my views and to convince them, by repeated private conversations, that I was right. I never wantonly antagonized or humiliated them. I did not wish to humiliate them or to seem victorious over them; what I wished was to secure the things that I thought it essential to the men and women of the state to secure. If I could finally persuade them to support me, well and good; in such case I continued to work with them in the friendliest manner.

If, after repeated and persistent effort, I failed to get them to support me, then I made a fair fight in the open, and in a majority of cases I carried my point and succeeded in getting through the legislation which I wished. In theory the executive has nothing to do with legislation. In practice, as things now are, the executive is, or ought to be, peculiarly representative of the people as a whole.

As often as not the action of the executive offers the only means by which the people can get the legislation they demand and ought to have. Therefore a good executive under the present conditions of American political life must take a very active interest in getting the right kind of legislation, in addition to performing his executive duties with an eye single to the public welfare. More than half of my work as governor was in the direction of getting needed and important legislation. I accomplished this only by arousing the people and riveting their attention on what was done.

"The Overeas Revue" is a rollicking, musical satire on the war humors of American "gobs" and "doughboys" in France. Fresh from long entertainment service in American camps, trenches and seaports in Europe, Miss Brice and Mr. Morrissey have packed their unique musical comedy with the true spirit, the convulsive comedy and uproarious perplexities of the boys "overseas."

CANADA'S SITUATION

by Frank Maitland

IT was under the shadow of the sudden death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that Canada's thirteenth parliament met in its second session on Feb. 20. For forty-five years he had been a notable figure in Canadian parliaments, for thirty-two years the leader of his party, for fifteen years prime minister. He was one of the few surviving links with the brilliant past, with the era when Sir John Macdonald was premier. His sudden death marks definitely the end of an old era. Also, as will be noted later, it renders still more uncertain the already very uncertain political situation in Canada.

Sir Robert Borden, prime minister and father of the union government idea, was also among the missing at the opening of this session. He is in Paris attending the peace conference. In his absence Sir Thomas White, the minister of finance, is acting premier and leader of the government in the house of commons. Whether or not Sir Robert Borden can return to Canada before the close of the session is uncertain. The union government experiment in Canada is his own special achievement and undoubtedly his absence will seriously weaken the administration during a difficult session. True, the government has an overwhelming majority, but the majority is composed of many conflicting elements.

"ENGLAND does not love coalitions," said a famous British statesman many years ago; and the course of British political history has established the truth of the saying. With equal justification it might be said that Canada does not love coalitions. They have been few and short lived in Canadian political history, and for that reason the political prophets have predicted from the first that there would be a speedy return in the dominion to the old party lines that were so closely drawn in the days before the war.

But England, despite her proverbial dislike of coalitions, has indorsed in overwhelming fashion the union government of David Lloyd George; and there are substantial reasons for believing that Canada will continue to support the coalition headed by Sir Robert Borden. Up to the day of his death it was well understood the most substantial of these reasons was Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself. By his opposition in 1917 to the policy of the selective draft, his alliance with, or tolerance of, the extremist element among the French Canadians, he had wrecked the historic Liberal party and lost the confidence of influential elements without whose support victory in elections would have been impossible for him. His death leaves the Liberal party in a state of chaos from which it will require time to emerge.

Reorganization under Sir Wilfrid's leadership was a practical impossibility; it is likely to be a slow process under a new leader who will need some time to acquire the confidence of the country. For that reason, in spite of many inherent weaknesses, it is probable that the union government will be able to hold together for some time yet, and, if it goes to the country in an election, to retain the support of a good majority of the voters.

LONG before the echoes of the cheering had died away on armistice day the old time partisans were busily engaged in making trouble for the government. On the very night of Nov. 11 a political meeting was held in Toronto at which a Conservative supporter of Sir Robert Borden in the house of commons attacked the union government and called upon the premier to form a new administration on straight party lines. The Hon. Robert Rogers, a wily politician, who was one of the most influential members of the late Conservative administration, had to make way for a Liberal when union government was formed. Naturally he has never been in love with the union government plan. It is not unnatural that he should attempt to lead a revolt of straight Conservatives against the coalition government. Wily politician that he is, he must realize now that his efforts have met with little success. He has been unable to secure the support of a single Conservative of outstanding prominence.

It is from the provinces west of the great lakes that the opponents of union government hope for accession of strength. Sir Robert Borden is a protectionist. Sentiment in the west is overwhelmingly strong for a greatly reduced tariff, if not for practically free trade. Sir Wilfrid had only two supporters from the western half of Canada, but the great majority of the western members supporting Sir Robert Borden are opposed to his views on the tariff.

When union government was formed in 1917 it was agreed that the tariff question should be kept out of politics. For the duration of the war there was to be no disturbance of the tariff. After the war it would be one of the most important issues, but protectionists and free traders agreed to forget their differences in order that they might unite their forces in support of a vigorous win the war policy. On that understanding several of the leaders of the grain growers' associations in the western provinces contested and carried constituencies as supporters of Sir Robert Borden. One of these men is a member of the government.

NOW, the grain growers' associations are very powerful in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. Nowhere else in the world are there to be found organizations of farmers so strong and so influential. These associations are clamoring for sweeping and immediate reductions in the tariff. Few of the western members of the house of commons can safely antagonize the grain growers, and the western members hold the balance of power in the house.

The west wants sweeping reductions in the tariff. It has few important industries to be adversely affected. The industrial east wants tariff stability. Always strongly protectionist in sentiment, it is especially afraid of tariff changes during the critical times of reconstruction. There is considerable unemployment now owing to the cancellation of war orders. The east believes that tariff tinkering would mean real disaster. The eastern Liberals are not free traders, although they would scorn to be classed as protectionists. Their influence prevented the Laurier administration from making any substantial reductions in the tariff in the years between 1896 and 1911. For that reason the western radicals put little confidence in eastern expressions of sympathy with their views.

The best informed opinion in Canada is that the government will hold its following during the coming session by making some important concessions to the free trade sentiment of the west. It is expected that the duties on agricultural implements will be greatly reduced, if not removed entirely. It is the duty on tractors and implements of which the grain grower complains the most. It is believed that substantial reduction or removal of these duties will prevent serious trouble.

Upon the whole, the record of the union government is good. It accomplished the one all-important task for which it was elected. It secured the necessary reinforcements for the Canadian army by rigorous enforcement of the conscription law. In doing this it made many enemies, but it also earned the approval of the country at large.

MEMORIES

By Sapper W. H. Pitcher

[From the English Review.]

I plucked the roses from her cheeks
And planted them in May,
I culled the pansies from her eyes
And hid the blooms away.
And now she wonders why I love
The month that gave them birth,
And gather diadems for her
When May is on the earth.

I took the profile of her face
And bound it in a book,
And in that volume I embalmed
The beauty of each look.
And every smile and every frown
I consecrate, for then
I take the perfume of her breath
To fill the flowing pen.

I told my story to a flower
That sheltered in a dell,
It nestled by a laughing stream,
Whose tinkling waters fell.
And every May it comes again,
Just in the self-same place,
And opens as it listens to
The story of her face.

SING AND GROW VOICELESS

By James Huneker

SING and grow voiceless! Why not? We know of a dozen methods that are guaranteed to ruin even a Rose Ponselle vocal equipment in thirty lessons by mail. Better known as absent treatment. The editor of this department—temporarily—has had over forty years' experience in the fair land of song, a scarred battlefield strewn with the shards and wrecks of beautiful voices and high hopes. In no sphere of music are there so many sharks, cormorants, swindlers, humbugs, criminals, as in the ranks of vocal teaching—so-called. The hard earned, carefully saved money of parents is extorted from victims, who usually return home with health impaired, voices gone, even worse. It is pitiful. It is cruel. What are you going to do about it?

The profession of medicine is protected. Why not music? Malpractice is swiftly punished. Why not lock up the rascals who ruin a voice and get money under false pretenses? No, chewing gum in public is of far more importance to people. Now a national neurosis, it will soon be elevated to the dignity of a fine art. If we had our way we should drive every one of these vocal parasites who infest the temple of music into the swamp of public odium.

Now, having worked off my chronic bad humor, let us look at the matter through the spectacles of the absurd. There is a comic side to everything, from a volcano to a prohibitionist. The fake singing teachers are as funny as their fakery is perniciolus.

I am reminded of all the pamphlets from "How to Be Happy Though Divorced" to "Starve and Grow Fat" when I reaed the pompous pronouncements of certain voice builders. I confess that I am not an expert in vocal hygiene, and I have heard all the great men and women for the last half century who have made this drab, dreary planet worth living on with their beautiful voices. And that is a brevet of taste. Standards. Without standards we critically perish, says, in effect, Mr. Brownell.

I also confess that I don't know a resonator from a refrigerator, or the difference between a lynx and a larynx. Both growl, I believe, if you rub them the wrong way. I have not the science of Henderson or Holbrook Curtis. But I do know when a singer slathers her phrases or sings above or below pitch—and there are more who sing sharp than you think. The main thing is that I criticize by ear, not with a laryngoscope or a mirror to peep at the breath control.

HERBERT WITHERSPOON, not unknown to fame as an operatic artist and concert singer, summed up for me the situation in a phrase.' 'Opera singers open their mouths too wide." Hence screaming and bawling which nearly splits sensitive ears. That the public likes shouting on top tones is only evidence of the public's appalling taste. Noise, noise, noise! We worship noise in America. Another neurosis. Noise the ultimate vulgarity. At last the subway voice has penetrated our opera houses; charmless, voiceless, vicious. The three dramatic unities in the modern theater have resolved themselves into legs, glitter, buncombe. On the lyric stage the chief unit is yelling. No wonder they sing and grow voiceless.

Purdon Robinson, himself a concert singer of note, in the course of an instructive lecture recently, remarked: "My own opinion, backed by thirty years of singing and teaching, has resulted in the belief that a mechanical method makes a mechanical singer"; and "after the voice has been placed and one has it under control, forget it when singing. Try to get at the composer's meaning, realizing that words in themselves mean little, and that notes in music are simply the symbols by which musical ideas are indicated." For the average vocalist words are not symbols but cymbals. Mr. Robinson's words are golden.

Years ago (Do sit still a moment, this is not a spun out story of my life!) a young woman consulted me about a vocal master. She was a choir singer from the remote south, her parents poor as brewery mice—to be—and she thought she had a remarkable voice. I say "thought." Care killed a cat. Thought never slew a larynx. I played a hymn tune. She sang. I shuddered, but was relieved when she told me that her name was Elvina Crow. After all, there is something to be said for Prof. Slawkenbergius and his theory of names as set forth by the veracious Rev. Laurence Sterne. I suggested that if she decided on a career she change her name to "Sgallinacciare," which appropriately enough means to crow; also a faulty method of singing, "Signorina Sgallinacciare!" How that would ring in the credulous ears of the dear old deluded public, which, Hamletlike, doesn't know a hawk from a handsaw, or, if you prefer, a hernshaw. Shriek and grow rich! Nothing else matters but "mazuma" in the box office of the Seven Deadly Arts.

IT must have been a month after our interview that Miss Crow again visited me. I was at the time assistant professor of applied paleontology, and mightily interested in the psychic life of micro-organisms, so naturally singers came first on the list. Into my large and sympathetic tympani Elvina poured a tale, not of woe, but of thrilling truths. This is not the first time I have related it, yet it improves on repetition, just because of its probability. Not discouraged by my slurring, even portamento, criticism of her voice, the lone girl bravely started to find out the truth herself; the real test of character. She said that her first experience was in the studio of a maestro. She had a letter to him which he barely read. In a rich Italian brogue he bade her be seated. He wore a velvet jacket. He was bald. He smoked cigarets. His type was perfect.

"I giva da lessen in fiva minuta," he explained, and then scowled at a tall girl who faced a mirror in a guilty manner as her eyes computed the possible value of the newcomer's gown.

"Must I sit here like a fool?" the professor angrily demanded. His pupil opened his mouth. Elvinia eagerly listened. But no sound escaped the lips of the other girl. She gazed into the mirror and mouthed and grimaced, and almost, though not quite, formed words. "Faster," cried the teacher at the keyboard. The student's lips moved like a praying mill; she clicked her teeth castanet fashion; and at last with a wild bang on the keyboard the voiceless aria ended.

The maestro knitted his dyed eyebrows. "Vara fair, not presto assai. You sing without expression. You are too cold—what shall I call it?" A husky voice asked: "Shall I try it over again?" "Dio mio! girl, how dare you speak after singing such a difficult aria from Rossini's 'Cinderella'? Your vocal pores are open, you perspire with your lungs—pouf! You die of the inflammatus by, by"—he impatiently pulled at his large nose. "'The Inflammatus' by Rossini, you mean!" interposed Elvina. "How? No, no, ah! of pneumonia, that's it." And he bustled from the instrument. Throwing an old bearskin rug over his speechless singer, he led her to a chair, admonishing her. "Now perspire." She coughed in a terrifying way while the maestro imperturbably explained his method to Elvina. He did not permit his pupils to open their mouths for a year, during which time he put them through a severe throat and lung drill.

All songs were given in vocal miming with due facial expression, and the ventriloquist was adduced as the highest type of masterly vocal control, for a ventriloquist can sing in his stomach without moving a muscle of his face. Think of Fred Stone and his "Very Good Eddie." The signor became eloquent. Had the young Miss Elvina—Corpo di Baccho! what a pretty name!—had she a little money for tuition? One thousand dollars. Dirt cheap. A second Patti she would become for the money. Sign a contract with him for ten years. Then the movies for a year or so that her stage nervousness would wear off, then vaudeville, et puis done—grand opera. A ravishing prospect. He rolled his eyes estactically as he took Elvina's $10 bill. She escaped. To her taste the meothed seemed a trifle too swift.

SHE found Mlle. Pinson in her apartment, small, stuffy, crowded with rickety furniture, books, china, music, even a parrot. The lady was drinking chocolate. "V'la, mamselle! I've purchased a frugal meal, is it not? I diet myself as carefully as in the days when I was leading soprano at the grand opera. Helas! those miserable days when I was so happy. O Paris! Now 'la,' mamselle. No, no, louder, please. C'est bon. You must know that when you sing correctly the vibrations travel to the kneecaps. I test them and know exactly if the tone is formed naturally or not. My vibratory system is the only true one. Yes, twenty dollars will be enough for this time. You have a sweet voice, my dear, and I'll make a great singer of you in five years."

Elvina faintly asked: "When do I begin on songs?" "What! Songs? Ah! those Americans, they are always in a hurry, what you call get rich in a week! My child, you can't hurry art. Bon soir, mamselle Tomorrow at nine, precisely, and I'll test your kneecaps. Take one of my pamphlets. Vibration, vibration, vibration." The parrot opened its beak: "Vibration, vibration, vibration. I'm in for life, cherie. Take me out of jail, cherie." Elvina sat in a Madison avenue tram and read the booklet of Mlle. Mimi Pinson, entitled "Hygiene for Voiceless Singers." Numerous rules and "Don't," ending with, "Don't marry. Husbands of opera singers always collect their wives' salaries. Vibrate when you breathe. You may achieve fame and happiness. Think blue! It is the color of hope. Vogue la galère."

"This is becoming monotonous," said Elvira aloud, and gritting her teeth she packed her duds and returned to her home town with only $1.25 in her pocket. However, family affection, above all family flapjacks, restored her jarred nerves to their normal pitch. From time to time she sends me programs of concerts in which she is described: "Our native songbird, Elvina, Prima Donna Dissoluta." As "Esther Beautiful Queen" (newly reorchestrated by Stravinsky) she made a "real hit." She may have exaggerated a little in her confidences, but I can personally vouch for the heavy weights on pupils' chests to promote breathlessness. There was advocated such a vocal system two or three decades ago in New York. Sing and grow voiceless! Basta!

"Where costuming is held an art"

Foretelling the fashions of Spring

The exquisite, the exclusive,, the authentic, stunningly visualized in these earliest exemplars of a better, brighter mode—in diversity surpassing expectations.

Preliminary exhibit of springtime apparel

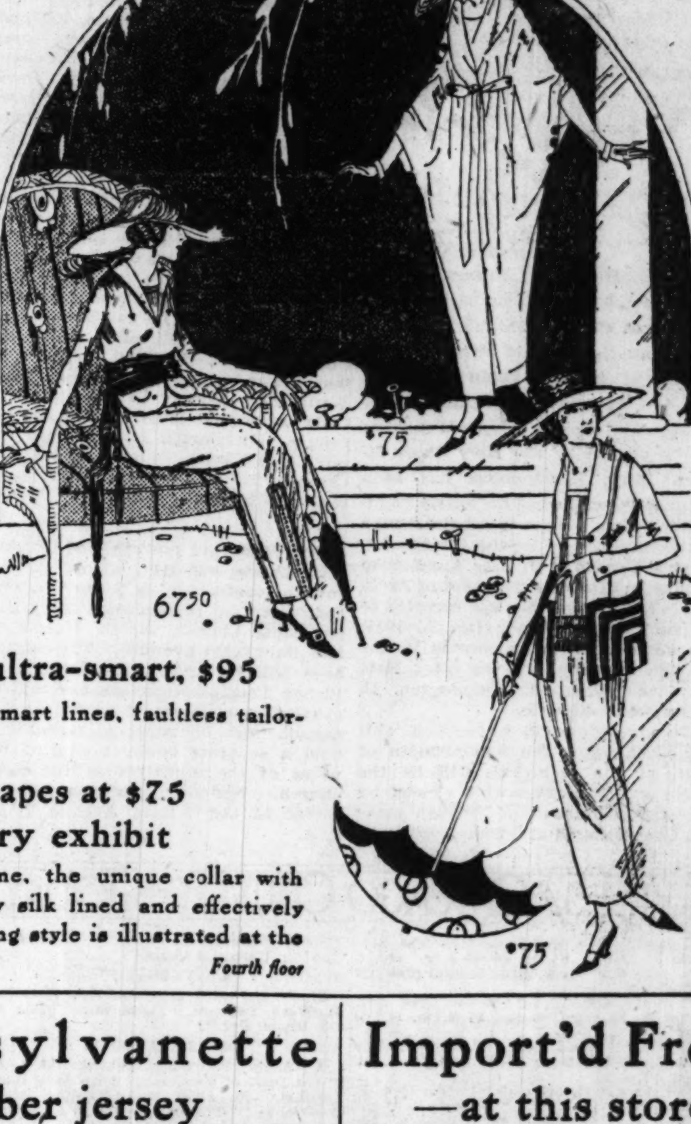
Placing principal emphasis upon copies and modified reproductions of the freshest, most inspiring fashions from the renowned couturieres of Paris and America.

Particularizing suits of rich fabrics distinguished by novel lines and striking vest innovations.

Capes and coat-wraps are decidedly vogue, and characterized by extraordinary gracefulness.

Strikingly smart poiret twill suits at $75

Pictured at the lower right: with effectively braided jacket, pussy willow lined; and smart vestee of tricolette, fringe trimmed.



Tricotine suits, ultra-smart, $95

Distinguished by unusually smart lines, faultless tailoring, and vestee of poulette.

New-style capes at $75—preliminary exhibit

Jauntily fashioned of tricotine, the unique collar with overlay of silk; pussy willow silk lined and effectively button trimmed. The stunning style is illustrated at the upper right. Fourth floor

The late coat dresses and tailored frocks are characterized by a distinctly new silhouette, and by infinite variety.

Riding togs, correctly tailored, and in approved designs and fabrics are likewise prominent in this early showing.

The newest of tailored frocks at 67.50

Fashioned of tricotine; the satin girdle and dainty yoke and overcollar of marquisette. Illustrated at the left.

Afternoon frocks, exclusive, $95

An artistically draped skirt of charmeuse combined with bodice of tricolette.

Evora coats, 97.50

Fashioned along the smartest of the new dolman silhouettes, and richly silk lined. Fourth floor.

Introducing sylvanette—a new fiber jersey

—with a chain stitch stripe. High and conservative colors.
3,000 yards of 36-inch black satin messaline at 1.45.
36-inch all silk black chiffon taffeta, special, at 1.45.

1919 foulard silks, 40-inch, at 2.45

Patterns and color combinations new and unique; irregular arrangements on navy grounds, principally.
36-inch plaid silks underpriced at 1.95. Second floor

Import'd French duvetyns—at this store exclusively

No more elegant fabric imaginable for the new-vogue dolmans, capes and gowns—and their scarcity adds to their distinction and desirability.

In preferred colors—and 12.50 yard

French duvetyns in the new reindeer, taupe, victory blue, beaver, hunter's green, castor, African brown, and navy—besides black. Woolen fabric section, second floor

Hats in tune with spring—authentic advance showing

Flower bedecked chapeaux are a Parisian furore—and are most springlike.

Quaint pokes, mushroom brims, watteaus and turbans, in an exquisite harmony of fruit, foliage, flowers and wheat, are fascinating features of our early exposition.

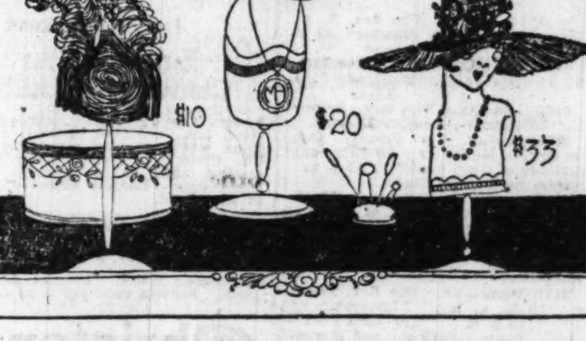
Large dress hats of black tulle —with trimming of glycerine ostrich, ribbon or flowers—the flowers often lying flat on the brim between layers of tulle.



Tailleur model—the watteau

—in jaunty tip-tilted effect. Almost as popular is the bandeau sailor, with novelty ostrich, chenille, velvet or ribbons. Directoire motifs.

Poilu blue, cherry-red

—rust brown and henna impart springtime brightness; there are, besides, rich dark shades, including blacks. Fifth floor

The March sale of hosiery by the box—notable specials

Thru contracts placed months in advance, we are enabled now to announce extraordinary opportunities. The quantities are limited, however—ho more than sufficient to supply this week's demand.

Women's silk lisle hosiery 6 pairs for 1.85

With wide garter hem, and reinforced heels, toes and soles; black or white. Women's silk-lisle hose, full fashioned, with wide garter hem, six prs. 3.75.

Men's reinforced hosiery 6 pairs for 1.50

With fully reinforced heels and toes. March sale "leaders." Men's fiber hose of fine grade: lustrous, silky finish; black only; six pairs for 3.50.

6 prs. lisle hose, 2.20

and 2.75—also men's cotton hose. Silk hosiery, 3 pairs for 2.73 and $4.

Children's ribbed hosiery, 2.20 for box of six pairs

Silk lisle stockings in black or white. Sizes to 8½ at six pairs for 2.20; sizes 9 to 10 at six pairs for 2.70. First floor

Men's Irish linen hdkfs. 35c

3,000 extra quality linen handkerchiefs with ¼-inch or ½-inch hem. At 35c, exceedingly special. First floor.

Japanese crepe, 28c

—a special purchase at less than import cost. A 27-in., hand loomed fabric, for kimonos. Second floor.

39-inch organdies, featured at 75c

All leading shades and white. 39-in. white voile, 25c yard.

Tricot corsets, 3.50

Lace front tricot corsets for medium figures; low top models, lightly boned, and with elastic insert. Fifth floor.

In flesh color or white and all sizes from 21 to 28. The value is exceptional.

Jetum, for dyeing hats, 18c

The ideal coloring fluid for straw hats; available in every desired shade. One-third saving. First floor.

Lutheran Pastor Resigns to Take Southern Church

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. Fitzsimmons

THE REV. C. R. W. KEGLEY will preach today his farewell sermon and celebrate the holy communion as pastor of the Epiphany Lutheran church, Sacramento boulevard and Lexington street. The announcement of his resignation will come as a surprise to the denomination. He will leave soon to take up the pastorate of Holy Trinity Lutheran church, Hickory, N. C., the seat of Lenoir Lutheran college and also a college of the Reformed church.

Pastor Kegley is serving his second term as president of the Northwest conference of the Chicago synod, having previously served a term of three years. He was recently made chairman of the committee on the inner mission work of the Chicago synod. He has been pastor at Epiphany seven and a half years, and has led in the purchase of five lots and the erection of a parish house.

He has had experience as a pastor in the south, having served for seven years St. Matthew's church, Wilmington, N. C., where he erected a church, parsonage, and parish house, and at Bluefields, W. Va., where he organized the United Charities of the coal fields. He and his wife have toured Europe twice and traveled extensively in the United States and Canada.

Judge Charles M. Thompson, Rufus C. Dawes, and A. S. Adams, with Alfred E. Hamill and Louis A. Bowman as alternates, have been appointed members of the executive committee to push the campaign for $600,000 for the Olivet institute. The institute is planning the building of an institutional plant costing in the neighborhood of $400,000, and needs the balance of the fund sought for endowment. Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick has pledged $100,000 toward the fund.

The Rev. L. B. Hastings, since 1910 connected with St. Alban's school, Knoxville, Ill., will preach today at 11 o'clock at the Protestant Episcopal cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, West Washington boulevard and North Peoria street.

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Fitzsimmons is pastor of the Holy Name cathedral of the Roman Catholic church, East Superior and North State streets, where Lenten services will begin this week with Ash Wednesday. Beginning next Sunday at 11 o'clock, a special mission will be opened by the Holy Cross fathers. Mgr. Fitzsimmons has been pastor of the cathedral for nearly twenty-nine years. He was administrator of the archdiocese in the interim between the death of the late Archbishop Quigley and the enthronement of Archbishop Mundelein. He was elevated to the rank of monsignor Dec. 8, 1915. The ceremony was performed in the Chicago cathedral by the Most Rev. Mgr. John Bonzano, Washington, D. C., apostolic delegate.

The ceremonies in connection with Ash Wednesday, the inauguration of Lent, at the cathedral, will be the blessing of the ashes at 9 o'clock by Archbishop Mundelein. Solemn mass will be celebrated at 9 o'clock with the Rev. Joseph Phelan as celebrant. The Very Rev. Dr. F. A. Purcell will preach. The sermon at 8 p. m. will be preached by the Rev. John A. McCarthy. The ashes will be distributed after the mass at 9 a. m., at 3, and after the evening service.

The Lenten services beginning next Sunday will be under the direction of the Very Rev. James French, assisted by the Rev. James Donahue and the Rev. Wendell Corcoran, Holy Cross fathers. The first week will be for women and the second week for men.

The Rev. Louis H. Sandhusen has assumed his duties as pastor of the Auburn Park Congregational church, Seventy-seventh street and Normal avenue. He is a graduate of Columbia university and Union Theological seminary, New York. The last nine months he was in war work.

The First Congregational church of Oak Park will celebrate today the twentieth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. William E. Barton. Dr. Barton was born in Sublette, Ill., and was educated at Berea college and Oberlin Theological seminary. He came to the pastorate of the Oak Park church March 1, 1899, from the Shawmut Congregational church, Boston. Dr. Barton received the degree of doctor of divinity from his alma mater, Berea college, and the degree of doctor of laws from Knox college. He has held many positions of eminence in his denomination and is the author of a long list of books. He was for a period editor in chief of the Advance. The First Congregational church, both as to its edifice and its membership, is among those of first rank in the United States. Dr. Barton will preach this morning an anniversary sermon. Next Wednesday evening at the church a reception will be given to him and his family. Dr. Barton is related to the late Clara Barton, founder of the Red Cross, and is now engaged in writing a history of her great career.

The Methodist ministers of Chicago and suburbs will meet all day tomorrow for conference on "The Work of God" at the Ravenswood Methodist Episcopal church, North Hermitage and Sunnyside avenues. The conference will be under the direction of Bishop Thomas Nicholson and will be in religious preparation for the Lenten season. Mrs. Nicholson is expected to hold a separate conference with the wives of the ministers in the same church. Noonday luncheon will be served at the Wilson Avenue Y. M. C. A.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

MARCH

March.

MARCH is a mirage—a mirage of meadow larks and bluebirds, of grackles and hermit thrush, of hepatica and sanguinaria, of full buds and unfolding leaves. The water runs black by a new fall of snow which whitens the edges of the water course; ice forms a glaze over the dead leaves and is melted by mid-day.

Hens have come out of their inclosures and run the woods; bluejays are in and out of the white oaks; cocks crow in the morning before daylight and crows are calling.

There is a new sense in the air, one of suggestion and intimation and of revelation to come. The full tide of life shows in the willows, the full buds are on the lilac.

There is no outstanding fact but the fact of winter. There is beyond this the mirage of spring, which is March, a suggestion and not a revelation, an intimation of something which will be found but which is not near.

Maples near the sap time and sugaring. The sun comes north and days lengthen. The mirage is more real than the fact. The fact is passing; the mirage is gaining reality. The first meadow lark singing from a snow filled field will turn the intangible beauties of the mirage into reality and the song of the lark is not far away.

"But as I got to know you better I began to recognize your true womanly qualities and just now I came to a full realization of what has been smouldering in my heart—I love you."

"Suffering shades of Laura Jean Libbey!"

"Don't make fun of my love—and you are the only woman in the world for me—and I want—I want you to be my wife."

"What?"

"You heard me and I mean every word of it, too. I ain't a bad fellow at heart—just a little spoilt."

"It all seems like a dream."

"Let me be the light of your life."

"I don't want a light that goes out every night."

"I'll be your steady flame."

"That sounds promising."

"You'll have my presence ever near."

"I hope your presents won't come from the 5 and 10 cent store."

"Nothing like that."

"I wonder if I could really get to like you."

"Yes, mum; I've been married three times."

"I don't mean that kind of fighting."

"Any other kind seems tame by comparison."

"Have you ever earned any money honestly?"

"O, yes, mum; only this morning a man gave me a dime for shooting a dog."

"Was the dog mad?"

"Well, he didn't seem pleased. But, say, I'm working on a great invention. You've heard of milkweed?"

"I grow it in my garden."

"And egg plant?"

"My favorite vegetable."

"Well, if you can keep a secret I don't mind telling you that I'm thinking of grafting milkweed on egg plant."

"And what do you expect to produce?"

"Custard."

OFF COMES CORN IN ONE PIECE

"Gets-It" Leaves Toe as Smooth as the Palm of Your Hand.

There's only one corn remedy in the world that peels corns and calluses off like a banana peel, and that's "Gets-It." For walkers and standers, for shoppers and dancers, there's immediate relief from corn pains, and a quick finish for any corn or callus. "Gets-It" is applied in two or three seconds. There's no work, no fussy plasters, no wrapping of toes. "Gets-It" dries in a second or two. That's all. As easy to use as signing your name. The corn loosens from the true flesh and you peel it right off with your fingers while you wonder at the sight and smile. That's why "Gets-It" is the biggest selling corn-remedy in the world today. Be corn-free at last. "Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, costs but a trifle at any drug store. Manufactured by

No Better Name

When we speak of this enterprise of ours as the JOHN M. SMYTH Store we may truthfully say that we are paying this business its highest possible tribute.

No greater heritage could Mighty or Modern Business covet than the ultra-distinctiveness of a pioneer commencement in the days when a small handful of Chicago Merchants faced the gigantic task of building, for their City, such Commercial Greatness as was to serve as a foundation for a business magnitude of such present enormity.

The JOHN M SMYTH Store is proud of that heritage; it is proud of the policy of integrity and of wholesome fairness that its founder created for it and which we today are so solemnly upholding.

And that is why we continue to grow and to expand each business day. The articles you see advertised are here for your inspection at your convenience and at your leisure. Our prices are not high enough one day to permit of a Sale Price on the morrow—just consistently low, today, tomorrow and back and on through all the yesterdays and morrows we may have known or shall ever know.

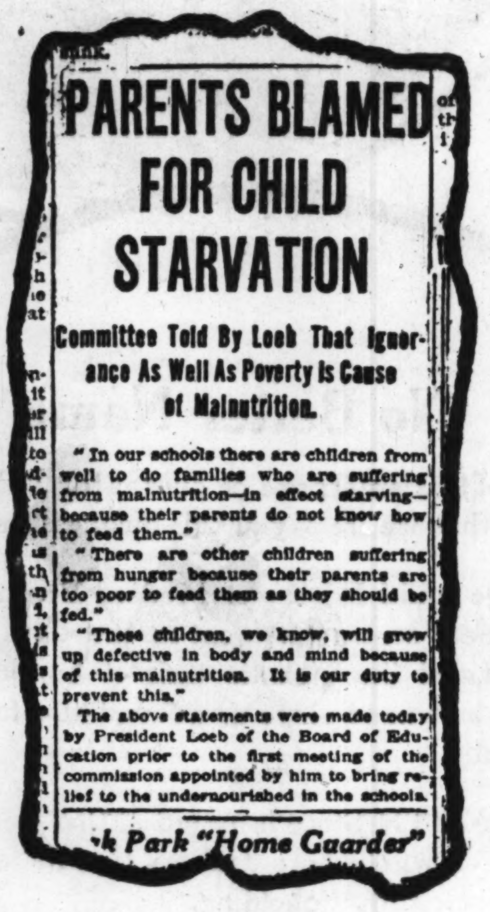
PROTECTOR OF YOUR CHILDREN



PARENTS BLAMED FOR CHILD STARVATION

Committee Told By Loeb That Ignorance As Well As Poverty Is Cause of Malnutrition.

"In our schools there are children from well to do families who are suffering from malnutrition—in effect starving—because their parents do not know how to feed them."

"There are other children suffering from hunger because their parents are too poor to feed them as they should be fed."

"These children, we know, will grow up defective in body and mind because of this malnutrition. It is our duty to prevent this."

The above statements were made today by President Loeb of the Board of Education prior to the first meeting of the commission appointed by him to bring relief to the undernourished in the schools.

k Park "Home Guarder"

The Malnutrition of Children Is the Curse of This Rich Nation

THE MALNUTRITION OF OUR GROWING CHILDREN means the degeneracy of the next generation, and, in consequence, the degeneracy of our posterity.

THERE ARE LITERALLY HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF CHILDREN STARVING IN THIS COUNTRY, and their parents do not know it until the harm is done, a harm which is often irreparable, and is conveyed to posterity.

Ignorance of the laws of the land is no palliation for wrongdoing, nor is ignorance of the laws which govern the proper management of our children, their feeding and educational problems, their mental and physical development.

In Nine Cases Out of Ten Malnutrition Is the Result of Ignorance

Ignorance in the first place of being able to read the "handwriting on the wall," the little symptoms which first appear, such as fretfulness, bad temper, sleeplessness, and other danger signals which so frequently harbinger the actual calamity; and ignorance in the second place of the remedy which lies so near at hand, and is so easy and so simple to apply.

The Rich—as Well as Poor—Have Undernourished Children

It is not alone the poor people of this country who have starving children in their homes—largely by reason of their penury—but those who are well to do, and even the more affluent, in spite of their riches.

It is not, in a word, poverty that is responsible for, nor wealth that can stave off, THE CURSE OF MALNUTRITION.

The Cure for Malnutrition Is the Selection of Correct Nutrition

Malnutrition is just the opposite of nutrition, so that if your child has malnutrition, the simple remedy is nutrition. All you want to know is how to select the right kind of nutrition.

In many foods there is some vital food element lacking. Doctors call these vital elements vitamines, and the absence of them produces malnutrition.

Therefore, choose a food which contains these vital elements in good proportion, and MAKE IT A HABIT, whether your child is sick or well, to give him or her some of this food every day at meal times.

Such a Food Is OVALTINE

It contains the natural vitalizing food elements of Malt, Milk, Eggs and Cocoa, carefully preserved by process of manufacture. And just as the knight with his sword, his armor and his shield is protected against his foes—

So your children will be protected against the foes of their health, the foe not only of malnutrition but of other ailments common to growing children and attributable to the want of proper food.

Send for sample of Ovaltine, which will be mailed on receipt of 5c to cover cost of postage, packing, etc.

Playbills of the Week

OPENINGS.

COLONIAL—The Girl Behind the Gun," a musical comedy of the more pretentious sort—words by the indefatigable Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse; music by Ivan Caryll. It has to do with the war, and the cast of capable entertainers includes Donald Brian, Jack Hazzard, Miss Wilda Bennett, Miss Ada Meade, and John E. Young. First time tonight.

Garrick—"Scandal," a play about the idle rich, made from Cosmo Hamilton's novel of the same title. Its revealment here will be virtually its metropolitan premiere in this country, if that means anything. Charles Cherry and Miss Francine Larrimore have the leading rôles. First time tonight.

Olympic—"Penrod," Booth Tarkington's amusing stories about the eternal small boy, made over for the stage by Edward E. Rose. In his present incarnation Penrod appears as "George B. Jashberm, head detacktif of No. 10," and launches himself, as you may imagine, on a career of amazing adventure. First time tonight.

Princess—"Sleeping Partners," the French comedy by Sacha Guitry, which started the prevailing epidemic of so-called bedroom farces down east. It's said to be better than its imitators. Wallace Eddinger appears in the part played elsewhere by H. B. Warne, with Miss Irene Bordoni as his vis-a-vis. First time tonight.

DRAMA.

Powers'—"Tiger Rose," a smashing melodrama superbly presented by Miss Lenore Ulric and other good players—theatrical makebelieve at its best. Final week.

Blackstone—Miss Patricia Collinge performing delightfully in "Tillie," a footlighting of a popular novel about the Pennsylvania Dutch.

Studebaker—"The Masquerader," notable chiefly for the opportunity it gives Guy Bates Post, a good actor, in the Jekyll-Hyde role around which the play is built.

Woods'—"Business Before Pleasure," another of the dependably funny Potash and Perlmutter comedies. It moves from the Garrick tonight.

Cort—"Old Lady 31," an engaging little play about an old ladies' home, with an interesting cast of veterans. It was to have departed last night, but has been given another week.

Imperial—Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," with the original company.

Wilson Avenue—The North Shore players in "Our Wives."

WORDS AND MUSIC.

Auditorium—"Chu Chin Chow," the most dazzling and opulent spectacle yet fashioned for the stage.

Illinois—"The Better 'Ole," an odd potpourri based on the Bairnsfather war cartoons, with fine acting by De Wolf Hopper in the rôle of Old Bill, the Walrus.

Cohan's Grand—"Going Up," a musical comedy with some of the best music current in the theater.

La Salle—"Oh, Lady! Lady!"—facile music, good dancing, and an uncommonly capable cast of entertainers.

Playhouse—Miss Elizabeth Brice and "The Overseas Revue," a rollicking, irresponsible sort of a show about the doughboy in France. It moves from the Princess tonight.

Victoria—"Odds and Ends."

National—Thurston, the magician.

VAUDEVILLE.

Majestic—Miss Nan Halperin, Miss Nance O'Neill in "The Common Standard," Miss Florenze Tempest, and others.

Palace—Miss Trixie Friganza, Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry, Miss Valerie Bergere et al.

Rialto—"The Revue à la Carte," Sherman, Van, and Hyman, etc.

McVicker's—"O-Hana-San" and the Ja Da trio head the bill.

Great Northern—The Great Northern players "In a Zone," with a program of variety.

BURLESQUE.

Columbia—"Follies of the Day," with Miss Gertrude Hayes, Harry Welsh, and Chester Nelson.

Star and Garter—The Harry Hastings show, with Dan Coleman.

TRAVEL.

Orchestra Hall—Burton Holmes "With the Yanks in France."

IMPENDING JOYS.

March 9—"A Thousand Eyes," with Frank McIntyre, at the Cort.

March 10—Cyril Maude, with Miss Laura Hope Crews and others in C. Haddon Chambers' "The Saving Grace," at Powers'.

Curtain Calls; Miss Collinge; Theater Notes

By Sheppard Butler.

To be continually scribbling notes on one's program is, they tell me, the mark of an amateur at play reviewing. No doubt it is true. The assiduous reporter of fiction, with his plump note book always thrust in the faces of people of importance is an entirely apocryphal character. Good reporters keep their ears open and take as few notes as possible. Presumably good critics should follow the same practice.

Nevertheless, I find this wielding of the refractory pencil an amiable habit. That I seldom read, afterward, what I have written is a matter of no importance. As for that, I seldom can read it, for my observations usually are hopelessly tangled up in a cabaret advertisement or something about a face powder. But they're there, and sometimes belated scrutiny discovers matters of interest.

For example, on a page of a program from the Blackstone I find this all but indecipherable scrawl:

"I like the way Miss Collinge takes her bows."

A frivolous comment, doubtless, and one that further reveals me as not of the elect in matters of the theater. The curtain call, you must know, is a grave matter in stageland—not a thing to be taken lightly. Mostly the aristocrats among the players accept your plaudits in character, maintaining the tragic mask if turgid matters have been afoot in the play, and so on. Or, if not that, they greet you with a mien of noncommittal hauteur. It's quite the thing to do. Mr. Belasco gave you an example of the first method in the shifting tableaux on which the curtain rose and fell in "Tiger Rose." As for the second, you need only recall the ineffable dignity of Mr. Sother's bows, or the courtly urbanity of Mr. Drew's.

Well, these traditions trouble Miss Collinge not at all, newly invested though she be with the responsibilities of stardom. Pompousness and play-acting alike are flung to the winds when the scene is over and the curtain slides down. If you call her back she comes with a tickled little grin, wrinkles up her nose like a schoolgirl, and bobs a quick, shy curtsy. If it's affected it's consummate artistry. If it's spontaneous (as I think it is) it's delightful.

Even after Tillie's forlorn little tragedy, half way through the play, it is the same. The debonair hero, a brief sojourner in the staid Pennsylvania Dutch community, has stolen her heart. After the manner of debonair heroes everywhere, he departs abruptly, without a word of explanation. Of course, there is a quite noble and creditable reason, but Tillie doesn't know it, and she creeps away, a piteous, broken figure of woe unutterable. It is one of the moments when you look for that extra clean handkerchief and assure your neighbor you're not crying at all, but have something in your eye.

After that you might expect at least an attitude of distinguished exhaustion. The scene is a poignant one as Miss Collinge plays it, and a bit of temperamental moodiness would be entirely in the picture.

Do you get it? Not on your life. Back she comes with the same quick smile, Tillie's sorrows completely forgotten, bobbing her head at you as if to say: "That wasn't any heartbroken girl at all. It was just me, play-acting. Did I fool you? I'm so pleased—and isn't it fun!"

A new kind of a star, I should say, and a refreshing one. The manner of taking a curtain call may not be worth half a column of comment—probably isn't—but the bringing of such unquenchable spirits to the bedraggled and shopworn world of the theater is no trivial thing. It's an event, and Miss Collinge will bear watching.

Trust a returned soldier to catch a thing if it is wrong. One of them, the other night, detected a most amazing reversal of the laws of physics in "The Better 'Ole." In the trench scene, supposedly a glimpse of war as it is—or was—you hear now and then a resounding shell explosion, followed a few seconds later by a flare of light against the canvas sky in the background. It is all most thrilling, until you ponder the fact that light mostly travels faster than sound and that one usually sees a flare before hearing the sound that went with it.

One wonders what sort of a war produced so surprising an effect. "It wasn't this man's war," my doughboy informant assures me.

It is a bit too bad that Mr. Hopper should have been given so inept a background as has been provided for his rich characterization of Old Bill, the walrus. The matter of the flare, of course, would be insignificant were it not an indication of the way the whole poduction has been hurriedly put together. The rôles of the other two Bairnsfather characters, Alf and Bert, are capitally played, but the rest of the company, with one or two exceptions, and the general scheme of things smack more of a barnstorming organization than of what is due our most distinguished comedian.

That the play is rare entertainment in spite of this is all the more to Hopper's—and Bairnsfather's—credit.

The first birthday of the Woods theater will be celebrated with some sort of impressive doings on March 11. Montague Glass is expected to be here and the event will mark the 2,500th performance of Barney Bernard as Abe Potash and Alexander Carr's 1,653d as Mawruss Perlmutter.

Oliver Morosco, it seems, did not succeed in inducing William H. Crane to come to Chicago as the central figure in the dramatization of the "Cappy Ricks" stories. The plan now is to bring the company headed by William Courtenay and Tom Wise to our midst in August.

Of Cosmo Hamilton, the novelist and author of "Scandal," which is to be revealed at the Garrick tonight, it may not be generally known that he is a brother of Philip Hamilton Gibbs, whose name has appeared over some of the most stirring dispatches about the war sent to THE TRIBUNE from the western front. Gibbs is the family name, but Hamilton was legally obliged to adopt his mother's surname under the inheritance laws of Great Britain. He wrote "Scandal" while traveling from one American city to another, doing propaganda work to which he had been assigned after being wounded in more active service. The dramatization of the novel also was made in this country, but was first presented in London by Arthur Bourchier, who, before that, had originated the rôle of Old Bill in the English production of "The Better 'Ole."

Leon Errol, notable chiefly for his impersonation of the comic inebriate, has anticipated the coming of July 1 and the water wagon. He has gone to England. Walter C. Kelly, the "Virginia judge" monologuist, proposes to follow him soon.

Bolshevism has invaded the theater, as might have been expected. An "explosive" comedy entitled "Red Heart" will be presented in New York tonight, with Miss Olive Wyndham, Miss Gilda Varesi, and other good players participating in the proceedings.

"Of Ballads, Songs, and Snatches"

By Frederick Donaghey.

Pianists with Chicago dates are as thick as violinists were in the first half the season. Godowsky plays again today; Levitzki, best of the younger men so far known, takes part in the Friday-Saturday concerts of the Chicago Symphony; Rachmaninoff's recital is next Sunday. Arthur Shattuck comes for one on the 11th; Rudolph Ganz, on the 16th; Harold Bauer, on the 23d; and Gabrilówitsch is scheduled for his second on the 30th. Josef Hofmann, who recently played to the largest Chicago gathering drawn by any pianist's recital in a long time, is not to come back till next season, although it is everybody's belief, including his own, that he at length has won a reaction in this city.

Godowsky, who plays an all-Chopin program better than anybody else, has made up a good one for today, with the great B-flat-minor sonata as the big number: it is first in the bill. Yes—that's the sonata with the funeral-march, which is one of the reasons why it is great. The scherzo in C-sharp-minor and the impromptu in F-sharp are other features of what is, I think, a perfect example of good program-making out of Chopin.

Elsewhere in this issue of THE TRIBUNE is an article by James Huneker about teaching to sing. His tale of the amazing adventures of "our native songbird, Elvina, prima-donna dissoluta," might pass as addenda to his collection called "Melomaniacs"; and, in fact, he merely antics a condition described to me some weeks ago by Campanini, who said:

"There is a great need of state supervision of vocal teachers; and the reasons for it are not far to seek: the American public has long since learned to distinguish between the quack and the man of science in every other profession save that of singing teachers.

"Under the present order of things, any one who is able to pick out a melody with one finger on the piano, who knows a little of how to read music, who has the necessary means to set up a so-called studio and pay for an advertisement, passes at once for a vocal teacher. In no other professional field are there such easy pickings. The field is so easy of access that the good ones are practically lost among the hordes of unscrupulous, ignorant, would-be teachers whose only aim is to separate the pupil from his money."

Campanini's suggestion of remedy is the establishing of state schools of music and of official boards made up of men and women competent to pass upon the voices of aspirants.

John McCormack will be soloist with the Chicago Symphony week after next. The program is not yet made known; and it probably will involve a plan, talked over last year by him and Mr. Stock, for the tenor's use of arias by Bach and Mozart. McCormack was liked well by the Orchestra's clientèle on the occasion, early last year, of his first participation in the Friday-Saturday concerts.

The Orchestra will make up the two programs passed by in the flu-closing by putting one in for Monday afternoon and Tuesday night, March 24 and 25, and adding a week to the regular season for the other. The present plan is to have Mr. Polacco fill his engagement in the Monday-Tuesday concerts.

Tito Schipa is another new name in Campanini's roster for next season. Schipa is regarded by many who have heard them all as the best of Italian lyric and "romantic" tenors, as distinct from the robust, "dramatic" type of which Caruso is the most successful examplar, and young Dolci, now with Campanini, the most promising so far heard in the United States. Edowardo Giovanni, whose engagement by Campanini was announced the other day in THE TRIBUNE, is a Canadian by nativity, and was known well in this country in concert and oratorio before he went abroad for training. Giovanni, it seems, will be known again as Edward Johnson. Schipa, she says, would be the ideal vis-à-vis for Galli-Curci in "La Traviata," "The Barber," and "Linda."

Among the new operas so far listed by Campanini is "La Nave," by Montimezzi, whose "The Love of Three Kings" has been, like "Pelléas and Mélisande," a great success among American music lovers who talk about but never go to opera. And Montemezzi's, like Debussy's, is one of the great modern works of the lyric stage. "La Nave" is composed to a play by D'Annunzio; and it is a safe guess that all his plays will at length be preservatively treated with music, although the experiment by Zandonai with "Francesca di Rimini" was not too happy. There is a great tragic tale ready for the right composer in the Italian poet's "Giaconda," which Duse gave in one of her American tours.

Young Prokofieff, who visited as a composer-conductor-pianist with the Orchestra when the season was young, is, as I have told before, under contract to write an opera for Campanini, for production next season. It is to be called, he says, "The Love of the Three Oranges," with a libretto made by himself from a satiric comedy by Gozzo, who wrote for the playgoers of Venice in the eighteenth century. His libretto is in French.

Dorothy Jardon, one of Campanini's listed sopranos not heard in his Auditorium season, got her chance the other night in New York city in "Fèdora." That was the work selected for her appearance here, and put aside when Muratore withdrew. The critics' consensus is that she isn't ready for opera at six dollars a seat. A good critic who doesn't work at it writes to put it all into this sentence: "Jardon neds Italy and, then, a season or so here with the minor troupes." Most of those who write their notions for print say she reeks of the Winter Garden and of the two-a-day. Remembering Miss Jardon in her former employments, in which she was fairly expert, my expectation was that she would be, in opera, too operatic.

Out of the revival of "Fèdora," which Caruso was unable to make popular in New York when it was staged in the Metropolitan for him, Dolci appears to have taken a personal success; and one of the critics, Mr. Huneker, found even a measure of elegance in the young tenor's Loris Ipanoff. Huneker further found in the revival reminiscences of the nights when Robert Mantell was an idolized actor vis-à-vis with Fanny Davenport in Sardou's original play.

A news-item from New York tells that part of the French government's American propaganda for French music is the organization of a company to give opera, "grand" and light, in English as well as in French. The gentleman in charge of the campaign explains that the object is to reach the American middle-classes, and that the works to be given are "of a type suitable for family intellect." There his explanation ends.

Concerts and Recitals

Mischa Levitzki, the pianist, returns to Chicago as soloist in the Friday-Saturday concerts of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under Mr. Stock. Mr. Levitzki thus will make up the date lost when the Orchestra's season was interrupted by the flu. He will play, before the intermission, Beethoven's third concerto, which has not been used in any of the Orchestra's Chicago programs in eight years. Beethoven's "Coriolanus" and Brahms' fourth symphony complete Mr. Stock's arrangement.

High-Merit Cars

—Remarkable Both in Ability and Thrift

The Oakland Sensible Six has this extraordinary advantage: it delivers exceptionally high grade transportation, considering not only power but smoothness, comfort and convenience, and yet does so at minimum ultimate cost.

This fine automobile costs less to own and operate than other cars—as careful investigations show—and still it is a performer of the first class and an automobile of size, distinction and unmistakable value throughout.

Feel the smooth but powerful response of the overhead-valve, high-speed six-cylinder Oakland engine. Then take account of the fact that these cars run 18 to 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline and 8,000 to 12,000 miles on a set of tires; that they require remarkably little attention of any kind, and that when resold they command extra-high premiums.

Oakland Year 'Round Models

The Oakland Sedan and Coupe are cars that arouse admiration becau of their appearance, roominess, complete comfort and thorough equipment.

Their basic value, noted in all details of materials and workmanship, is made possible only by the huge manufacturing resources behind the Oakland Sensible Six.

Thousands Now Shave Without Soap, Brush, or Mug

KOLAX—"the shave with a smile"—supplants Soap, Brush and Mug—requires no "lathering" or "rubbing in". Business men, traveling men, soldiers and sailors—men in all walks of life—now say that science at last has found a better way—a new-day shaving way that takes the torture out of shaving.

Science has long condemned the use of soap for shaving.

Now, at last in KOLAX, the new scientific "Speed Shave", men of science have found a delightful, soothing cream that takes the place of soap.

No Soap—No Brush—No Mug! No lathering—no "rubbing in"! Simply wet the face with either hot or cold water—apply KOLAX the same way you would a cold cream—shave. Unlike soap—instead of irritating the skin—KOLAX soothes it.

When you finish shaving this new-day way your face feels wonderfully smooth, soft and velvety.

No need of using bay rum, witch hazel or other emollient. For KOLAX is a cool, refreshing, antiseptic emollient in itself.

A One-Minute Shave

No hot towels, no lathering in of soap alkali into the open pores, with the consequent "after-shaving soreness."

You simply dampen the face with hot or cold water—apply KOLAX lightly over the beard—shave. KOLAX softens the beard instantly—and leaves the face delightfully smooth and comfortable.

Men in the trenches shave with KOLAX without water. And write delighted letters of the perfect shaves "under difficulties." Hitherto, many saved their tea in order to have hot water.

KOLAX is the final solution of science—a "Speed Shave" that benefits the skin instead of irritating it.

A Large Jar for 50c

Buy a jar of KOLAX. Shave without rubbing. Without waste motion. Note how cool and refreshed your face feels. Compare with your former way of shaving. See for yourself how much better, how much quicker shaving this new-day way is. Try one jar of KOLAX—and you will never go back to the old-fashioned way.

KOLAX is sold at all drug and department stores in large jars for 50c.

PICTURES NOT TO BLAME.

By Mae Tinée.

LAST week two little girls, aged respectively 7 and 8 years, ran away from home. They were missed about noon time and great was the hue and cry until about 6, when they returned, dirty and cold, in charge of some one who had discovered them roaming in the park.

"Why did you do it?" they were asked. Their answer was that they had seen in a picture where some girls ran away and made their fortunes. "We meant to go to Cincinnati," they told their horrified parents, "but we got only to the park and spent too much time looking at the animals and birds."

There it was again—the old question, "Are the movies bad for the children?"

I say they are not. But children should no more be allowed to see pictures indiscriminately than they should be allowed to read indiscriminately, play with any and every body, eat anything they happen to want. If motion pictures exert a harmful influence on the child it is the fault of that child's parents. With all the good, clean pictures there are on the market nowadays there's no excuse for anybody wasting time on the other kind. Certainly there is no excuse for allowing the little ones to participate in unhealthy entertainment.

Here are some more letters inspired by that of the business man who wrote objecting to the amount of film he had to sit through in a theater before the feature was shown:

Dear Miss Tinée: The letter struck a responsive chord in my heart: that from the business man with limited time. Most of the comedies bore me so that the make me positively unhappy, though I have enjoyed the news reels since they dealt with the big drama over there. But, O, the time I have wasted waiting for the picture that I came especially to see! My idea is to have a schedule outside the theater showing just when the feature picture starts. For instance, something like this: "Madge Kennedy in 'A Perfect Lady,' picture begins at 1, 2:15," and so on. The managers may see some objection to this, but they would gladden the hearts of a vast number of fans, in my opinion. I don't suggest that they omit the rough house comedies, as I presume a good many people like them, and you have to please everybody. But if I knew how to avoid them it would certainly please this body. A BUSINESS GIRL.

Dear Miss Tinée: Will you tell your busy business man for me, what any person with human intelligence knows, that the only way to avoid seeing pictures more than once is to always visit the same theater? Besides, if he has but an hour in which to see the show, I should think he would of necessity always visit the same one. Anyway, a person who hasn't the time to see a show has no business going into one.

I enjoy learning who "produced, directed, photographed, and dressed the pictures and gave them their baths and wrote the titles," for I am enough of a "fan" to want to know who's who and what's what, to say nothing of the fact that that is one of the ways to judge what pictures one wants to see.

The weeklies are interesting, to say the least, and so are the travelogues, that is, to a person who has any interest in anything, and while I agree that a great many of the comedies are rotten, still we have lots of good ones.

I dare say your busy business man would be the very first to kick like a steer if he were to pay his perfectly good admission and be served with only a feature picture. My suggestion to him is to start a little picture theater of his own. M. O. D.

Dear Mae Tinée: The Chicago business man who wrote you about the difficulty of seeing a feature picture in limited time has my sympathy. Please let me tell the troubles of a Detroit "fan."

A few weeks ago, attracted by the advertising and review, I went to see Griffith's "The Greatest Thing in Life." After sitting through a weekly, a scenic, an educational, and a Billy Parsons comedy I finally watched the Griffith film with a great sense of disappointment, as most of the scenes mentioned in the reviews were missing. The next day I read in the paper that as time was an element the Griffith picture had been cut. They slashed a Griffith masterpiece to show a Billy Parsons' comedy! From the bottom of my heart I ask you, "Can you beat it?"

I venture to say that nine-tenths of the patrons are attracted to the theater by the feature of the star appearing therein and yet the downtown theaters in Detroit cut the picture until the continuity is hopelessly lost and the plot almost unintelligible. Dear Mae Tinée, don't you agree with me that it is a shame? K. M. CASSELL.

More anon.

A ragged gentleman met Hale Hamilton on the street the other day and asked him for a match. Mr. Hamilton handed him one. The stranger then humbly requested the loan of a pocketknife.

Interested, the actor drew out his own. The stranger silently whittled the match to a point.

"What's the idea?" the star asked after watching the operation absorbedly for a second. Said the stranger:

"Man wants but two things here below. I've got the toothpick. Lend me two bits for the meal, will you?"

A reporter for a Los Angeles paper approached D. W. Griffith and said that it was understood he was to receive $150,000 apiece for the three pictures he is to put out for First National Exhibitors. Mr. Griffith became haughty. "You understood so, did you? Well, you have understood wrong. I have no intention of going hungry, and if I were to make pictures for such a price I would starve to death!

Ruth Roland has certainly been having her troubles lately! She sprained her knee, had Spanish flu, touched poison oak and burned her arms with carbolic acid in her effort to suppress the poison, received a black eye in a tiger's cage, touched the poison oak some more, could not rent the kind of a house she wanted and had to buy one, dreamed her diamonds, rugs, Liberty bonds and automobile were stolen and was ordered by her doctor to stop eating pie.

I meant her own wedding—to Mr. Chaplin. Personally, I think that picture shows encourage constructive thought on the part of intelligent people. Different people claim to have discovered animated photography. In 1860 a man named Desvignes put out an apparatus; Du Mont is said to have formulated the first tangible scheme of chronophotography, in 1861—and so on. One of the early experimenters was W. F. Greene. In 187 Meybridge, an Englishman, resident in San Francisco, discovered how he could obtain snapshot photographs in rapid succession. If you wish to send me a stamped, addressed envelope, I will tell you the source of my information.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEvoy

AFTER JULY THE THIRST.

It was a gloomy stranger,
Who spoke in accents drear,
And oh! oh! oh! the tale of woe
That smote against my ear!
No darker dirge did e'er emerge
With trembling vox humana
Nor threnody of misery
Than that which he did hand to me,
This man from Indiana.

"I gaze across the arid waste
Of torrid years to be,
And I review with throbbing bean
The dismal desiccated scene
Of future misery.
For years and years I've garnered dough
From after dinner talks, and O,
The difference to me!

"When Scotch and Rye no longer sit
Beside the merry guest,
And brimming glasses bubble not,
To soothe the savage breast,
Good-by, bun mot and jeau d'spree;
O, how you'll be acursed!
The laugh will hollow be and dry
That isn't coming through the Rye,
After the thirst of next July,
After July the Thirst.

"When they put their beaks in beakers,
When they flagged the merry flagon,
They could stand for dinner speakers
Without yelling for the wagon,
For the guests were in good spirits,
And the same were in each guest,
And the nearest ceased from troubling
And the farthest was at rest.
And in every interregnum,
Should the spirits sink or sag,
The guests like thirsty antelopes
Would leap from jag to jag."

So spoke the gloomy stranger,
In sorrow deep immersed.
"I am an after dinner guy;
I used to hit them far and high;
But I must go to work or die
After the thirst of next July,
After July the Thirst."

VAUDEVILLE WIT

MAJESTIC.

Lew Dockstader: Friends, Voters, and Their Husbands: As a political boss I am supposed to get in touch with the public, so I am always touching the public. I got the contract for clearing the streets last year. Dec. 18 was the heaviest snow, and by Aug. 18 there wasn't a sign of snow around here.

A political boss does a lot of work, but he gets no salary. The president gets $75,000 a year; the governor gets a big salary, too, and the mayor gets $15,000. Then when their terms are over the president accepts a position in some college, the governor resumes the practice of law, and the mayor goes back to work. What does the political boss get? Well, he goes back to his estate in Ireland.

Washington came from a farm, Lincoln from a log cabin, and Wilson from New Jersey. Wilson isn't eager for another term as president, but he hates the thought of going back to New Jersey. He sure was treated royally while in Europe. In every country he was accepted as a citizen. It's a wonder he wasn't considered an alien when he reached the United States. He ate his Christmas dinner with our soldier boys and they chatted with him and, do you know, they never asked him for their back pay.

The kaiser is going to have an operation performed on his ear, but it won't do him any good—he won't hear anything good, anyway. I wish the kaiser would get locked in an automat without one nickel.

THE SENATE GAINS A FRIEND

By Guy F. Lee.

Those grave and sapient, but still
Redundant members of our higher
Congressional lawmaking mill,
Have often raised my humble ire.
Delirious I've found their chin,
And loony seemed at times their tenet.
(I'm speaking of some statesmen in The Senate.)

I do not get it when they pull
Their dignity at critics naughty;
'Tis strange how men can be so full
Of bunk, and keep a strut so haughty.
Homeric jibes should be their due
For verbal wreckage of decorum.
But in this League of Notions stew
I'm for 'em.

The Honor'ble, you might say, Reed,
The loudest gent in Old Mizzouri,
Much of the time is wont to feed
The hoi polloi on sound and fury;
But when he called the League a Yoke
On Uncle Sam, his words were truthful;
For once, at least, he up and spoke
A m'uthful.

I may be selfish, but I'm strong
For Yankees first, and last, and ever;
And I believe the Yanks belong
Right here to guard their own endeavor;
Old Man Monroe (if 'twas his lay)
Was right; it's risky to get chummy;
Sit tight, or you'll be made some day
A rummy.

So let's be friends with all the world,
But don't prick universal bubbles;
Stand firm where'er our flag's unfurled,
But leave to others, others' troubles.
The World League must respect our shores
And keep them sacred every minute;
Till then, I'm with the senators
"Agin" it!

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The war may be over, but the war benefit isn't. Not in this man's town. Here of a Sabbath evening you may still have your choice of two or three of them, each given for a worthy cause and each promising the appearance of enough famous actors to stock a dozen stock companies.

They still appeal strongly to the casuals, these bargain entertainments. First, because they are full of meat, and second, because they offer a perfect opportunity of being paid for a good deed. The man who attends a war benefit secretly nurses the feeling that he is doing both God and himself a good turn, and the reaction is flattering.

All these benefits are good, and many are excellent. There was one last Sunday night, for instance, organized by David Belasco and the Stage Women's War Relief to raise funds for the carrying on of work at embarkation hospital No. 5, which, incidentally, used to be called Grand Central palace and was the scene of many great exhibitions. Here the stage women have been giving three entertainments a week to amuse and cheer the wounded soldiers. Now the government is equipping a theater for them in the hospital and they are to treble the number of their shows. Hence the benefit.

For this "carry on" entertainment it was easy to secure volunteers, especially from among the actresses, who are proud of the record their professional sisters have made. Consequently in one number a dozen leading women took part—all young, all beautiful, all good actresses and all most attractively gowned. As a foil for them Marie Dressler burlesqued the part of a female stage directress engaging talent for a new play. Pitting her bulk and her rough comedy methods against their up stageness and their artificial elegance of diction and pose she extracted a lot of fun from the proceedings and the audience reveled in the skit.

Marie, as the directress, was a bit perturbed because, though Bruce MacRae was the logical choice to play the leading male role, she personally favored small Ernest Truex. She had some hope of playing the leading woman's part herself, and Ernie was her personal choice in sweethearts. To weed out the undesirables she gave them each "the big speech in the second act" to read, and each read it in her own way. Crystal Herne, for instance, put so much passion into her rendition that Mr. McRae, forgetting his own illness, frankly shouted: "My Gawd, Crystal, you're wonderful!" and grabbing and kissing her as no thedabarra vampire ever was grabbed or kissed, he so nearly broke up the rehearsal that Miss Dressler was forced to exert all her strength to separate them.

Florence Reed insisted that the speech should be "jazzed." As it was written it was a cold, lifeless thing. It should be spirited and even tuneful, and so she read it, with a few dance steps added. When it came Jane Cowl's turn she substituted a little thing of her own, not because she did not approve the speech tendered by the directress, she explained, but because she wanted to show what she could do and she liked her own selection best. It proved to be a tragic bit about a certain Jack who, having been sent upon a dangerous mission to secure a pail of water, was obediently followed by his faithful Jill. At the well somebody blundered, and they both fell down, poor, brave Jack suffering a severe fracture of his crown and Jill, unable to pull herself together, tumbling after in the very path of his destruction. This incident, too, all but ended the rehearsal in a flood of tears.

Other candidates included Hazel Dawn, who brought her violin and was chattily advised to book with the Shuberts, seeing that "Schubert's Serenade" was the best thing she did; Edith Taliaferro, Janet Beecher, Blanche Yurka, Margaret Dale, Violet Heming, Marion Coakley, Virginia Fox Brooks, and Kitty Doner.

The benefit bill also included the first performance of a new after the war play, probably the forerunner of many of its kind, called "When Baptiste Came Home." It pictured a condition in France in the sectors first invaded by the barbarians. Baptiste returns to find that his sweetheart is the mother of a boche child. The thought of her disgrace had unhinged her mind, and to save her her mother had convinced her that Baptiste himself was the father. Thus the drama hinges on the lover's willingness or refusal to accept the responsibility.

He at first refuses, but the sight of the sweetheart, as well as the knowledge of her suffering, decides him to take up the burden. Grandly he pins his war cross upon her gown, proclaiming her the greater hero of France, and suggests that they "be married all over again" and thus restore her memory of that event, which he has been told she has forgotten. Following his big decision the boche baby dies, and thus the situation is dramatically cleared. Ethelynn Brewer Defoe, wife of the World's dramatic critic, Louis Defoe, is the authoress. It was played by Frances Starr, Julia Arthur, Pedro de Cordoba, and Wallace Erskine, and was the dramatic high spot of the benefit.

Which reminds us that this has been Rachel Crothers' busy year. Not only has she served actively as president of the Stage Women's War Relief but she has found time to write and stage one of the pleasant comedies of the period, called "A Little Journey." This bit of character study started some weeks ago and was moved from the Little theater to the Vanderbilt because of the promise it gave of continuing for some weeks to come.

Scenically it is one of the novelties of the winter, two of its acts and most of its drama occurring in a Pullman car during a railway journey from New York to the Pacific coast. And so carefully detailed is it that every one in the audience recognizes fellow travelers in the characters on the stage—men, women, and babies with whom they have taken little journeys at one time or another.

The plot develops when the heroine discovers that she has lost both her purse and her railway ticket. The thoughtful and kindly bachelor in the next compartment comes to her aid, and she, reluctant to accept help from a stranger, at last agrees to do so for the sake of the drama. Out of this grows an interesting little romance that is brought to a head when the train is wrecked and all the selfish humans aboard are forced to help each other and thus discover something of the glory of service and the evils of selfishness and small mindedness that can see no farther than the day's horizon, as the president might say. Estelle Winwood and Cyril Keightley are playing the leads.

One thing that helps to save the bedroom farce from being more impossible than it usually is is the suggested lack of plausibility, both in the development of the situations and their furnishings. We are not, and we admit it frankly, anything of a house furnishing critic. Neither do we lay claim to any authority as an expert in pajamas, save those that have, in celebration of various natal day anniversaries, been presented to us to take the place of others long since discarded and which, we discover, usually find their way to the guest room as soon as the enthusiasm of our acceptance is registered. But common sense tells us that not one out of six of the beds used in our bedroom drama is sleepable, and that any lady who ever attempted to compose herself to sweet repose in the night clothes she so wonderfully displays on the stage, just before she hops into bed with her stockings on and turns out the light, is in for a bad night.

Also, if the beaded and fringed decorations of her ornate sleeping costume are half as real as they appear, she will wake next morning stamped with as fine a replica of the war maps of Europe, including barbed wire entanglements, trenches, Red Cross hospitals, and shell holes, as ever issued from a printing press.

In "A Sleepless Night," which is the newest of the four poster series, the heroine is a young woman who feels that her life intellectual will be incomplete until she is frankly numbered with the Greenwich village radicals. Reading their literature and having met a group of their free young artists she is willing to dare all and snap her fingers at the consequences. When it happens that there comes to her guardian's house a young village artist who hopes to get a contract for the mural decorations the would-be radical boldly enters his room in her negligee as proof that she doesn't care that, or even that, for the conventions.

The point of the farce is that unbeknownst to the would-be radical the young artist is a married man; that his wife is also a member of that particular house party and that she, also risking a scandal, is at that moment hiding under the bed. And the high tide of hilarity rushes in when, with the radical in pink pajamas hiding beneath the coverlets on the bed and the unsuspected wife in blue pajamas hiding behind the frings under the bed, the other men folk of the family invade the artist's room and insist on sitting on the bed.

But the point of my story is that neither lady, however beautiful she appeared to be, could have comfortably slept in the pajamas she wore. Therefore "A Sleepless Night" cannot be considered a consistently good bedroom farce. And the bed itself was quite thinly covered for this time of year, making the plot altogether untenable.

The cast, however, is both decorative and competent, as bedroom casts must be. Peggy Hopkins, playing the radical and making her debut as an ingenue, wears her pajamas with an air and plays rather neatly and modestly for a debutante. Ernest Glendinning, back from service with the marines, is the worried artist; William Morris and Lucile Watson the anchors of respectability; Donald Gallaher and Carlotta Monterey assisting young lovers.

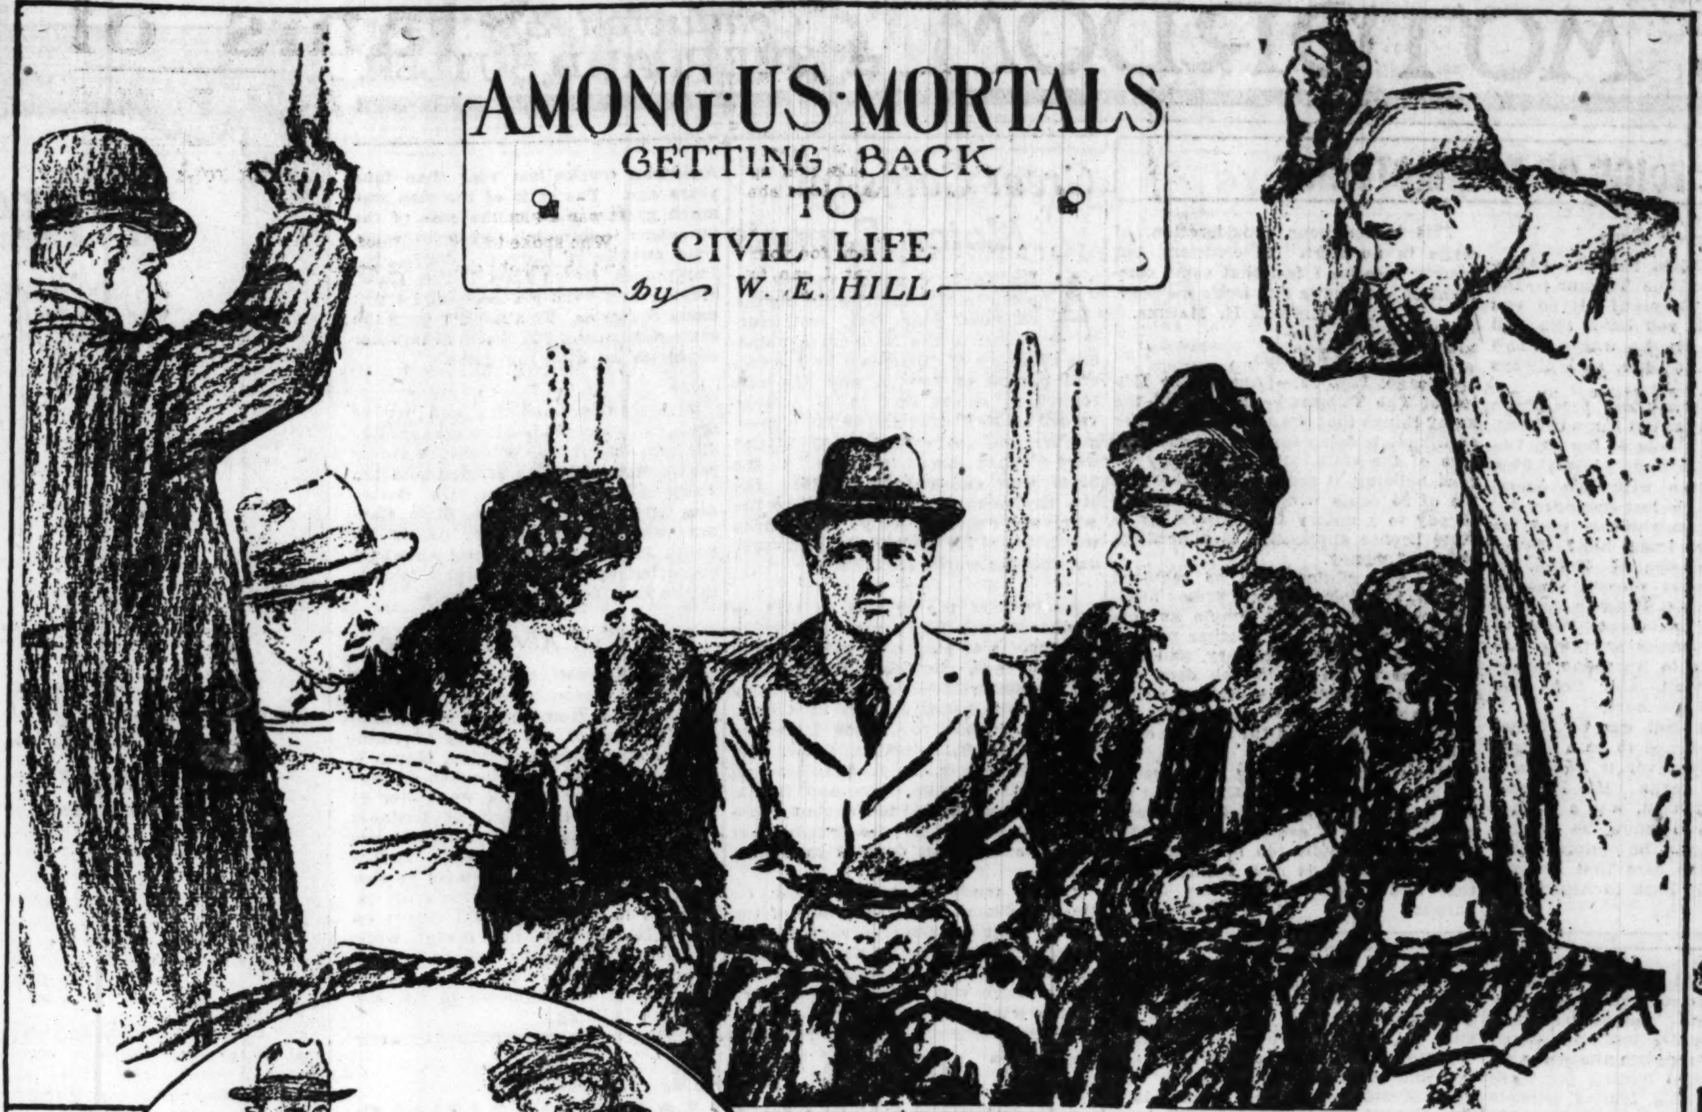
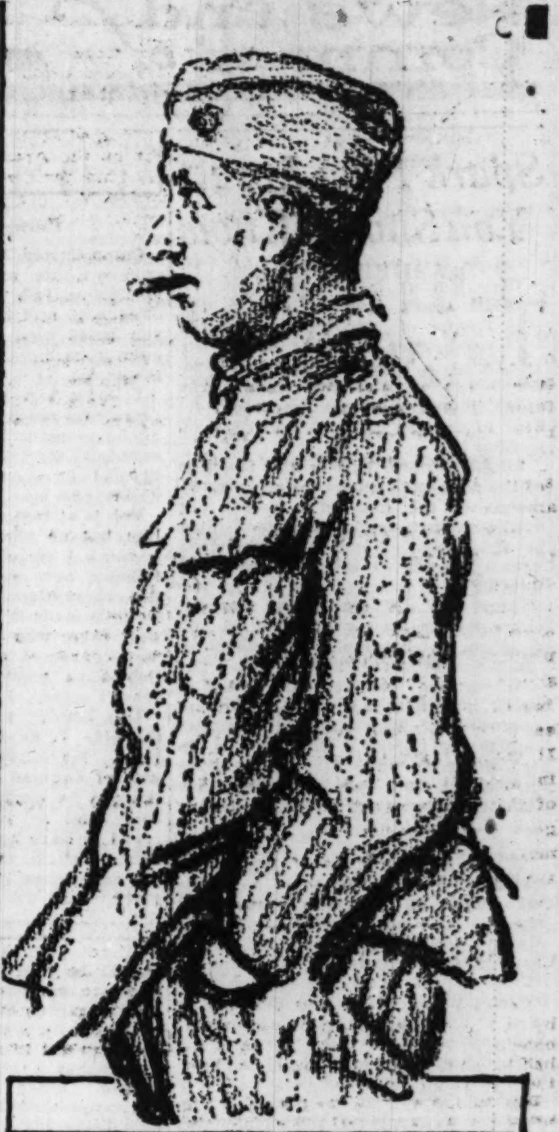
GETTING BACK TO CIVIL LIFE

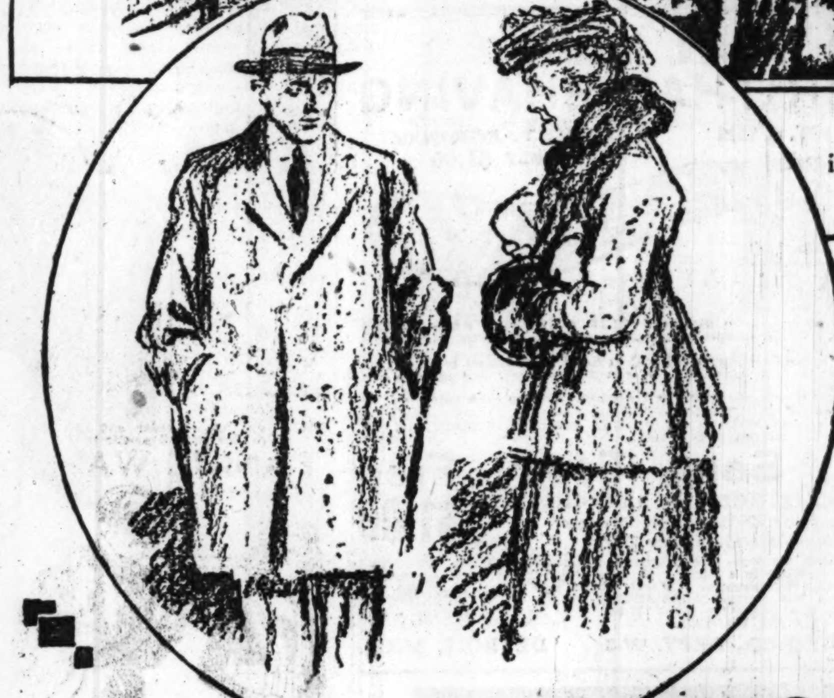
By W. E. HILL



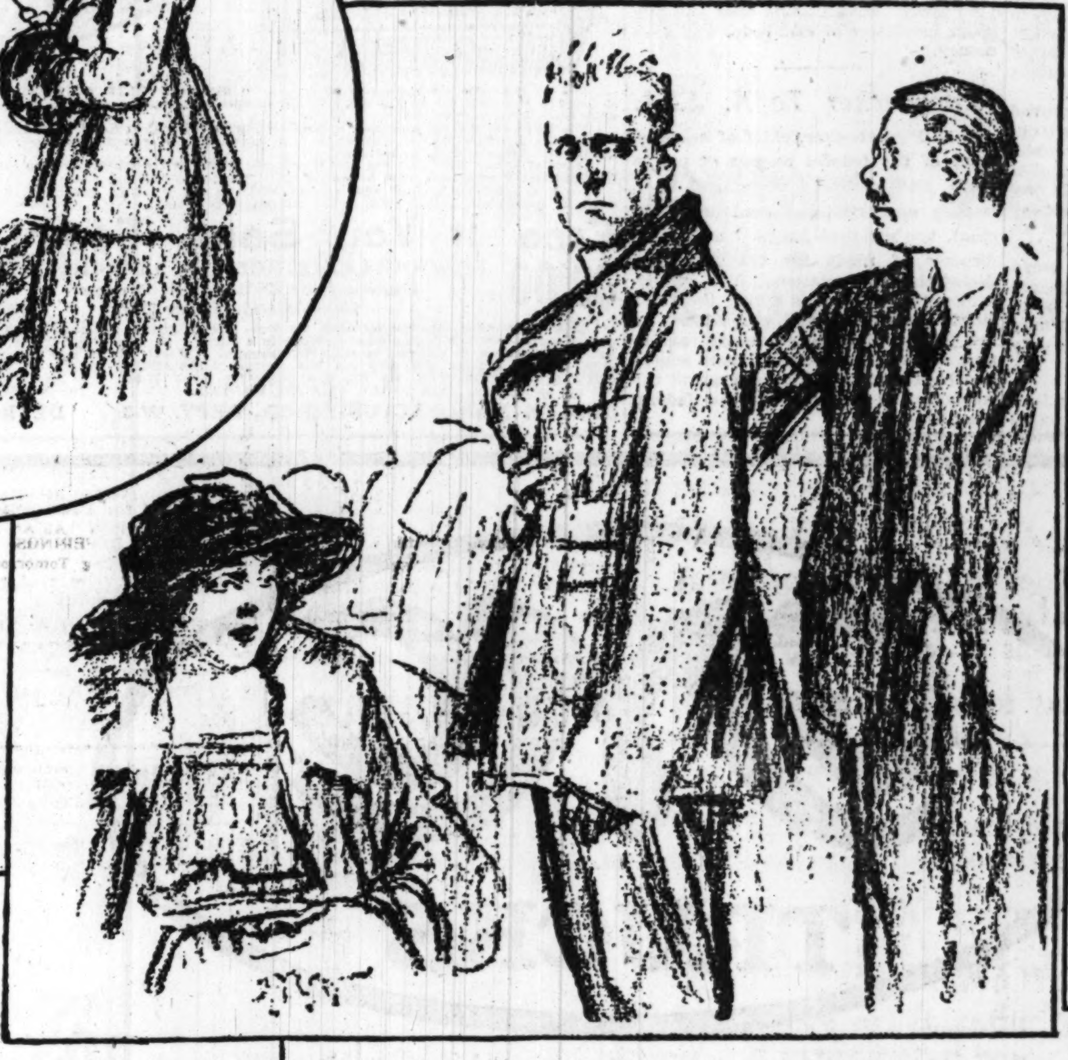
The first day out of uniform—how the trip to the office feels to Joe, late private in the U. S. A.



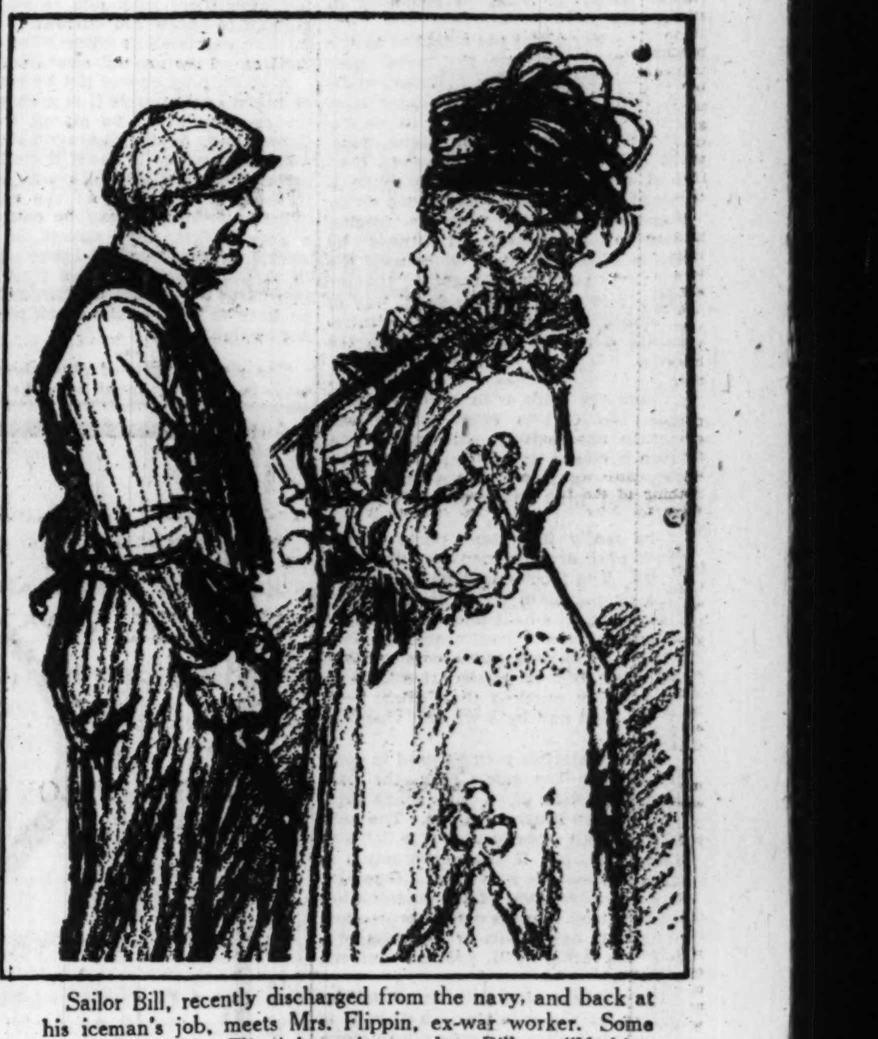
You won't catch Buck Private Helmhorst going back to the farm! No sirree! Plenty of desk jobs in a big city, with fat salaries attached to them—if you hang around long enough.



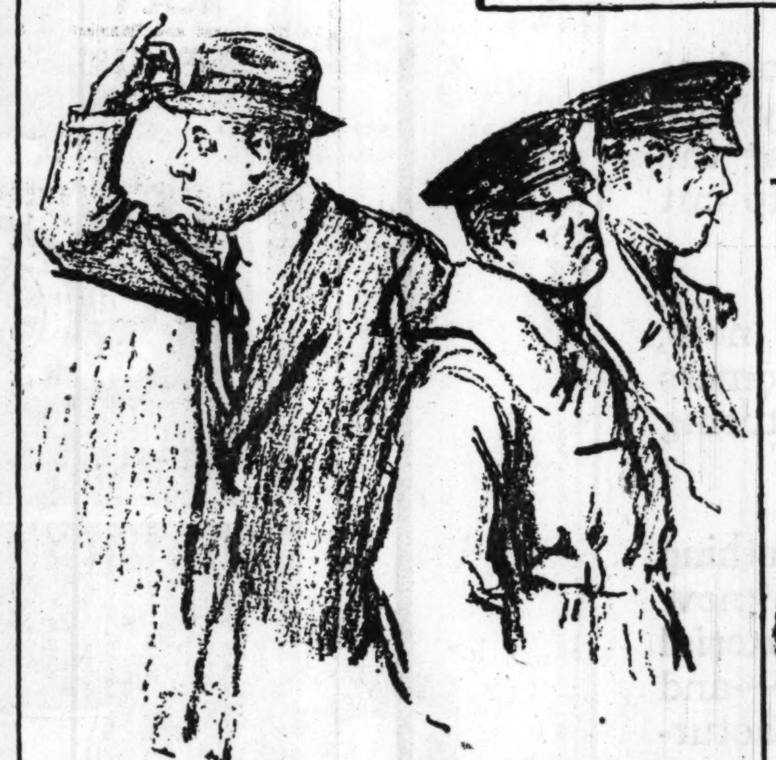
"Don't your legs feel cold without those leggins?"



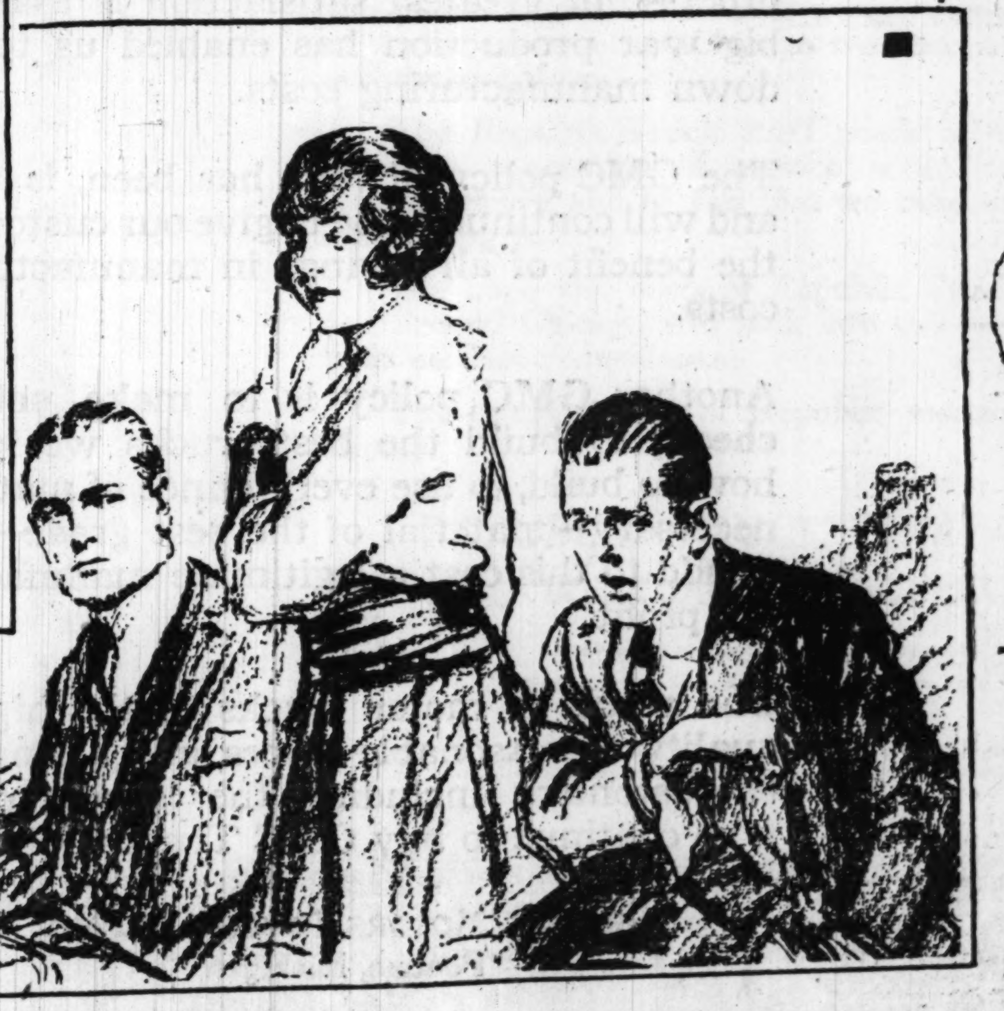
"Of course they look queer to you now, because you've been used to a uniform." Ensign Jim finds that half the army and most of the navy were ahead of him and picked out all the good fits—the salesman, however, is optimistic.



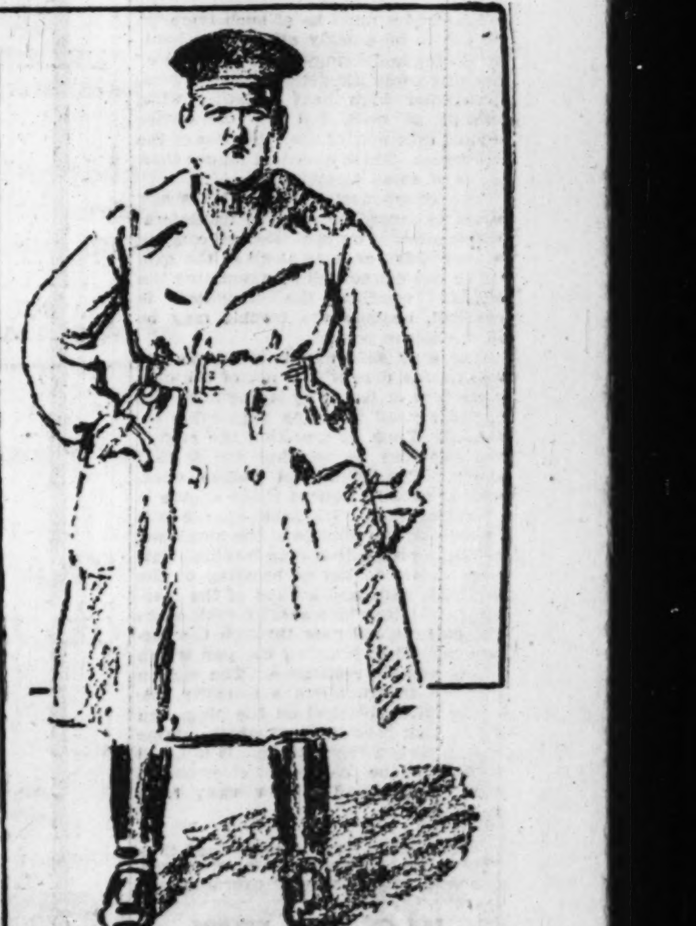
Sailor Bill, recently discharged from the navy, and back at his iceman's job, meets Mrs. Flippin, ex-war worker. Some months back, Mrs. Flippin's parting words to Bill ran "Nothing is too good for you dear brave boys, and I'm going to give you a great big kiss when you come back!"



One of the really difficult readjustments about getting back into "cits" is that pernicious habit of saluting. Ex-Corporal Higgins, having checked a salute in mid-air, is making a splendid pretence at knocking a fleck of dust from his hat.



"Where's that damn handkerchief anyway!" Eddie the filing clerk, back from three months in England with the A. E. F., now and then forgets the pretty English custom of carrying one's handkerchief up one's sleeve.



It is now two months since Lieutenant Dimpsey received his discharge. Although he is always just on the point of buying a new suit of clothes, he still clings to his officer's outfit.

Vaudeville Wit.

MAJESTIC.

Al Herman—I've got one of the most jealous wives and I give her no cause to be. All I do is hang around the hotel lobby all day. She's so jealous that she said to me the other day, "If I die and I ever hear of you getting married again I'll scratch my way out of the grave and haunt you and your new wife." But when she dies, I'm going to fool her. I'll bury her with her face down and the harder she scratches the farther down she'll go.

I'll now sing a song entitled, "Of All My Wife's Relations, I Love Myself the Best."

This is a good cigar I'm smoking. I walked eight blocks to get that cigar—I thought the man never would throw it away.

There are two towns here claim me—Chicago and Kenosha. Chicago folks claim I belong over in Kenosha, and Kenosha——

Going from the ridiculous to the artistic, I will now recite: When you came into life, you cried while all around you were glad. So live that when you die, you'll smile while all around you cry. Isn't that pretty?

Spark Plug Lore You Should Know

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE spark plug is simply the means of introducing into the combustion chamber of the engine a spark gap formed between the ends of two wires. The spark jumps this gap, imparting its heat to the gas mixture, and thus exploding it.

Simply stated, this is the function of the plug—to explode the mixture by means of the heat of a spark, but at the same time the plug itself must be able to withstand the tremendous heat and pressure inside the cylinder; it must not allow escape of the gas mixture, it must unfailingly transmit current so the gap will be jumped, and it must do this many thousands of times a mile of running.

When one considers the work a spark plug has to do it is surprising how well and how long this little part remains in service. Plug trouble today is not so common as it was years ago, and I have heard of plugs functioning without any attention for as many as 20,000 miles.

There are hundreds of designs of plugs made of a variety of materials and made in numerous shapes and styles. It is easy to see how difficult it is to design a plug to meet all the conditions demanded of it, yet the modern spark plug does its work admirably well. I wish to describe in this article the construction of plugs, the way to install them properly, the type to get and not to get, plug troubles and how they may be remedied.

Since the end of the plug must introduce a gap into the combustion chamber, there must be two wires or electrodes with their ends separted to form the gap. One of these electrodes which takes the current from the cable or wire from the ignition device must be perfectly insulated so no current will leak out, while the other electrode must be grounded in some way.

This latter always is attached to the spark plug shell or the metal part which screws into the cylinder, while the other one, called the center electrode, always is imbedded in an insulator made of porcelain, stone, mica, etc. The insulator and the shell then must be joined together to make a unit of the plug, and this is done either by cementing them together, forcing them to compression tightness by means of a nut, etc. Of course, the two parts must so fit together that no mixture escapes, and the usual way of obtaining this tightness is by introducing a gasket or two between the parts.

Plugs are made with open or closed ends, but certain engines only will operate successfully with each type. Often a closed end plug gives trouble with an engine which operating with open end plug gives entire satisfaction.

The really important parts of the spark plug are the insulator and electrodes. The former is usually made of mica or porcelain so as to withstand the tremendous heat and also changes of temperature without cracking. Porcelain and various stone compositions are used, but of course this type is more easily cracked than mica, both by the heat and by a wrench when installing.

These materials may be used in combination in the same plug, the best form consisting of an outer stone insulator and an inner mica one. The only trouble with mica is that it is liable to absorb oil, but if the construction is right this may be prevented altogether. The one advantage of the combination types is that there is double protection, so that if one insulator becomes broken the other will prevent current leakage.

In buying a plug you cannot tell by looking at the insulator whether it is good or not, because some cheap stone looks just like good material. The reliability of the maker is the thing to consider.

Electrodes must be of such material as not to be quickly affected by heat, spreading and changing the gap size, or burning away altogether. Nickel wire, or similar high heat resisting wire, usually is used, but the car owner should take note of the thickness of the electrodes. Thick ones last longer than those of small diameter.

The commonest trouble with spark plugs is caused by cracked insulators, which allow of current leakage, causing a poor spark or none at all at the gap. Often one cannot tell by examining the outside whether the insulator is cracked, because the trouble may be in the hidden portion.

The only safe way is either to dismantle the plug if it is not of the one-piece type or test it by laying it on the cylinder head with the plug cable attached. Then by cranking the engine the gap may be watched for a good spark. Cracks, except hidden ones, may at once be noticed if the engine is operating in a dark area; sparks will be seen on the outside of the insulator.

Fouling is another plug trouble. This term refers to the carbonizing of the electrode ends and bottom of the insulator, resulting in a short circuit since the current will pass through the carbon instead of jumping the gap which offers greater resistance. The carbon deposits in troublesome quantity, because oil is splashed on the plug, and if the plug is of the sort which retains the oil carbon forms there. It is usual to hook shape the ground electrode so that oil will tend to flow away from the gap.

When plugs become carbonized they should be cleaned by immersing in kerosene and then removing and scrapping the carbon off. The scraping may be done with a knife, but care should be taken not to roughen the parts, as this makes a good footing for more carbon. When plug fouling persists the cause should be gone into—probably leaky piston rings, too much oil, too thin an oil, worn or pitted cylinders, etc.

The gap at th eplug end must be properly set. The usual gap is 1 32 inch, but this will vary slightly in different engines. If the gap is too short the spark may be too weak; if the gap is too wide there may not be sufficient voltage to cause the current to jump it. The gap is easily adjusted by slight bending of the ground electrode.

A spark plug should not be removed or taken apart unless it is giving trouble or thought to be giving trouble. Occasionally squirt oil around the plug joints and watch to see if there is any leakage of gas. Bubbles will appear if there is leakage. At the shell to cylinder joint this may be caused by a poor gasket, dirty gasket, or worn gasket, or the plug not being screwed in tight enough. If the plug is of two parts the gasket at the joint may be dirty or bent, or the check nut may not be tight.

The right length of plug should always be used. It must have the points just below the level of the cylinder head and not in a pocket, where dead gases always exist. It also must not stick too far down. Find out the best type for your engine and always ask for that no matter what make you get. Avoid sensational types which are said to spark even if carbonized and to give more than one spark. If they are carbonized the current will go through the carbon and not where the maker says it will.

Never throw spark plugs haphazard into the tool box, where they may become cracked, never throw an old plug away. Save the old ones and buy spare insulators or electrodes and save money.

VOICE OF THE MOTORIST

Burman's Benz.

Camp Custer, Mich., Feb. 25.—[Automobile Editor of The Tribune.]—Did you know Bob Burman? If so you liked him, and if you knew him well you loved him, for he was a man's man, true blue, square, and always the same.

I knew him intimately for fifteen years, ever since he first came to Flint, Mich., to paint wheels at the old Durant-Dort carriage factory for $1.50 a day. I have been with him everywhere, and was his last manager.

Bob is at rest, so who can speak for him but us who knew him? Every account I have seen of Ralph De Palma's new speed records includes the observation that Burman drove a German made Blitzen Benz. For goodness sake, who wants anything German connected with his name today? Bob alive wouldn't, and Bob dead doesn't either, I am sure.

Bob bought a fast car of Barney Oldfield. It happened to be a Blitzen Benz. He didn't favor it because it was of German make. His Peugeot, the one he used most, was a French car. And do you know he is supposed to have built the motors Harry Stutz used in the cars that brought the championship back to America in 1915?

This is for your consideration. I write in no spirit of criticism, but merely because I feel that some comment of the sort is due Bob's memory.

LIEUT. GEORGE H. MAINES.

25 Cents.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—[Automobile Editor of The Tribune.]—In view of the many things that the automobile owner of Illinois is doing for the general welfare of the state, and particularly on road building, it seems to me that the fee of 25 cents which it is necessary to pay to a notary for subscribing to state license application is a needless waste of money.

This subscription may be required by law, but even so it still seems needless. A document as simple as this could be witnessed by another person, if such a thing is necessary, and this would save this fee, which does not amount to anything in individual cases, but which amounts to nearly $100,000 if every car owner of the state is compelled to pay it.

This year I am paying a $9 license fee and would be perfectly willing to add this 25 cents to the license fee and pay $9.25; and if every car owner did this it would build ten miles of good roads, but as it is now I cannot see that this expense serves any useful purpose. P. C. THOMPSON.

Pennybacker To A. A. A.

J. E. Pennybacker, chief of management of the federal bureau of public roads, and generally recognized as a leading authority on road management, has resigned his post to become director of roads for the American Automobile association. Mr. Pennybacker originated and edited the Good Roads Year Book and was adviser to the joint committee on federal aid to post roads of the United States senate and house before taking charge of the management branch of the federal road bureau.

Great Gains in Motor Exports

A REPORT of motor vehicle exports to all countries during the calendar year 1918, just furnished to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce by the federal bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, shows that 10,308 trucks valued at $26,814,952 and 36,936 passenger automobiles valued at $36,278,292 were shipped abroad last year. In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, the last twelve months' period before the war, we exported only 784 trucks worth $1,181,671 and 28,306 passenger automobiles worth $25,392,963.

Analysis of the exports in 1918 as compared with 1914 shows that while the exports of passenger cars to England, France, Germany, Russia, and British South Africa decreased notably and increased only slightly in Australia, they doubled to Canada, increased twenty-eight fold to Japan, twelve fold to Mexico, nearly nine fold to Chile and Spain, six fold to Cuba and China, more than seven fold to Uruguay, more than quadrupled to the Dutch East Indies, and almost doubled to Argentina.

Of the truck exports last year, on the other hand, more than half of the 10,308 went to England and France alone, while in 1914 less than one-third of the 784 shipped abroad went to these two. There was hardly any country in the world that did not take more American trucks last year than four years ago. The ratio of increase was much greater than in the case of the passenger automobile, even to countries outside of Europe. Japan, the Philippines, Dutch East Indies, Cuba, Mexico, and Peru are becoming truck using countries. To a lesser degree the same development is observed in other countries all over the globe.

American automobiles and trucks are now being exported to seventy-five different countries, colonies, and dependencies, including Iceland and the Faroe islands, Labrador, the Barbados, Aden, Chosen, Persia, Siam, Canary islands, Madagascar, nearly all South American and Central American countries, and to innumerable islands in the East Indies and Oceania.

He'll Tell About Europe.

David Beecroft, directing editor of the Class Journal company, will talk to the members and guests of the midwest section of the Society of Automotive Engineers on Friday, March 7. Mr. Beecroft, who has been in Europe for nearly three months, went over as a member of the party of business paper representatives who were guests of the British government. Before returning to the United States he also made a tour of the manufacturing industries in Italy. He will report on the observations he made while abroad. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock at the rooms of the Western Society of Engineers in the Monadnock building.

CUT YOUR OWN HAIR EASIER THAN SHAVING

PATENTED OCT. 8, 1918
PRICE TO INTRODUCE ONLY $1.00

WORTH $5.00
COSTS $1.00

You do not need any experience or practice to use the DUPLEX AUTOMATIC HAIR CUTTER. It comes to you ready for instant use, and five minutes after you receive it you can have your hair cut better than it was ever cut before.

The DUPLEX will cut as closely or trim as long as you wish it to be. No clippers or scissors are needed with the DUPLEX; it finishes the work completely. It cuts the front hair long and the back hair short. Trims around the ears, etc.

Inside of a very short time you will have to pay $2.00 for the DUPLEX. The price today is $2.00, but while our present stock lasts we will accept this advertisement the same as $1.00 Cash. Cut it out and send it with ONLY $1.00 and we will send you the DUPLEX AUTOMATIC HAIR CUTTER, ready for instant use, postage paid, to any address. Send today.

GMC TRUCKS

While we are proud of the war record of GMC Trucks—a record unexcelled by any other—our greatest satisfaction is that the big war production has enabled us to cut down manufacturing costs.

The GMC policy always has been, is now, and will continue to be to give our customers the benefit of all savings in manufacturing costs.

Another GMC policy is to make nothing cheap; to build the best trucks we know how to build; to use every ounce of material necessary—material of the best grade—and to add to this cost a legitimate manufacturer's profit.

The result is motor trucks of the highest quality at reasonable prices, and a long list of customers, including the largest users, who continue to buy GMC Trucks.

A HOT SPOT Chalmers wrings the power from gas

AS any one knows there is just so much power in a gallon of gas; and the great trick in a gas engine is to get all the power out and convert it into mileage.

Yet do you know how little power actually is taken out of gas by the average car? And how much power goes out the exhaust?

Ask any motor car engineer.

A Chalmers engine simply wrings power out of gas. Its famous Hot Spot "cracks up" the gas, just as constant chewing of food prepares it for good digestion before swallowing.

To get power out of gas the gas has got to be "cracked up." Then it has got to be placed into the cylinders in a "dry" condition. This the great Ram's-horn does to a work of engineering art.

You can tell how true this is the minute your foot touches the accelerator button of a present day Chalmers and you get the feel of that throbless, frictionless power that means so much to your peace of mind, your tires, your bank balance and your self satisfaction.

Automobile Trade Notes and Gossip

WRITING to James Levy, president of the James Levy Motors company, Carl H. Paige, sales manager of the Fulton Motor Truck company, expresses the opinion (not primarily for publication) that there is considerably more fact than surmise in the talk of a prospective car shortage this year. "All those I have talked with," he reports, "say that from present indications they are not going to have cars enough. In fact, I should say 40 per cent of them are all sold out until July now. Buick, Cadillac, Hudson, Marmon and some others are sold way into the summer. This also applies in a measure to many of the truck agencies, particularly some of the big ones like White and Packard."

A new figure made its appearance among the pundits of "motor row" last week—that of Maj. Harry Unwin, formerly of the army ordnance department, whose appointment to succeed H. J. Staebler as manager of the Chicago Reo branch is announced. Maj. Unwin has long been identified with automobile affairs. In 1903 he laid out the route for one of the early endurance contests in the east, and is credited with having originated, on that occasion, the system of road logging which is now so widely used in the touring guides.

Dual pneumatic tires are reported to have found great vogue among truck operators in Europe. Experts of the United States Rubber company give voice to the belief that they don't stand much show in this country. They are, it is thought, makeshifts, resorted to because European tire makers have not been as successful as those in America in developing single pneumatics of the requisite size and strength.

The Willys-Overland factory has established a department for the technical training of employés where, as the announcement reads, "learning can be done while earning." Enrollment in the classes is voluntary, and the men will receive instruction during working hours.

The Apperson brothers are merrily maintaining their end of the controversy as to our pioneer motor car. From the factory in Kokomo, Ind., comes a summary of trade conditions which takes a bit of a whirl at history and contains this statement: "From their (the Appersons') dream grew the first commercially successful American automobile." It's Mr. Haynes' turn now.

J. E. Duffield, formerly identified with the marketing of United States tires, Thermoid products, and the Bailey differential, has joined the Essenkay Products company as director of sales. The appointment, which takes effect March 1, was announced Tuesday evening at a banquet given at the Lexington hotel to 100 employés of the organization.

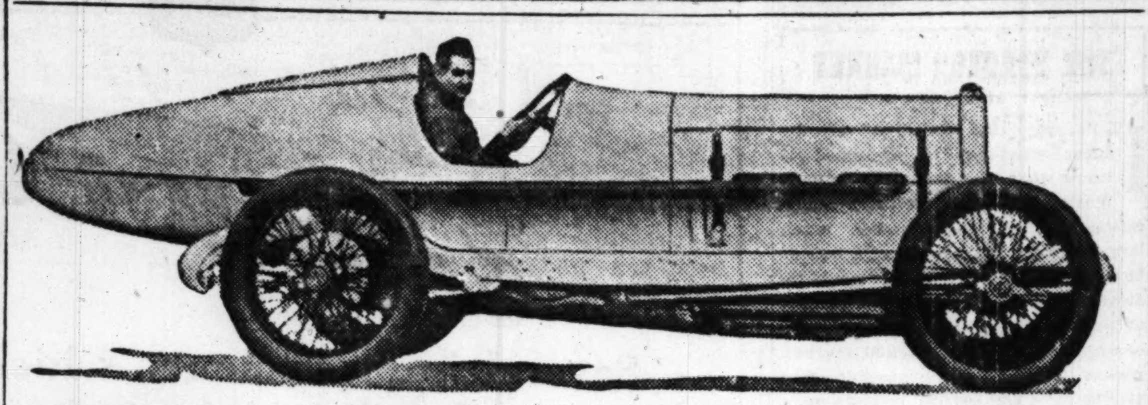
C. Y. Kenworthy, Chicago distributor of the Roamer, has bought the racing car which Eddie Hearne campaigned recently and announces that he will make a personal entry of it in the 500 mile race at Indianapolis on May 31. The car formerly was known as a Duesenberg, but has been remodeled and given the name of the Roamer, its Duesenberg engine being of the same type as that used in the standard Roamer sport model.



Here is Ralph De Palma and the 260 horsepower Packard in which he covered a kilometer at 150 miles an hour on the Daytona beach last month and set new world speed records for all distances up to twenty miles. Note the streamline projection behind the driver's head. This is the most noticeable but by no means the most important of the car's many novel items of body design. To devise a contraption that would as nearly as possible melt into the wind, the body as it was first laid out was placed in a wind tunnel, covered with alcohol, and set afire. The eddies of the flames were carefully noted and changes of contour made wherever it seemed necessary to reduce resistance to the air current. The car is entirely different, of course, from the smaller racer in which De Palma has frequently performed at the erstwhile Chicago speedway.

Far East Lifts Ban.

Embargo on automobiles, chassis, parts, and accessories, proclaimed in May, 1917, by the Straits Settlements and Malay federated states, has been lifted, according to information from the American consul at Singapore. Similar action has been taken by the government of India.

Stand Still—It's Legal!

While it is generally considered advisable to stand aside when a motor car is approaching, one does not have to do so unless he wishes; that is, if he is willing to take the consequences.

This is the decision of the Kansas Supreme court. The case came up in Kansas in an appeal from Dickinson county.

The district court instructed the jury that it was the business of a pedestrian to get out of the way of a motor vehicle when he heard or saw it approaching. The Supreme court reversed the decision and held that foot travelers and motor vehicle men have equal rights on the highway.

Oppose Sunday Work.

The National Automobile Dealers' association has adopted a positive stand in its decision to oppose a resumption of night and Sunday service. The association eliminated night and Sunday work last year in coöperation with the government request, in order that many mechanics might be released for war work. In spite of the termination of the war, however, and because of the unprofitable nature of over hours' work, they feel that the wartime scheme should prevail indefinitely.

Huge Road Funds Planned in South

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 22.—Bonds in the sum of $115,000,000 and a state fund of $2,000,000 per annum for a period of ten years represents the plans of the four Dixie highway states of Tennessee, Georgia, North and South Carolina to build state systems of permanent roads.

The legislatures of Tennessee and North and South Carolina are now in session, giving what is believed to be favorable consideration to the respective measures. The Georgia legislature will meet in June. However, a strong movement is on foot in that state to have a special session of the legislature in March for the purpose of authorizing the bond issue and keep pace with the other states by preparing to start work with the increased funds this year.

The directors of the Dixie Highway association are leading the fight in each state for the bond issues. It is felt that this is the quickest way to secure the permanent improvement of the highway.

Tennessee is leading off with a proposed bond issue of $50,000,000 which will be taken care of by an increase in the automobile tax to $1 per horse power and the use of the mill tax which is now being collected for state aid. As it is not necessary for this bond issue to be referred to a vote of the people, it is possible that Tennessee will get the measure through in advance of her sister states. The legislation designates the general routing of the highways to be permanently improved.

Georgia is clamoring for a bond issue of $40,000,000, built along the lines of the Illinois plan and providing for a state highway commission of three. The motor tax would be increased to an average of $20 for passenger cars and $40 for trucks. Three classes of state roads are provided for, the only limitation being that at least 70 per cent of the funds must be expended on an approved type of paving.

South Carolina is asking for $25,000,000 in bonds, to be retired and interest paid out of the automobile license fees. The tax is placed at $1 per horse power. A new highway commission is also being asked for.

North Carolina has substituted for the bond issue plan the raising of a fund not less than $2,000,000 annually for a period of ten years, to meet any federal aid which is secured. This fund will be raised by an increase to 75 cents per horse power for motor vehicles and other taxes. A new highway department is also being sought. North Carolina's appropriation will be available as soon as the bill passes.

ANOTHER BOOST FOR THE H. C. OF L.

AUTOMOBILE provisions in the new revenue act, signed by the president last Monday night, became effective on Tuesday and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce is sending particulars to makers and dealers in the industry.

The new law continues the 3 per cent tax on the manufacturers' selling price for "automobile trucks and automobile wagons" and adds a provision that all tires, parts and accessories sold on or in connection with such trucks and wagons are considered part of it in estimating the tax.

The law increases the tax on the manufacturers' selling price of passenger automobiles to 5 per cent, with the same provision that tires, parts and accessories sold on or in connection therewith are to be included in estimating the tax.

There is a similar 5 per cent tax on motorcycles, but no tax on tractors nor on tires, parts or accessories therefor.

There is a new tax of 5 per cent on the manufacturers' selling price of tires, parts and accessories when sold separately, except that such tires, parts and accessories sold by their makers to automobile manufacturers or motorcycle manufacturers are not taxable This exception is apparently to prevent double taxation.

In addition to the above taxes on sales there are taxes at the same rates on the leasing of cars, tires, parts and accessories therefor by their makers.

Better Times in Paris.

The free sale and use of automobiles "excepting those not licensed for commercial purposes" and the free use and sale of gasoline are reëstablished by a decree published in Paris. Automobiles not licensed for commercial purposes are still subject to certain restrictions.

Modern Lightness—With Stability

THERE is much to be said for the closed car bodies that set the first high standards of coach building applied to motor cars.

Peerless leadership in Closed Car construction was established in the early days of the industry.

There is much to be said for newer methods—where they work real improvement.

The Peerless Closed Cars of today embody those fundamental principles developed by the old master coach builders, combined with all that constitutes genuine improvement in modern methods.

The result—modern lightness with stability.

Mounted on the famous Peerless Eight chassis, with its two separate and distinct ranges of power, the Peerless Closed Cars of today maintain their leadership.

In substantial comfort they are not to be surpassed.

In operation they give the most distinctive performance yet attained by motor cars.

The "loafing" range offers the acme of soft, smooth, efficient, economical application of power.

The "sporting" range releases an abundance of power for emergencies and speed which few cars now possess.

Let us show you its remarkable range of performance—those contrasts of opposite virtues which have made the Peerless Two-Power-Range the distinctive motor car of the day.

The "Yellow Chassis" Trucks that serve so well

Important Announcement to Chicago and vicinity

This announces the new location, new organization and new service facilities for the use of Republic Truck owners in this vicinity.

A complete new organization composed of well-known Chicagoans with years of motor truck experience is now at your service at all times.

Realizing the value of prompt and efficient service we are equipping our new plant to meet every requirement of every Republic Truck owner.

Our new quarters are the most centrally located of any truck sales or service station in Chicago.

We have 30,000 square feet of floor space.

We will carry a stock of parts valued at $300,000.

Our entire organization is composed of the most skilled and experienced truck men in the industry.

Specialists will constantly be at your service.

In founding this organization we realize what service means to you. As a result we are going to perform as we believe no other Chicago truck organization has performed before.

The Republic Truck itself needs no introduction. But our conception of service is so advanced, so comprehensive and so fair that we take this means of introducing it.

We hope the hosts of Republic Truck owners in and around Chicago will look into this new service at their earliest convenience.

The complete line of Republic models is now on display.

What War Did to Motoring Costs

AN interesting comparison of the cost of owning a motor car just before the United States entered the war in April, 1917, and at the present time is presented in a price list compiled by some unidentified statistician for the New York Times.

The list shows the factory prices early in 1917 and those which have been fixed as the standard prices for 1919. The increases range all the way from 25 to more than 50 per cent, but in the opinion of many men in the industry, it is surprising that in view of the high cost of labor and material and the difficulties which the automobiel industry experienced during the last year in government restrictions and the curtailment of production the average price is not considerably higher today.

For some of the more popular makes the figures are:

High as the general average is, it must be remembered that the 1917 prices, on which the comparison is based, represented the period when American automobiles had reached the lowest level at which they were offered to the public. Late in 1916 there was a general reduction due in some measure to the feeling that the rising cost of living created by the European war would seriously curtail the demand.

The history of the last two years has brought a realization to the makers that the 1917 prices were too cheap for the quality that was given and it will probably be some time before those levels are reached again. The announcement was made soon after the signing of the armistice of reductions on several makes of automobiles, but those reductions represented the war price that had been added last fall when the motor car industry was told by the government that it must get down to a 100 per cent war basis by Jan. 1, 1919, and that indicated an actual shortage of cars for the present year.

The armistice, however, altered the situation. No material reduction from present prices may be looked for this year, and, while 1920 will undoubtedly see some lowering of prices, there is no indication that they will reach the levels of 1917.

I note that in your department recently wood alcohol and water were recommended as the safest and sanest mixture for automobile radiators. I have always understood that wood alcohol was dangerous to use for this purpose, owing to its bad effect on the eyes when near its fumes. Consequently I have always used denatured alcohol in place of wood alcohol. I should be glad to have your opinion about this, for it might be well if there is anything in the danger of using wood alcohol to so inform your readers.

JOHN REID JR., Racine, Wis.

While it may be true that wood alcohol fumes are not the best thing in the world for the eyes, there is very little danger from this source when the substance is used as an anti-freeze. If your radiator cap is well fitted the only point at which the fumes could get out would be through the overflow pipe, and when the car is in motion the fumes pass under the floor boards and really never get in contact with the occupants of the car. You will have to look a long way, I think, to find a person whose eyesight has been materially affected by wood alcohol fumes in these circumstances. However, it is well enough to stick to denatured alcohol, since it is cheaper and will do the business just about as well.

Please advise me as to whether there is any particular way that piston rings should be placed on the piston. What sounds show up in a piston slap"? How can you tell when a piston ring larger than the ordinary sizes is needed?

R. MAGUIRE, Chicago.

I assume you mean the actual manner of slipping the rings over the piston. There are various ways of doing this. One is to cut three or four strips of sheet metal about one-half inch wide and six inches long and bend about one-half of each end over at right angles. These strips are then hung over the piston, being equally placed around the circumference of the piston. The rings are then carefully slipped over the metal strips, which form skidways for the rings. The purpose of the strips also is to prevent the bottom rings from slipping into the top grooves as they pass down the piston. When all the rings are in place the strips are slipped out and the rings will spring into their respective grooves. Piston slap is caused by a loose fitting piston or worn cylinder. It is produced by the piston striking the walls of the cylinder as the angularity of the connecting rod changes. The noise is evident at all engine speeds and increases with the speed of the engine. If the pistons can be moved around considerably when the engine head is removed piston slap can always be expected to some extent. Oversized rings are necessary when the combustion chambers have a tendency to become filled with too much oil. Also when the crankcase gets too hot, which means much of the explosion energy gets past the rings. The best way to fit new rings is to have the cylinders reground first, to make sure they are absolutely round. The best ring in the world is useless in a cylinder out of round.

My Ford car was new in April, 1916, and the carbon was taken out the following September, but not since. The engine has now developed a knock. When I have the engine going and the car is not moving the knock cannot be heard, but when the car is moving on a perfectly level, smooth pavement and the gas throttle is set at about two notches she knocks beautifully. On a steep grade, however, she doesn't knock. Last summer, on going over a grooved pavement, the front wheels seemed to swerve from side to side and almost jerked the steering wheel out of my hands. I was told that the bushings in the axle were worn and had new ones put in, but the wheels still swerve, though not nearly so much. The bearings are not broken or at least don't sound as though they were. What is wrong? If the sediment bulb beneath the gas tank should freeze would that cause it to leak?

E. L., Bloomington, Ill.

By all means have the carbon removed from the engine. That is what is causing the knock. Carbon is one of the best insulating materials we have, and when it forms on the piston heads and combustion chambers the heat from the explosions cannot be readily dissipated through the walls into the cooling water, and you get a knock as a result from the exceedingly high temperatures and pressures. You probably will find also that the bearings can be taken up somewhat and the valves reground to advantage. In regard to the car's swerving, I suggest that you have a mechanic look over the radius rods of the front axle, for these may be bent. This would make the car hard to steer. Also have the wheel alignment checked up, for the front wheels must track properly. Undue play in the planetary gears of the steering column, ball arm, steering knuckles and wheel bearings also will make a car steer treacherously. Freezing of the sediment bulb would hardly cause it to leak. It is more likely a case of loose fittings. One way of fixing this is to unscrew all the parts of the bulb, such as the gasoline line connection, and apply shellac to the threads or surfaces that come in contact with each other. Soap on the threads also will stop leaks in many instances.

New Brakes Grip All Four Wheels

A FOUR wheel hydraulic system of braking has been designed to eliminate skidding on slippery streets, aside from acting as a powerful means to bring a motor vehicle to a quick stop when traveling fast. Tests in Chicago with a Stutz car so equipped have shown it possible to stop the car within thirty-one feet, traveling thirty-five miles an hour.

The operation is essentially the same as the conventional type, the stopping of the car being directly proportional to the amount of pressure used on the pedal. When installing these brakes, they take the part of the foot brake only, the emergency brake being left on the car to be able to lock the car on a grade.

The makers assert one of the most important features of the new braking sytem is the fact that regardless of the adjustment of the bands, the pressure is exactly the same on each wheel when the brake pedal is applied.

The system consists of five cylinders with a piston inside of each, one cylinder being riveted to each of the four brake bands. The fifth cylinder, which is a little longer than the others, is bolted under the car in such a position that the rod which connects the brake pedal will operate the piston of his fifth cylinder.

There are four one-eighth inch steel pipes running from this cylinder to the frame opposite each wheel. A flexible hose screws on to each of these pipe ends, the other ends of the hoses connecting to each of the four brake band cylinders. The pipes, hoses, and cylinders are filled with a nonfreezing oil, and when the foot pedal is applied a pressure is created in the line, moving each of the four brake band pistons, and these are connected in such a way to the bands that the bands are contracted on the drums when the pressure is applied.

Coal Gas for Hun Cars.

The German Association of Gas and Water Engineers of Berlin recently announced its intention of establishing on a large basis plants for the making of coal gas for automobile and truck consumption.

The shortage of gasoline is evidently acute in Germany. This and the shortage of horses were responsible for the move.

THE TRACTOR MARKET

IT is estimated conservatively by those who may be presumed to know that the potential tractor market will exceed 1,250,000. Some estimates place the number much larger. If the average life of a tractor be estimated at five years, it would indicate an annual replacement market of 250,000. This, together with the necessity of filling the original market, makes it seem quite possible that 400,000 or even 500,000 tractors may eventually be sold in a year.

It is interesting to note that 250,000 tractors at $1,000 each mean a market of $250,000,000, which is about as large as the entire annual output of the agricultural implement industry before the war, which amounted to $164,000,000 in 1914 at manufacturers' prices.

At first the tractor industry developed slowly, with a production in 1912 of 11,500. Two years later the output was 15,000, then 21,000, then 35,000, and then 55,000 in 1917. In 1918 the output is estimated at about 100,000.

HYATT ROLLER BEARINGS

After Eleven Years of Direct Selling

IN 1908 we began making STERLING Tires and selling them direct to the car owners. This method continued until two years ago, when for the greater convenience of our customers we began to sell partially through dealers.

The great bulk of our business still comes to us direct through our thirty-six branches. For this reason we are very closely in touch with our customers. We know their individual requirements and experiences. We watch their tires and frequently can make suggestions which result in greater mileage. Each STERLING representative has his list of users to whom he must give personal attention.

In this way we have seen and known the performance of fully seventy-five per cent of all the tires we have made. We have seen what is required of them and we have built them accordingly.

Until recently, 90 per cent of all STERLING Tires were used on commercial cars and trucks, where the tendency to overload is strong. To meet this condition, we have always made our tires extra large and extra strong, and we have now taken what we think is the last possible step toward pneumatic tire perfection and produced the Super-Size Cord, with a four hour air-bag cure. We use specially woven cord fabric, thoroughly saturated and heavily coated with pure rubber gum. The cord fabric is built up in criss-cross layers on an iron form, or core. The pure gum cushion, the heavy square-woven breaker strip and the tough STERLING Tread are added. The core is removed and replaced by our specially constructed air-bag. The tire is placed in the mould and compressed air forced into the bag. Then comes four hours in the vulcanizer, during which the air is further expanded by heat until the various layers in the tire are as solidly welded together as if they grew that way.

The result is a tire that seldom wears out and which withstands accidents and abuse to an almost unbelievable extent.

When each of fifty tire makers clamors that his tire is the best on earth, we decline to join the chorus and will only aver that STERLING Tires are built by men who know how, from materials which eleven years' experience have taught us to be the most dependable—that they are built to meet conditions which we have had exceptional opportunities to study and that they are giving complete satisfaction to hundreds of commercial houses which keep accurate cost records and which tell us that STERLINGS give them lower cost-per mile than any other previously used tire.

If an owner of a fleet of cars will put on one full set of STERLING Tires and watch it, he will, in the language of those who advertise for lost heirs, "learn something to his advantage."

Any good dealer can supply STERLING Tires and each of our thirty-six factory sales branches is ready to serve you.

Minetti and Sidelli:

"I laid a corner stone last year."

"Yes, and you've been cackling about it ever since."

"How do you know I am in love with your red-haired, freckled-faced sister?"

"Because you always refer to her hair as golden, and you say her freckles indicate a fine complexion."

"I'd like to sell you a patent safety device which will prevent your diamonds being stolen."

"I don't need any such thing as that; I'm an actress."

"How can I avoid the smell of onions in cooking?"

"By burying them first."

"The dog days are coming."

"All right. What do you want me to do—bark?"

"I've still got to plan my bathing suit. I wish I could get some good suggestions."

"I'll give you one. Suppose you build the bottom of it a little closer to sea level this year."

"What a lot of friends that man must have!"

"What man?"

"The one that's always sick, and the other men have to go out nights to see him."

"Do you go in for aviation?"

"No, not for aviation. One goes in for swimming, but for aviation one goes up."

"You should rise by your own efforts."

"Why so?"

"'Cause there's no telling when the alarm clock goes wrong."

"How do you make the distinction between classical and popular music?"

"O, that's easy. It's popular if I enjoy it, and it's classical if I don't."

ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

CENTER OF THE UNIVERSE.

OUT in the southern sky lies Orion, the brightest constellation and the most magnificent of the star clusters. These vast suns are at the center of the universe and form the hub around which the milky way and all the stars wheel in majestic procession.

Orion is squarely in the southern midheavens as darkness falls, and as evening advances it swings slowly over into the west.

Orion contains two of the brightest stars in the sky, Rigel at the bottom and Betelgeux at the top. Betelgeux is not really a part of Orion and appears in the group only because it lies between them and the earth. It is unlike them in color, size, and temperature. Orion stars are gaseous, intensely hot bodies, noted for their size and primitive composition, while Betelgeux is a red star, getting well along on the road to extinction.

The stars which make up the constellation of Orion are no chance aggregation of suns, but a real, physical system. Photographs of the group show that the whole constellation is filled with a gauzy cloud of nebula, and that the points of light which seem like stars are really areas of condensation in the vast clouds of star dust.

For many years the distance to Orion was a baffling mystery. The bright scintillating stars seemed to offer an easy field for discovery, but every attempt there met with utter failure. It was demonstrated that their distances could not be found by parallax. Stars near the earth show slight shifts, caused by being seen from changing angles, as the earth pursues its orbit around the sun. But Orion was so far away that the parallactic shifts were too small to be detected.

Neither could the distance be found by star sounding. By this method the astronomer reveals stars lying deeper and deeper in space by increasing the light grasp of his telescope in a definite way. But the Orion stars were so much brighter than those which lie between that they forced themselves upon the attention while thousands of fainter and nearer ones were still invisible.

At last an ingenious plan was devised. There are many double stars in the nebula of Orion which, by their sizes and general appearances, suggest that they may be like the ordinary double stars which we can observe from the earth. Now, the two suns composing a double star are on an average about one billion miles apart. The double stars in Orion can just be separated by a good telescope and in astronomical terms are said to be about two seconds of arc apart. Each of them is visible in a telescope as two bright shining points, close together.

For stars one billion miles apart to have this appearance they must lie at least one hundred thousand billion miles away, and this is the least figure that can be assigned as the distance to Orion. This means that 2,000 years ago the light from Orion which we see tonight had already left the stars and begun its journey here.

All Official World's Records Broken by De Palma and His Packard Car

Packard Aviation Motor Drives Car 149.72 Miles Per Hour

Daytona Beach, Fla., February 17th—When Ralph De Palma left Daytona Beach this evening he carried with him the distinction of having broken every official world's record on the straightaway with his new racing car equipped with the Packard Aviation Motor.

In five day's racing, beginning February 12th, he has broken records for 1 mile, 2 miles, 3 miles, 4 miles, 5 miles, 10 miles, 15 miles and 20 miles—hanging up the startling figure of 24.02 seconds to the mile, at the rate of 149.72 miles per hour.

The Packard Aviation Motor now holds all records on straightaway and circular tracks for all distances from ¼ mile to 616 miles.

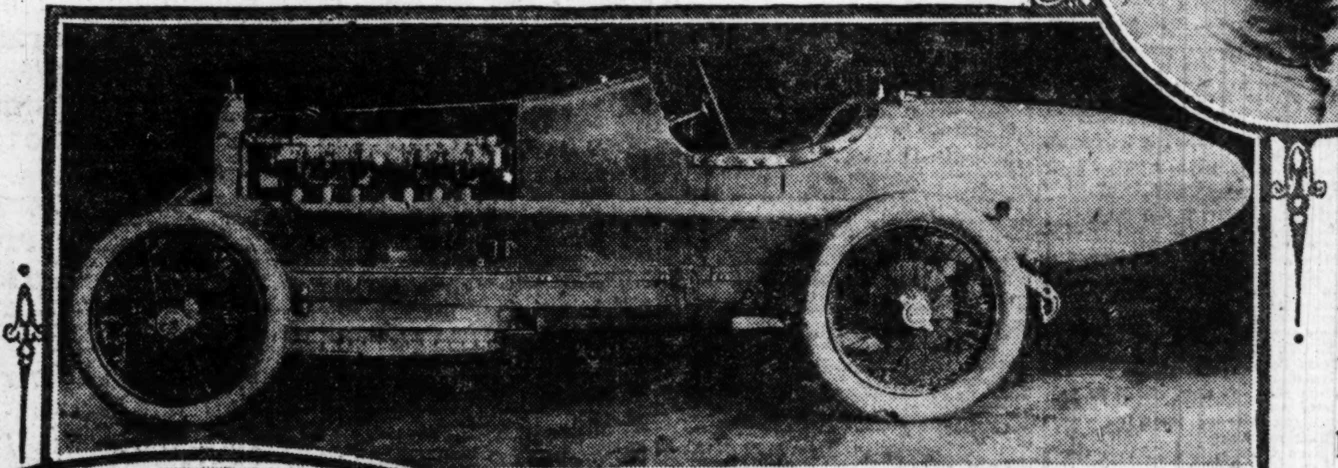
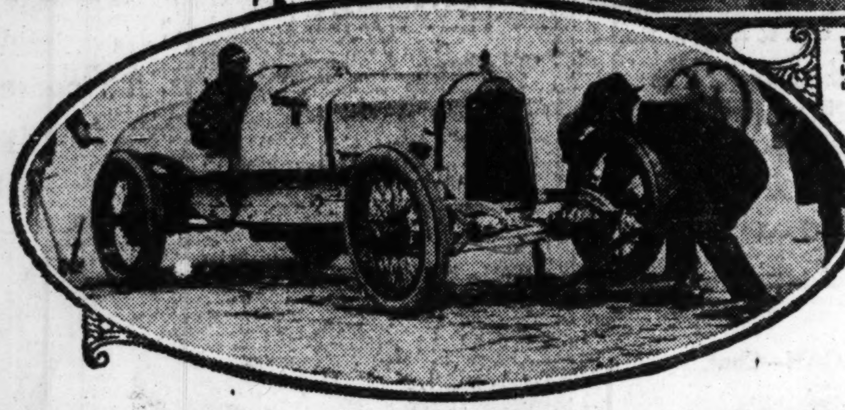
RALPH DE PALMA





RECORD BREAKING PACKARD RACING CAR EQUIPPED WITH PACKARD 900 CUBIC INCH AIRCRAFT ENGINE—HOLDER OF WORLD RECORDS MADE AT SHEEPSHEAD BAY JULY 27 AND 28, 1917.

WHAT gives even greater interest to this achievement is the fact that many of the earlier records were long held by the German-made Blitzen-Benz car.

It seems peculiarly fitting that this new De Palma-Packard record, which breaks the last hold of the Germans on transportation records, should be achieved by the Packard Aviation Engine—the engine which was the forerunner of the Liberty Motor that broke the German supremacy in the air.

The real significance of De Palma's Packard achievement is the Packard engineering principles that made it possible.

No one knows better than the Packard Company what can be accomplished by intensive study with any problem of transportation—whether of passengers or freight, by motor carriage, by truck, by airplane, on land or in the air.

Think of the positive force exerted by this specialized Packard personnel of 18,000—working intensively on transportation problems!

Think what is already being done—and what more can be done in the future—to apply the lessons of De Palma's racing car in a practical way to the Packard Passenger Car and Motor Truck!

Lessons of engine design, of car design, of truck design, of balance, of the application of power,

Getting the work out of the car!

This country needs—must get—the fullest possible results from every ounce of its transportation power.

There is no immediate hope of railroad betterment.

Motor transportation—whether passenger or freight—is the one great resource.

The motor truck equipment of America as it stands could deliver 30 per cent more transportation than it is giving today.

The Packard Company says this because it has developed the method, and put it into effect with nearly two thousand Packard Trucks the country over.

It has seen the methods work out. It has seen the cost figures go down month by month. It knows that the principles and methods are right.

The methods apply to any make of truck.

The man who has a transportation problem to solve cannot do better than discuss it with the Freight Transportation Department of his local Packard Branch or Packard Dealer.

No Charge. It is not even necessary that he be a Packard owner or driver.

The object is Service rather than immediate sales.

Angels' Songs from the Golden City of the Blessed

By Edythe Morahan de Lauzon

THE DAWN OF A NEW ERA

This book of prophetic messages has been given by inspiration from the Great Spiritual world, to comfort the bereaved and those who are earnestly searching for truth.

For almost two thousand years, since the days of Christ, a great silence has lain between this world and the next. Of late years the little that has come forth has not been of a very high order, for the time was not ripe, but now the Divine Messages have been given in this book from the Highest Realms.

This book has over 300 pages. Price $1.35. To be had from ALBERT URQUHART, 413C St. James Street, Montreal, Que., Canada.

DRUG USERS

Are invited to ask for free book or try NEAL INSTITUTE, 811 E. 49th St., Chicago (Oakland 439), at our expense, unless they are pleased at end of Two Weeks' Humane Treatment.

No Punctures No Blowouts

Now over 50,000 car owners say Essenkay is better than air!

Essenkay is a tire filler—used in place of air in tires. It makes punctures and blowouts impossible and doubles tire mileage.

This is going to be an Essenkay Tire Filler season for car owners, dealers and garagemen. This page announcement is the opening gun in the biggest Educational, Advertising and Merchandising Campaign ever published for the benefit of the Car Owner and Dealer.

Essenkay Is Guaranteed against being affected by heat, cold, water, mud, friction, atmospheric or climatic conditions, hardening, crumbling or flattening.

Tire Filler Era is Here

ESSENKAY comes to you recommended by over 50,000 Car Owner Users covering the entire United States—by over 200 leading Chicago Dealers and Garage Men, as well as prominent dealers in many states.

For years tire filler manufacturers have worked without ceasing for perfection. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent. Inventors and scientists have given their best. Special automatic machinery has been evolved to take away all human uncertainty and insure the manufacture of an absolutely uniform product. Now, in ESSENKAY, perfection has been reached.

Doubles Tire Mileage

ESSENKAY makes punctures, blowouts and tire troubles impossible. No air is used, hence no inner tubes are required. ESSENKAY is a flexible, light and highly resilient material—NOT A LIQUID. It looks like rubber—has all the desirable flexible qualities of finest Para rubber, yet it contains NO RUBBER IN ANY FORM, and so has none of the imperfections and weaknesses of rubber.

The use of ESSENKAY is a proved economy, because ESSENKAY will last as long as your car.
Your tires filled with ESSENKAY are always at a uniform pressure—cannot be deflated or run flat. 10,000 to 20,000 miles on ESSENKAY filled tires are the rule, not the exception.

ESSENKAY comes in sections to fit perfectly into all sizes of casings and fills casing completely. It can be installed on all types of rims.

First Cost—Last Cost

ESSENKAY is an investment, not an expense. When your ESSENKAY filled tires are worn down to the last layer of fabric, the old casing may be discarded and the same ESSENKAY transferred to a new casing.

ESSENKAY is now in use on thousands of passenger cars, trucks, converted trucks and tractors. Many municipalities, departments of Government, newspapers, etc., have increased truck and delivery efficiency to 100% by installing ESSENKAY.

To Chicago Car Owners

Send coupon for free booklet, "The Story of ESSENKAY," and name and address of the nearest ESSENKAY Sales Depot or Service Station, where you can simply drive your car in and have your tires filled overnight on free trial. Look for the ESSENKAY Sales Depot sign. Or telephone us, Superior 7824-7825-7826-7827 or Superior 6991, for full information. Send the coupon.

To Out-of-Town Car Owners Mail the coupon for copy of our free booklet, "The Story of ESSENKAY," and details of the Free Trial offer. To take care of enormously increasing demand, ESSENKAY Sales Depots and Service Stations are being established all over the United States as rapidly as possible. Look for the ESSENKAY Sales Depot sign. Mail coupon today for name and address of the one nearest you.

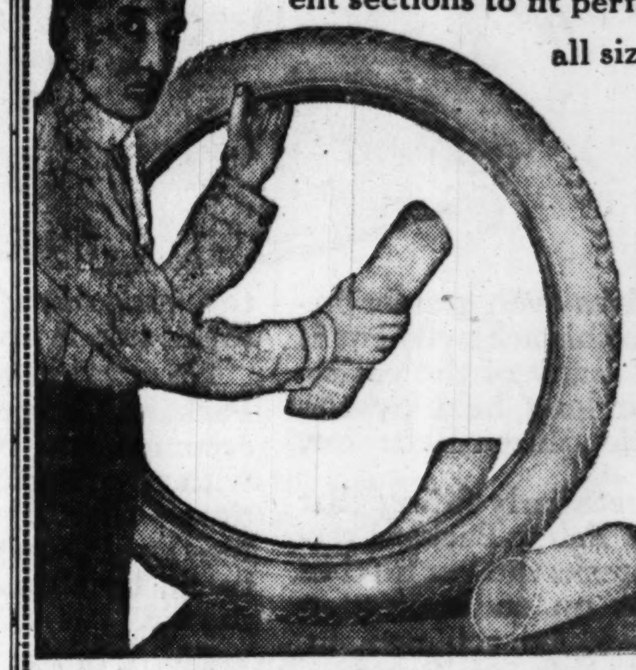
Free Trial Offer

ESSENKAY is sold on FREE TRIAL. We do not say "buy" ESSENKAY. We say "try" ESSENKAY. We ask you to test it in your own tires under your own loading and road conditions. If your passenger car carries five people, crowd in eight. If your truck carries a ton, put on two tons.

Ride over smooth roads—then over the roughest you can find, including hilly and sandy country. Allow the car to remain under maximum load on a concrete floor for a day or two to prove that ESSENKAY does not flatten.

Then if you are not convinced that ESSENKAY rides like air—that it will END your tire trouble—that you will no longer be bothered with punctures, blowouts or slow leaks—that ESSENKAY will not flatten, crumble or deteriorate—return it—the TEST WILL COST YOU NOTHING.



ESSENKAY comes in convenient sections to fit perfectly into all sizes of tires on all types of rims. It rides like air.

To Out-of-Town Dealers We want to hear from Garage Dealers, Automobile Repair Shops, Vulcanizing Shops, Implements Dealers, Hardware Stores in territory having no ESSENKAY Sales Depot. MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

WHEN THE TONE SHOP ADVERTISES A SALE YOU CAN DEPEND ON IT, being a real sale, and not misleading misrepresentation, now so common. Our candid, straightforward policy to protect you in values you receive for the money expended has created a tremendous not enjoyed by competitors. Its accumulated increase in our patronage makes it possible to abandon our old wareroom in the Republic Bldg. for the exquisite new quarters now being prepared for us in the incomparable

CONFIDENCE IN US

NORTH AMERICAN

Building, amidst a snappy, progressive environment, which spells sure-fire success.

So, you see, this is NOT a "damage" sale with no damage, or a "fire" sale with no fire, or a "moving" sale and no "moving." WE ARE ACTUALLY MOVING, AND OUR during the next five days will be unparalleled in phonograph history.

We have several instruments, standard makes, slightly shopworn, which we do not want to move, and you can make a wonderful selection at

HALF REGULAR PRICES,

with privilege of turning them in again ANY TIME WITHIN SIX MONTHS, at the full price you pay, on any brand new

BRUNSWICK, COLUMBIA, SONORA, STRADIVARA,

you may select. We wonder if you can be made to REALIZE WHAT THIS MEANS!!!

In used instruments we have:

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

SALESMAN—HIGH GRADE MAN OF GOOD personality and forceful address, who is qualified to approach heads of big business on a subject that is vital to every employer today. Must be able to quickly overcome the preliminary resistance of prospects, get their willing attention, and intelligently present a new, clean, meritorious plan for industrial harmony and increased production. Straight commission, exclusive territory, unlimited field, and inexhaustible talking points that appeal to the common sense and good judgment of business people.

Our men make as high as seven and eight sales in a single day—and an average of one sale a day nets the salesman over $7,000 per year in commission. This is a new line of work and service that meets with quick response on the part of executives. Now in use by upwards of 5,000 leading concerns and backed by the enthusiastic indorsement of all. Ethical, dignified, inspiring, and highly remunerative work for a clean cut salesman of brains and ability. We will only consider men of high caliber and clean records. Those who meet our requirements can make more money on our service than on any other selling proposition available. Please give full particulars in your reply. Address O T 301, Tribune.

SALESMAN—ARE YOU A RELIABLE, WELL established salesman, traveling for a rated house, but with an hour or more spare time between trains, which you want to turn into $50 or $100 extra money every month? If you are, I have a first class side line proposition that you can easily place in the best business houses, and in certain high grade special stores. This line is needed badly by progressive business men; it appeals strongly to their ambitious instinct, is widely advertised, and it sells. The selling outfit is small, attractive, and complete, and with it some of our men who have the time are actually making up to $300 extra a month. Write me about your present work and I'll tell you how to make some real money. Address N O 172, Tribune.

SALESMEN—NOVEL SELLING PLAN!
$10 TO $50 DAILY.

FACTS.

It is comparatively easy for any one to say, "We can do such and such a thing," or "We will do this or that," but it is entirely another thing to make a definite statement of facts giving the detail and proving the statements which are made.

During the month of February we have placed the following applicants in positions listed, at salaries shown. These are a few that we have taken promiscuously from the lot. Remember, these positions were actually filled by us. We can do for you what we have done for others.

We placed SALESMEN as follows: Autos, $1,300-$1,800; Mfg., $1,300-$1,800; Lumber, $1,200 and comm.; Auto Supplies, $1,800; Financial Lines, $1,800-$8,000; Mdse., $1,800; Piano, $1,200 and comm.; Efficiency, $1,800-$2,600; Construction, $1,200-$1,500; Commercial, $1,200-$2,400; Sales Corres., $1,800; Mail Order, $1,300; Wholesale, $1,800-$3,900.

We placed EXECUTIVES as follows: Adv. Mgr., electric, $1,500; Comm'l, $2,400; Dairy Products, $4,000; Grocery, $1,800; Publicity Man, $2,600; Sales Engineer, $1,800; General Manager, $7,000.

We placed TECHNICAL MEN as follows: Mfg. Maintenance Man, $1,800; Foremen, $1,080-$2,400; Engineers, $2,400-$3,600; Draftsmen, $1,800-$2,400; General Utility, $1,040.

We placed ACCOUNTING AND CLERICAL MEN as follows: Mfg. Clerks, $936-$2,400, including Complaint Clerks, Ledger Clerks, Timekeeper, Bookkeepers, Bank Clerk, Stenographers, Chief Clerks, Correspondent Clerks, Jr. Accountants, Accountants, System Bookkeepers, Order Clerks, Secretaries, Stock Clerks, Bill Clerks, Pay Roll Clerks, Claim Clerks, Confidential Clerks, Shipping Clerks.

This is a few of the many positions which we ACTUALLY FILLED during February. If we had had your application during that month the chances are that we could have placed you in one of these positions.

WE HAVE ON FILE NOW

In the SALES-EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT we have 61 ORDERS, ranging in price from $18 per week to $7,500 per year.

In the ACCOUNTING DEPARTMENT we have 36 ORDERS, ranging in price from $18 per week to $5,000 per year.

In the CLERICAL DEPARTMENT we have 16 ORDERS, ranging in price from $15 per week to $1,800 per year.

In the TECHNICAL DEPARTMENT we have 53 ORDERS, ranging in price from $[illegible] per week to $7,000 per year.

In view of the above statement of facts, can you afford to stay away from our office? We need your application now, whether or not your earning capacity is $1,000 or $10,000 per year. 8:30 Monday we will be ready for you—call without fail.

EXCEPTIONAL WORKING OPPORTUNITIES.

We have one of the most attractive working opportunities in Chicago to offer young women between the ages of 20 and 25.

The work is not difficult. We give you plenty of time to learn about our business. You can make at the start $15.00 a week, and very shortly you can make as much as $20.00 a week if you improve in your effort.

Applicants must write a good, plain hand, speak clearly and impressively, hear well over the telephone, be neat in appearance, come from good family and have high school or equivalent education. A certain amount of native aggressiveness to accomplish results is a desirable qualification.

Young women who have gone to private schools and who have never worked before will find ours a splendid place to work, a department exclusively for women, plenty of light, air, and the association of other refined young ladies. The business institution which this advertisement represents is thoroughly reliable and one that you would be pleased to work for.

In your application give details of age, schooling, address, and phone number.

CLOTHING, FURS, ETC.

WITH THE INCREASE OF LIVING EXpenses furs have advanced accordingly until today it's quite a burden for the average lady to pay at one time $100 and more for a decent Fur Neckpiece. We sell the class of FURS that you may have longed for and felt that it was beyond your reach. We cater to the best and most particular clientele and extend credit—but not the embarrassing kind where all your friends and neighbors know your business.
MILLER & COMPANY, 36 S. State-st.

HOME BUYERS,
ATTENTION.

Do you know how much the price of Building Material has increased since 1915?
Here it is: Com. Brick, 71%; lumber, 100%; cement, 88%; steel, 75%; heating and plumbing, 75%; hardware, 75%; glass, 100%.
With ALL LABOR entering into construction also increased, you can see why a building will cost AT LEAST 60% more now than prior to the war. Therefore, if you can purchase a NEW house already constructed, at pre-war cost, it's the thing to do, isn't it?
I have two new Tapestry Brick 8-room houses at Indian Hill [Winnetka] near high school, that I will sell on this basis, discount the value of the 64-ft. lot 50% and give you any reasonable terms; monthly payments if desired. Owner removes to California this fall and DESIRES TO SELL THESE HOUSES before he goes. Prices, $10,500, and $9,500. Make an offer. OWNER. Tel. Win. 768.

REAL ESTATE—SUB'N—WEST.

WYLDEHURST, WHEATON, ILLINOIS.

This beautiful residence property is located on Franklin-st., opposite and directly north of the campus of Wheaton College. It consists of about two and one-half acres of ground, improved with a twelve room brick residence situated 180 feet back from the street, facing south; also a barn and other small buildings. The residence is of Colonial design, built of the best materials, and extremely heavy framework throughout. It has hardwood floors throughout. Spencer hot water boiler, pressed steel radiators, electric lights, gas in the kitchen, soft water, stationary vacuum cleaner, high ceilings, a very large parlor with Colonial mantel, large living room and numerous large closets, a very large bathroom, and four lavatories. In the basement are laundry, vegetable and fruit closet, toilet, storerooms, etc. There are about 200 trees in the place, including some of the most beautiful buckeye, linden, walnut, maple, elm, butternut, oak, hickory, beam, ash, alder, dogwood, and other varieties of deciduous trees, besides hemlock, spruce, pine, and other evergreen trees. There are bearing apple, pear, cherry and peach trees of several varieties, also a larg number of choice grapevines, raspberry, blackberry, and currant bushes. There are hundreds of ornamental shrubs of different kinds, also perennial plants, bulbs, etc. The place is a veritable paradise. It would require a generation to grow trees and arrange grounds as attractive as these are. This is by some people regarded the most beautiful place in Wheaton.

It has frontage on Franklin-st. of 232 feet and a depth of 447 feet, besides a frontage on Irving-av. of 131 feet on the east and Washington-av. terminates at this property on the west. It is convenient to the college with its refined atmosphere and literary and cultured surroundings, is remote from noise and other objectionable features, is surrounded by the very best of neighbors, and is an ideal home. Ordinary language fails to convey a proper impression of the genuine beauty of this place. Price $16,000.

Canada.

WHEAT

Europe is hungry for wheat. The United States and Canada must supply it. Saskatchewan is the greatest spring wheat district in North America and its products bring the best prices in the world's markets. It also leads in average yields, as its soil is especially adapted to small grains. We have a number of improved farms for sale. We improved these farms ourselves and know that the cultivation is as good as can be done. These farms are ready for the actual settler to make a home or we will get a renter for nonresident investors.

These farms are capable of paying for themselves in a very short time, as the annual income is large and sure.

We sell on easy terms with small cash payment, so that you need only a small amount of money to own a first class, productive farm. No crop failures at Davidson, Sask.

Write for our free, illustrated, and questions and answers booklets.

FOR SALE—IN THE INTEREST OF DAIRYing and live stock farming on our lines, want to announce that on March 1 a 12,000 acre tract of fine cheap cutover lands, adjoining the flourishing city of Bogalusa, La., 15,000 people, will for the first time be put upon the market under exceptionally advantageous conditions.

Without discrimination I unhesitatingly recommend this project as embodying the most sensible conditions for successful dairying and live stock farming I know of at the present time.

Upon request I will furnish plats of the tract, how the development fund is to be applied, also trustworthy information as to cheap building material, markets, water, grazing, grasses, feeds, free service of bulls, transportation, creameries, prices, and terms on the land. If you do not impose upon my time by writing an idle inquiry I will answer you in detail by personal letter. WALTER S. AYERS, Industrial Commissioner, N. O. O. N. R. R., 1060 McCormick Bldg., Chicago.

FOR SALE OR TRADE—8,000 ACRE TRACT, extremely fertile land, lying within 15 miles of New Orleans, skirted by important railroad systems, close to interurban line and good roads; most available tract for reclamation in entire Mississippi valley; slight drainage will make suitable for cattle, corn, or truck. Client will sell or trade for income property or would prefer retaining interest with party furnishing money for development. After personal inspection and investigation we believe there is $1,000,000 profit in 10 years in this extraordinary proposition if handled right by strong operator. E. ORRIS HART & CO., Exclusive Agents, 1st Natl. Bk. Bldg., Chicago.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

"A LETTER TO DAD"

Dear Dad: You may be surprised to hear from me in Michigan, but I have been doing a little looking around on my own hook before coming home.

While in camp, Dad, I decided I would never be contented with inside work again after the taste of outdoor life I got, so concluded to invest in land some place if I could find some to suit me and my purse, and, seeing one of Swigarts' ads, I wrote for their free booklet that tells all about their lands in Kalkaska and Antrim Counties, Michigan. I have heard for some time Michigan was a good place to go for a man with small means.

Their literature was so convincing I decided to investigate their proposition the very first thing I did after my discharge from the army, and I found things exactly as stated in their booklet. Believe me, I am very glad I came here. I found the country better settled than I expected and there are markets for everything, schoolhouses and churches, good hard roads, telephones, R. F. D., etc.

As you are a farmer, Dad, and know soils, you will know this is good soil when I tell you this district was once covered with a heavy growth of hardwood timber. Most of it is cut now but here and there are still some virgin forests with fine trees shooting up into the air.

I purchased 40 acres for $20 per acre, and in my opinion it is as fine a piece of land as lies outdoors. I wouldn't take twice that for my bargain now. I am sure you will be glad I invested my money this way, and I wish more of my comrades knew of this proposition. I paid cash for mine but one can buy on easy terms with a down payment of $100 on 40 acres, $50 on 20 acres, and $10 to $25 on 10 acres.

You know these Swigart people have been in business for over 20 years and own a lot of land and they claim in their booklet that they do a lot of things to help a new settler get started that I never heard of any other land company doing, and I have checked them up and find they really do it. They have recently opened up 40,000 acres of this hardwood land and are selling it for only $15 to $30 per acre on easy terms.

If you would see this country I am sure you would invest also. You couldn't make a better land investment anywhere. I am told that a good potato crop will pay for a farm here in one season. I saw stacks and stacks of clover and alfalfa and bins full of wheat, corn, and rye, and many fine orchards.

Well, I will close now, as I will be home soon and tell you about my army experiences and more about my land.

Your Son, Jack.

If you want the same free booklet "Jack" received telling all about our land; also how actual settlers are exempt from taxes for five years and how our free insurance protects purchasers; also about our expert farm advisers and how we loan money to settlers to buy live stock and build, and numerous other ways we help them, simply write your name and address on the lines below and mail today:—

YOU PAY LESS EARN MORE

The Home Lands Credit System affords you a less outlay in money to begin with. Your money is used in improving the land you select. You earn more because you can use your money for improvements during the first five years instead of making principal and interest payments. Under this plan you are relieved of worry about payments which confronts the average settler on new land. All that you need to do is to make your living. Men who are familiar with the development of new land will appreciate the wisdom of this policy. Others will after looking. We do not contend that this plan is based upon any other idea than good business. You only buy the land from us and pay for it under a plan which offers security to you in so far as payments are concerned. Our security lies in that you are improving the land. Learn about this plan. It should mean much to you.

SELECTING LAND.

This should be done in an intelligent manner. You should make your decision with the knowledge that you get what you pay for. The fact that big timber of hardwood or pine grew on the land, in many cases, is no criterion. Big timber may grow among rocks and light sand. Soil is the main issue. It may be variable within quarter-section, section, township, county or state. Study the soil surveys of the State Department of Agriculture of the particular piece of land you intend to buy, and get crop reports and information as to climate and rainfall from the County Agricultural Agent. To raise heavy grain and hay crops your soil must be good. Do not be afraid of having some rolling land on your farm. Put the more tender crops such as potatoes, beans and corn on the rolling land and your grain and hay crops on the level land. This is your safety valve against frost most anywhere.

OCONTO RIVER VALLEY.

Oconto and Forest counties, is about 11 hours ride from Chicago. It practically adjoins the famous Fox River Valley district with its beautiful manufacturing cities such as Appleton, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Neenah, Menasha and Green Bay, and fine stock and dairy farms valued at from $150 to $200 per acre and more. Here you do not isolate yourself far away from the richest manufacturing and agricultural districts of the North Central States. Our lands are good; our prices reasonable, at $20 to $25 and $30 per acre for agricultural land. Stony land is sold at very low prices as grazing land. No light sand and swamp offered for sale.

SALES PLANS NOS. 1 AND 2.

1. We build you a house and barn; sink a well; furnish cow, calf, pigs, sheep, chickens, fruit trees, tools. We also furnish dynamite on credit for blasting stumps and rent you clearing and farming machinery. On this plan we require $500 down on 40 acres with no further payments for five years. Larger tracts on similar terms.

2. Land without improvements: $25 down, $10 to $15 per month, or annual payments of $100 down and $120 per year on 40 acres. When $500 is paid we give you the benefits of Credit Plan in Sales Plan No. 1.

REAL ESTATE—CATTLE RANCHES.

FOR SALE—CATTLE, SHEEP, HOG, GRAIN, alfalfa and fruit ranches, from 40 acres up to 82,000 acres, prices ranging from $10,000 to $1,250,000. Some of these ranches are owned by old people wanting to retire, some are estates that have to be settled, some have been poorly managed and must be sold.

We have ranches that are stocked with cattle and sheep, are paying splendid profits, and will be sold with or without the live stock at fair and reasonable prices. We have large improved ranches that present wonderful possibilities and can be bought right. We also have large tracts of land good for ranching and colonization, irrigation and subdivision. There are many small ranches and farms ranging from $10,000 to $50,000. All of the above can be sold on good terms.

According to the 1919 Almanac and Year Book the total value of all the real and personal property of the great state of Illinois, including its cities, railroads, etc., is less than $15,000,000,000.00 [fifteen billion dollars]. The United States government in Bulletin 641 estimates that in two counties of Colorado, containing about 1,900 square miles, there are shale beds capable of producing 20,000,000,000 [twenty billion] barrels of oil and 300,000,000 [three hundred million] tons of ammonium sulphate. This means an average of more than 16,000 barrels of oil and more than 240 tons of ammonium sulphate [fertilizer] per acre. We can sell some of this land as low as $800.00 for 160 acres. Nothing like it. This is when truth is stranger than fiction. It is the greatest opportunity that ever came to you. See us at once before it is all gone.

Having been engaged in ranch management for years, I may be of service in assisting you in the selection of a profitable ranch. Remember, we have ranches for sale in California, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Kansas, Missouri, Texas and Oklahoma. No trades considered. These lands are for sale. Come in and talk with us. JAMES A. ODELL, Room 1403 Great Northern Bldg., 20 W. Jackson-blvd. Phone Wabash 5223.

BUY STORAGE AND USED FURNITURE

Manufacturers cannot cut furniture prices. Labor, raw materials, etc., have continued to advance and they have to raise their prices. They have increased as much as FIFTY PER CENT on some lines in the last 8 weeks.

BUY UNCLAIMED STORAGE and USED furniture—furniture which has been in the homes of prosperous people—furniture which has distinction and quality—furniture which cannot be bought new today for three times the original price.

We renovate this merchandise and deliver it to you like new. If you are interested in buying furniture visit our salesrooms. We have everything imaginable for your home at prices. Storage charges on unclaimed lots. Equally low prices on used merchandise.

SPECIALS.

We "cleaned up" a bankrupt stock of floor lamps and are selling them at positively the lowest figure. These lamps represent the stock of what was once the most exclusive shop in the east.

Massive hand carved bases in mahogany. Exquisite hand painted Japanese bases. Lamps of every description.

Richly made original silk shades. Distinctive designs and colors.

BEDROOM SETS.

Four piece walnut and mahogany bedroom sets. Pieces beautifully matched. Bed, chiffonier, dressing table, dresser. A car load. This car load lot was bought at auction from the manufacturers' creditors. We are going to sell it at WHOLESALE PRICES. A saving of 50% to you.

CADILLAC AUTOMOBILE CO. OF ILLINOIS IS THE PLACE TO BUY A RENEWED CADILLAC

WHICH

GIVES YOU THE UTMOST STYLE, SERVICE, VALUE.

Many of the handsomest, quietest running Cadillacs you see on the street are renewed Cadillacs. Note the perfect fitting pantasote tops [factory standard], the beautiful gray, tan blue, and maroon color bodies, specially painted by us. You can't tell such cars from new. Every renewed Cadillac has been taken apart, minutely inspected, worn parts replaced by new where necessary, reassembled, adjusted, tested, and proved as good as new. And we give service on a renewed Cadillac. When you get such a car at several hundred dollars less than the original price you are getting a real bargain with which no "used" car can be compared.

MODELS AVAILABLE.

1918 Standard Victoria.
1918 Standard Touring.
1917 Standard Limousine.
1917 Landaulet Limousine.
1917 Convertible Sedan.
1917 Standard Victoria.
1917 Standard Touring.
1916 Standard Touring.
1916 Standard Limousine.
1916 Imperial Limousine.
1915 Standard Touring.

All cars listed are sold on the plan stated above.

Buy your renewed Cadillac car from us and you have full value and protection.

Write for complete descriptive bulletin of any of the above cars, or if interested in any special make, model, or type of car, advise us and we will try and obtain such a car or advise if we have such a car on hand.

CADILLAC AUTOMOBILE CO. OF ILLINOIS

TEMPLAR

Who took the trouble out of the automobile? The TEMPLAR Company did it, and here is how it was done.

First—By designing a foolproof motor of the latest and most modern type and in order to do this they were compelled to build it themselves, a common sense four.

Second—By using a transmission that was as good as the motor and as it was not possible to buy a stock transmission they were compelled to build it also.

(The motor and the transmission are the heart of any motor car.)

High grade axles were to be found and that is the reason why you will see the same front and rear axles on the TEMPLAR car that is used on machines ranging in price from $4,000 to $7,000.

Not a single piece of material enters the construction of the TEMPLAR car that is not of the very BEST and HIGHEST quality. That is the reason why so many Chicago buyers feel justified in paying the price. They believe in the old saying: "If you want something good you will have to pay for it."

A little bigger investment at the start perhaps, but this is easily offset by the satisfaction the buyer receives. Besides, he can count on 20 miles to every gallon of gasoline, 500 miles on every quart of oil, 10,000 miles on every set of tires, and only $2,185.00 is the price.

Early deliveries are already becoming scarce. Demonstrations cheerfully given to prospective customers.

Latest models on display at our temporary quarters, 5443 So. State-st., until our new Michigan avenue building is completed.

TIRES SPECIAL OFFER

DOUBLE TREAD TIRES

GUARANTEED ON 5,000 MILE BASIS
Our tires have treble thickness, which insures them against punctures, blowouts; also weather proof. These tires are guaranteed on 5,000 mile basis, but often give the user as high as 8,000 miles. Every tire is furnished with a reliner, absolutely FREE OF CHARGE; 14 plies of fabric between the inner tube and the road. Compare our prices, then send us your order.

PRICE LIST DURING THIS MONTH ONLY:

Size.	Price.	Size.	Price.
30x3	$5.00	34x3½	$ 8.90
30x3½	6.00	34x4½	9.95
32x3½	6.50	35x4½	10.25
32x4	7.05	36x4½	10.45
33x4	7.95	35x5	11.55
34x4	8.25	37x5	12.45
35x4	8.95	36x4	9.35

Send $2 deposit; tire will be sent, balance C. O. D., with privilege of examination before paying. If entire cash is sent with order, a special discount of 10 per cent will be allowed. Not only do you save 10 per cent but also 25 cents for returning of C. O. D. charges. State if Non-Skid, Plain Tread, Q. D. Clincher, or Straight Side. Remember, this offer is only good for this month, so take advantage of these low prices and order now.

ATTENTION TO THE AUTOMOBILE PUBLIC!
Let us serve you as we know you want to be served.

We wish to inform you that this is the right time of year to do necessary overhauling on your automobile. We can do a much better job by those coming in early and avoiding the rush.

We have been doing business for the last 18 years and employ only the most skilled mechanics. We make any part or parts of any auto. We do cylinder grinding, make new pistons fit new rings, etc.; in fact, anything pertaining to an automobile. We are centrally located, and if you want first class work on any high grade foreign or domestic car you need look no farther. Prices reasonable, as we have no large overhead expenses. Our machine shop is one of the best equipped in the west. No work done on Ford cars. Give us a trial. You will be convinced.

ENTERPRISE AUTOMOBILE REPAIR CO.,
4042 Michigan-av. Ph. Drexel 4108.

MOTOR TROUBLES.
Your motor cylinders are full of carbon and plugs get oily. Motor knocks when you open the throttle or going up a grade; don't waste time and money having carbon removed and valves ground. Let us remedy the real cause. Regrind your cylinders, fit new pistons and rings and pins. You will have a motor like new, full of pep, and save the cost in one season's driving. Are you having continuous bearing trouble? Your crank shaft has flat spots. Only remedy is to regrind it. We have the only real crank shaft grinder in Chicago. We make any size axles and shafts and other parts.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

An Opportunity to Build a Big Profitable Business on Small Capital.

The Trailmobile Company of Cincinnati, O., wants to establish in Chicago a permanent distributing agency for the Trailmobile. This is an opportunity for one, or a group, of wide awake young men to get into a business with large prospects.

The Trailmobile is the best trailer, and the best known one. Thousands are in commercial use and over ten thousand have been purchased by the United States government.

The line is the most complete that was ever offered to a single agency. There is a size for practically every type and model of truck and for passenger cars. This line consists of four wheel Trailmobiles in light and medium sizes, made under the original Trailmobile patents—1,250, 1,500, 2,000, 3,000 pounds capacity, the heavy sizes 4,000, 7,000, 10,000, single and reversible types, made under the original and subsequent patents, and the semi-trailers 2,000, 3,000, 7,000, 10,000 capacity—under semi-trailer patents.

The Company is a continuation of the old Sechler & Company (established in 1841). It has one and a quarter million dollars invested in the business.

This offers a unique opportunity for young men with some capital. About $15,000 will be necessary to handle the business in Chicago and such surrounding territory as is allotted.

Arrangements for a personal interview will be made promptly.

SALES CO-OPERATION WANTED—
We wish to meet a firm or an individual who, like ourselves, is successfully engaged as selling and distributing agent for manufacturers of steel, iron, and electrical products to the jobbers and manufacturing industries of Chicago and surrounding territory, whose sales and shipping facilities are not now taxed beyond their capacity for marketing further items, and who would be interested in forming a mutually profitable working arrangement for increasing sales on present products, the addition of further suitable lines, and the reduction of sales, office, and shipping expenses to a minimum percentage of total sales by the increased volume of trade resulting from the association of present interests. We have been established for a number of years; do not require additional capital, and are in position to show a record of profitable sales which have amounted to a considerable volume and to give bank and other references as to our standing and responsibility. In return we shall expect the same kind of record and references from any firm or individual with whom we may confer. To arrange for an interview address N O 167, Tribune.

JEWELRY, WATCHES, ETC.

Diamonds at the Secondhand Price

I am a retired Diamond Importer, occupying my time picking up bargains for cash from people who need the money—from estates, auctions, etc. My rule is never to buy unless I can resell to a jeweler or diamond broker for less than the wholesale value. I offer the individual purchaser who seeks a real investment the same price. I call my price the "second-hand" price, because it is below the market established in the diamond trade. Having no overhead expense to speak of, it pays me to take as little as $10 profit on a $300 deal. I sell all over the world through my weekly Bargain Price List, in which I list and give a guaranteed description of my diamonds. These methods of buying and selling diamonds are exclusively my own, and no competition can stand up against my price.

READ HOW I PROTECT YOU

I am financially responsible [references two big national banks in Chicago] and I give you a written guarantee of the carat weight, color, perfection and value of every diamond I submit. In addition, I guarantee in plain English to refund every cent of the purchase price if you request it for any reason, and to exchange at the full value AT ANY TIME. Cut out this ad and I'll sign it as part of my guarantee.

SEND ME NO MONEY!

Select any diamond from this ad or from the big Bargain Price List which I send you FREE on request. I'll ship it to any express office or BANK in the U. S. so you can examine it. Not a penny of cost to you, no obligation to buy. I get all my business by merely showing my diamonds and stating the guaranteed description and price. My "second-hand price" requires no salesmanship or persuasion. If in Chicago, stop in and look over my stock.

Board of Liquidation of the State Debt of the State of Louisiana, acting under authority of Act No. 18 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the Extra Session of 1918, which Act was adopted as an amendment to the Constitution of the State of Louisiana at the Congressional election held November 5, 1918, will receive sealed proposals at its office in the City of Baton Rouge, La., up to 12 o'clock noon on the seventh day of April, 1919, for the purchase of Seven Hundred Thousand Dollars [$700,000.00] in face value of "Chef Menteur and Hammond-New Orleans State Highways Bonds," authorized and to be issued under the provisions of the aforementioned Act and Constitutional Amendment; the entire issue shall be payable according to the following table of maturities, to-wit:

List of maturities of $700,000.00 Chef Menteur and Hammond-New Orleans State Highways Bonds, bearing 5 per cent interest, dated February 1, 1919:

February 1, 1920	$21,000
February 1, 1921	22,000
February 1, 1922	23,000
February 1, 1923	25,000
February 1, 1924	26,000
February 1, 1925	27,000
February 1, 1926	28,000
February 1, 1927	30,000
February 1, 1928	31,000
February 1, 1929	33,000
February 1, 1930	34,000
February 1, 1931	36,000
February 1, 1932	38,000
February 1, 1933	40,000

February 1, 1937	49,000
February 1, 1938	51,000
February 1, 1939	54,000

All of the said bonds are to be of the denomination of One Thousand Dollars [$1,000.00] each, and may be registered in the name of the holder as to principal or as to both principal and interest.

The said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following additional conditions, to-wit:

1. The bonds shall be delivered as soon as practicable after February 1, 1919, and the successful bidder or bidders shall be required to pay, in addition to the price bid, interest accrued up to the date of delivery.

2. No bid shall be received or considered unless accompanied by a certified check made payable to the order of the Board of Liquidation of the State Debt of the State of Louisiana upon some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, Chicago, or New York, for an amount equal to three per centum of the amount of the bid. The check or checks of the successful bidder or bidders will be cashed and the proceeds applied to the payment of the bonds upon delivery. In case of neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said bidder's check will be forfeited to the Board of Liquidation of the State Debt of the State of Louisiana for account of the State Highway Department, and deposited to the credit of the "State Highway Fund No. 2, Chef Menteur and Hammond-New Orleans State Highways."

3. The Board of Liquidation of the State Debt of the State of Louisiana reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

4. Mark all bids "CHEF MENTEUR AND HAMMOND-NEW ORLEANS STATE HIGHWAYS BONDS."

Further particulars and information will be furnished upon application to
PAUL CAPDEVIELLE,
Secretary, Board of Liquidation of the State Debt of the State of Louisiana, Baton Rouge, La.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN—THE FIRM doing business under the name of Danenberg & Siegel, at 212 N. Clark-st., have dissolved partnership. The firm will be known as Louis Danenberg. All bills due to date will be paid by said Louis Danenberg.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

New Automobile Fire and Theft Rates Now in Force.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

At the quarterly meeting of the executive committee of the National Automobile Underwriters' conference, held last week in New York, a committee was appointed to consider the organization of a loss adjustment bureau. The delegates favored the principle of the monthly reduction policy as being a more accurate measure of the depreciation of cars than the usual plan of an annual reduction. Companies were authorized to issue such policies, but only on the annual plan.

The new automobile fire and theft insurance rates went into effect yesterday. Material increases are shown on the cheaper grades of cars for the theft hazard in the large cities, but in the country the theft rates are lower.

MASSACHUSETTS MUTUAL AGENTS.

The agency convention of the Massachusetts Mutual Life in the middle west territory ended yesterday at the Hotel Sherman. A number of papers were read during the morning and Joseph C. Behan, agency superintendent, awarded pennants to the St. Louis and Indianapolis agencies for making the largest increases in new business during the last year. The appointment of Gerald A. Eubanks as assistant superintendent of agencies was announced. Mr. Eubanks was formerly general agent for the Connecticut Mutual Life at Richmond, Va., but went into the navy, was assigned to handle the government insurance, and for sixty-nine days averaged a million of insurance a day. The meeting ended with a banquet in the evening, at which Gen. Leonard A. Wood was the principal speaker.

CAPT. LANDIS TO SPEAK.

Capt. Reed Landis, son of Federal Judge Landis, who is Chicago's leading aviation ace, will address the Illinois Pond of the Blue Goose on his experiences in France at a luncheon tomorrow at the Hotel La Salle. In view of the general interest in his talk all insurance men are invited, regardless of their membership in the Blue Goose, and the Cook County Field club men have decided to attend in a body.

MEINEL AND WEMPLE CASE.

Judge Julius M. Mayer of the United States district court has rendered an opinion in the matter of the charge against Edward Meinel and William Y. Wemple, United States managers of the Salamandra, indicted under the trading with the enemy act. The court sustained the demurrer to the indictment and dismissed the case for the reason that the facts alleged in the indictment did not constitute an offense. In concluding its opinion the court says that nothing in the indictment reflects upon them, either personally or in a business way. Their acts were entirely lawful.

AUTOMOBILE MEETING.

The March meeting of the Chicago automobile insurance superintendents will be held on Tuesday at the Grand Pacific hotel. H. A. Clark, assistant manager of the National Liberty, will be chairman and Darwin S. Hatch, editor of Motor Age, will speak on industrial conditions in the automobile business and their relation to underwriting.

INSURANCE NOTES.

Charles L. Phillips, who has had charge of the claim department of the United States Fidelity and Guaranty at the Chicago branch office for the last nine years, is to be transferred to New York, where he will be manager of the claim and legal department. Capt. E. P. Kealy, who is soon to be discharged from the military service and who was Mr. Phillips' assistant, will succeed him in Chicago.

John Large, secretary and general manager of the Norwich Union Fire, is to retire after forty years of service. B. Y. Sketch, who was his assistant, will succeed him. Mr. Sketch is to sail for the United States March 17 and the changes will become effective on his return to England.

The organization of an audit bureau for Oklahoma is in contemplation, and it will be installed as soon as the manager can be selected.

The thirteenth annual meeting and banquet of the Michigan Pond of the Blue Goose will be held Tuesday, March 4, at Jackson.

LARGE RECEIPTS OF LIVE STOCK FOR FEBRUARY

Arrivals First Two Months of Year Break All Records.

Combined receipts of all kinds of live stock at Chicago for February totaled over 1,490,000 head, or within about 7,000 of the record for any second month of the year. Receipts for January and February combined were close to 3,500,000 head, being the largest on record for such a period and over 660,000 larger than the first two months of 1918.

With only 9,000 hogs numbering among the receipts closing day of the week the market strengthened with sales largely at 5@10c advance. About 5,000 of the big "stale" stock carried over from Friday remained in the pens, packers and shippers taking 27,000. Tops at $17.75 stood 5c higher. Packers bought many low priced lightweights, which held the average down to $17.51, against $16.50 Friday, $17.73 a week ago, and $16.63 a year ago.

Hog receipts at all outside markets were quite small, the eleven points receiving 35,000, or less than half as many as previous Saturday and 27,000 less than a year ago. The week's receipts at the eleven markets totaled 818,000, being 32,000 less than previous week, 28,000 more than a year ago, and 287,000 more than the nine year average for corresponding week since 1909.

Of the 2,000 cattle received, packers had around half forwarded from other markets. Trade was nominally steady. Some cattle were not shown at all, being put away for the Monday market.

Cattle Average Near Record.

The February average price of good beef cattle at $15.95 was within 10c of the record average of last July. At the present time when very few choice to prime steers are being marketed, steer prices on an average stand relatively the highest on record.

Only a few loads of sheep and lambs arrived and most were carried over for the Monday market. They were largely on the feeder order and the demand Saturday was not very large for that class.

Closing prices for sheep and lambs were highest for the week. Everything showed 50@75c advance, while in some instances as much as $1.00 gain was noted on the in between grades.

Estimated average weight of hogs at Chicago last week was 229 lbs, against 228 lbs previous week, 233 lbs a year ago, 204 lbs two years ago, and 209 lbs three years ago.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 23,000 cattle, 48,000 hogs, and 19,000 sheep, against 21,600 cattle, 52,441 hogs, and 13,801 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts 70,000 cattle, 245,000 hogs, and 70,000 sheep.

IN THIS TREMENDOUS MARKET

Building a good name is one of the most difficult tasks in the world. Reputation for high character is, as a rule, achieved but slowly. Fortunate, indeed, is the stranger who enters a community with the commendation of one of its most respected citizens—with the support of its leader.

Imagine, if you can, a personage whose foundation in public confidence rests on three generations of intimate association with the public as a leader—who has established direct and personal connection with hundreds of thousands of people, including practically all the more important in his community—whose messages are read every day by citizens of five great commonwealths, and have been read daily three score and ten years.

Imagine this personage lending his mighty influence to your business—aiding you with his hard won prestige to build your good name with his friends.

That is what The Chicago Tribune offers to worthy advertisers. Chicago and its surrounding territory constitute the most prosperous section in the United States—and therefore in the world. Within three hundred miles of Chicago is an economic entity, a logical unit for merchandising purposes, which has no peer on earth. In this favored region (rich in manufactures, agriculture, stock raising, mining, commerce) The Chicago Tribune wields an amazing influence—reaches one family in five—sways public opinion not only politically but also in daily buying habits.

Population of the Chicago Territory

State	White Population
Illinois	6,024,942
Indiana	2,754,042
Iowa	2,203,236
Michigan	3,028,353
Wisconsin	2,485,678
Total	16,496,251

—this is a total white population twice as great as the population of Canada.

—twice that of the six states of New England.

—approximately half that of England, France, or Italy.

—more than the combined total of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Holland.

—more than the entire white population of the eleven southern states from Virginia to Texas.

A conception of how great this population really is is gained from an analysis of one of its component parts—the city of Chicago, which has a population half that of the entire continent of Australia. Within the 200 square miles of Chicago are to be found approximately 200,000 more people than dwell in the 71,000 square miles of the following seven states which extend two abreast from Canada to Mexico:

Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico.

Not only has nature showered blessings richly on this territory, but all natural advantages are being fully developed. It is also notable that the development is being made by those who live in this territory. The tremendous volume of wealth annually created by the soil and the people of the Chicago territory is possessed or spent by those people.

This means a high average prosperity, which was sharply evidenced by subscriptions to Liberty Bonds. The Seventh Federal Reserve District, of which Chicago is the center, contains only 14% of the population of the United States, but furnished 19% of subscribers to Liberty Bonds.

A group of millionaires does not make a rich community, but hundreds of counties, each one capable of creating millions of dollars' worth of new wealth each year, do make a truly rich community and entirely desirable market.

Buying Power in Chicago Territory

These few big facts stand out when considering the buying power of The Chicago Territory.

Although The Chicago Territory occupies only one-eleventh of the area of the United States and has one-sixth of the population, it produces one-fifth of the crops, one-fifth of the manufactures and has one-fifth of the total wealth of the nation.

The buying power of The Chicago Territory is due, primarily, to these fundamental, enduring advantages:

Rich soil.
Ideal climate for crops.
Coal, iron and copper mines.
Oil and gas wells.
Clay, granite, limestone, etc.
Lake and river fisheries.
A central location.

Wealth of the five states of The Chicago Territory, as compared with the total wealth of the United States:

The Chicago Territory	$ 38,462,334,852
Remaining 43 states and District of Columbia	139,276,736,238
Total for United States	187,739,071,090
Percentage in the Chicago Territory	20½%

The increased prosperity of this section during the past two years is indicated by the following comparison of the 1916 crop with the 1918 crop, showing an increase of almost 70%.

	1916 Crop	1918 Crop
Iowa	$516,658,000	$821,920,000
Illinois	478,102,000	879,679,000
Indiana	285,384,000	507,563,000
Wisconsin	254,599,000	417,888,000
Michigan	233,748,000	336,669,000
Total	$1,768,491,000	$2,963,719,000

Chicago's pre-eminence as a food metropolis of the world is quite generally recognized, but the extent of general manufacturing in Chicago and the surrounding territory is sometimes not appreciated. Products manufactured in Chicago during the year 1918 approximated $4,000,000,000 in value, and an even greater amount was produced by the several thousand factories scattered through the five states of The Chicago Territory.

In 80 cities of more than 10,000 population, all located within 200 miles of Chicago, the census of manufactures of 1914 listed more than 10,000 factories. The Chicago Tribune reaches two-fifths of the total number of families in these 80 manufacturing cities, and in each one reaches the type of people indicated by the circulation analysis of Mason City, Iowa, given on this page.

Chicago as a Jobbing Center

Chicago is unquestionably the most remarkable distributing center in the United States. From Chicago railroads radiate like the spokes from the hub of a wheel to every corner of the nation. Under the direction of the Chicago Association of Commerce the most astonishing and efficient package car system in the world has been instituted. Freight is forwarded from all over the Central West to Chicago to be sent throughout the Union in these package cars. By means of them Chicago wholesalers and manufacturers are able to reach cities distant from Chicago and close to New York much quicker than they can be reached from New York.

For hundreds of miles around Chicago all business faces this city. No railroad runs through Chicago; every one that touches the city terminates here, making it by far the greatest railroad center in the whole world.

Chicago Tribune Merchandising Service

The keynote of the Merchandising Service which has made The Chicago Tribune famous as a pioneer in this line is found in the following statement of policy:

> The Chicago Tribune considers it a waste of money to advertise a product distributed through the retail and jobbing trade until that trade has been supplied with merchandise to take care of the consumer demand when that demand is created.

Basing every bit of advice and every exercise of judgment upon a vast accumulation of intensive and practical information, The Chicago Tribune is prepared to guide, to direct, to supervise every detail of an advertising and sales campaign in the Chicago territory. Chicago Tribune advertising plus this service constitutes a selling force practically irresistible.

TYPICAL CHICAGO TRIBUNE TOWNS

Chrisman, Illinois

150 Miles South of Chicago—
Population 1,200—

Chicago Tribune Circulation
120 Daily, 83 Sunday

An analysis of 119 subscribers to The Chicago Daily Tribune showed their occupations as follows:

Farmers	73	Barber Shops	2
Professional	9	Garages	2
Merchants	8	Contractor	1
Retired	6	Publisher	1
Mechanics	4	Cattle Dealer	1
Bankers	3	Telegraph Supt.	1
Grain Elevators	3	Boarding House	1
Clerks	2	Hotel	1
		Insurance Man	1

Chrisman is in Edgar County—one of the richest counties in the world agriculturally. Land is worth from $200 per acre up. Of the nonfarmers, 12 were owners of farm land — some of them possessing thousands of acres in many states.

All the above people buy The Chicago Tribune only because they want to read it. The entire subscription list of The Chicago Daily Tribune is volunteer, paid in advance, absolutely unsolicited in any way.

There are thousands of towns and cities like Chrisman where staunch partisans of The Chicago Tribune dominate highly desirable markets.

The economy of Chicago Tribune advertising is indicated by the fact that the 120 leading families in this prosperous, desirable community can be reached through The Chicago Daily Tribune with a 20,000 line campaign at a proportionate cost of $2.35.

Mason City, Iowa

358 Miles West of Chicago—
Population 17,000—

Chicago Tribune Circulation
240 Daily, 955 Sunday

An analysis of 145 names on the mail subscription list of The Chicago Daily Tribune revealed occupations as follows:

Merchants	39	Retired	7
Professional	23	Wholesalers and Their Salesmen	7
Manufacturers and Executives	15	Capitalists	4
Clerical	15	City Officials	3
Bankers	13	Newspapers	2
Libraries, Restaurants, Barber Shops, etc.	11	Mechanics	2

This, of course, does not take into account those who buy The Tribune from the local dealer.

Located in a fertile farming section, Mason City also boasts jobbing and manufacturing activities that have increased population 50% during the past five years. There is one auto to every eight people in this section. The average for the United States is one to seventeen.

Inquiries among 52 Chicago Tribune readers in Mason City elicited the information that 39 of them visit Chicago once a year or oftener. Their tastes are indicated to some extent by the fact that among them the Cosmopolitan has only one reader, as against The Century, 3; Harper's, 6; Atlantic, 9; National Geographic, 9; Literary Digest, 14; Saturday Evening Post, 23.

The Chicago Tribune dominates a market made up of a multitude of prosperous "Mason Cities."

REALTY MARKET SHOWS STEADY IMPROVEMENT

$400,000 DEAL FOR INDUSTRIAL TRACT CLOSED

General Improvement in Real Estate Continues.

Despite continued unfavorable building conditions, another big government loan in the near future, which will absorb a large part of the funds which otherwise might be available for general investment purposes, and continued threatening conditions abroad, the real estate market continues to show a steady improvement. This is evidenced in so many ways as to leave no doubt as to the truth of the statement.

The volume of business shows a steady gain over the corresponding week a year ago, and there is a corresponding improvement in the character of the properties involved. A particularly significant and encouraging feature is the increase in the number of purchases made for investment, a large share of which comprise apartment properties. Only a few months ago there was practically no investment buying, but the greatly improved condition of improved properties, with their materially increased rental returns, owing to the big falling off in building operations, has made them attractive to investors.

Activity in Vacant.

There is a growing activity in vacant also, the leading transaction of the last week being in this class of property.

There also was a noteworthy transaction in the downtown district, which, while of no particular magnitude, is of special interest for the reason the seller is said to have taken a profit of 20,000 on an investment of $105,000. There also was an important deal in manufacturing property, the consideration being reported at $82,500.

The big deal in vacant, which was of unusual interest, was the purchase by John S., Henry C., and Howard Phipps of Nassau county, New York, from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee for Walter S. Ross et al. of a tract of 1,449,176 square feet on the west side of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road.

The property is bounded by Fullerton avenue on the south, Diversey avenue on the north, and extends west to North Kildare avenue, the consideration being reported at $400,000, which is at the rate of 27½ cents a square foot. It is vacant and will be developed for high grade industrial use. Raymond E. Herman represented all the parties to the transaction.

The transaction has a special interest by reason of the fact the Phipps are the owners of the Kenwood Manufacturing district in the southwest part of the city, and the success which has crowned their efforts in the sale of this property is thought to have influenced them in the purchase of the present large tract in the northwest part of the city.

Shows Industrial Activity.

It also is of significance as evidencing the general activity in industrial property in many sections in the outlying parts of the city. The land is well adapted to the purposes to which it is to be put, with the Milwaukee and St. Paul road skirting the eastern line of the property.

The tract is one of the largest available for manufacturing purposes in this part of the city. It is one mile west of Logan square and is in the center of a rapidly developing industrial district. Among the large concerns now in that section is the big plant of Lyon & Healy at the southeast corner of the property just acquired; also the plant of the Stewart Manufacturing company, the United States Ball Bearing company, the Eagle Tank company, William E. Dee & Co., and the American Sand and Gravel company.

Four Plots Sold.

In another transaction in vacant Mason D. Morse of Columbus, O., has purchased from Joseph Weidenhoff the property at the corner of Kentucky and Elston avenues, 105 feet front, for a reported consideration of $8,400, also 221 feet on Springfield avenue, near Lawrence avenue, for a reported $8,400; the corner of North and Tripp avenues, 49 feet front, for a reported consideration of $12,500, and the three story store and flat building at 4450 North Western avenue, for a reported 20,000, subject to $8,000. A highly improved stock and grain farm of 320 acres in Jasper county, Ind., valued at 40,000, was given in part payment. W. D. Murdock & Co. negotiated the deal. The purchaser is said to have much confidence in Chicago vacant.

A transaction in outlying south side acres was the sale by Paul Steinbrecher & Co., for the Northern Trust company, trustee, for the estate of Russell D. Hill to Leander H. La Chance, president of the Stewart Manufacturing corporation, of a tract of ten acres at the northwest corner of One Hundred and Third and Halsted streets, for a reported consideration of $22,500. The property is a double section line corner, and with the extension of Halsted street cars will be a transfer point, as the cars on One Hundred and Third street have been running for some years. Mr. La Chance is said to have purchased the property because of his strong confidence in the future of One Hundred and Third street.

Plans Fifty Buildings.

William H. White, the builder, who has been living in his Michigan home for five years, has closed the purchase of fifty lots from H. B. Albaugh on Fifty-fourth avenue, between Thirty-second and Thirty-third streets, which he plans to improve with fifty buildings to cost about $5,000 each, when building conditions become more favorable. Mr. White has built quite extensively in the Logan Square district.

William Frank & Co., now at 227 West Austin avenue, manufacturers of band instruments, have purchased from the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company the seventy-five feet at the northeast corner of Clybourn avenue and Lewis street for a reported consideration of about $6,000, on which lton, Seelye & Co. have contracted to erect and finance a daylight one story building to cost about $20,000.

$315,000 DEAL IS FEATURE OF WEEK'S LEASES

Stationery Company to Use Old Clow Building.

While there was not as much doing in leases of building space as during the previous week, there were several reported of a noteworthy character.

The most important was a big one in the downtown district carrying a term rental of $315,000. It covers the six story and basement building at the northeast corner of Lake and Franklin streets, formerly known as the Clow building. It contains about 53,000 square feet of floor space, and has been leased by the Thatcher estate to Horder's Stationery Stores for twenty-five years.

As soon as alterations are completed, the first floor of the Lake street frontage will be occupied as a retail store, with the shipping department on Franklin street, the second floor for general offices, and the rest for warehouse purposes. M. E. Wood of H. O. Stone & Co.'s renting department was the broker.

Hotel Property Leased.

E. F. Keebler & Co. have leased for Kate S. Caruthers to the Federal hotel company the second, third, fourth and fifth floors in the building at 212-16 South Clark street, between Jackson and Adams, for ten years from May 1 at a term rental of $42,000. Keebler & Co. recently leased the north store in this building to Thayer Bros. of Milwaukee for ten years at term rental of $120,000. Negotiations for the south store are said to be now pending.

Leases with an aggregate term rental of $234,600 in the State-Lake building have been closed by the Hool Realty company, agents of the building, the most important being: To six Masonic organizations and twentyone Eastern Star organizations, the two lodge halls on the twelfth floor of the building at a term rental of $163,000; to Potter Bros., jewelers, of South Bend, Ind., general offices on the eighth floor at a term rental of $32,600; to the Fruit Importing company, represented by E. J. Pearlberg, the store at 184 North State street, to be used for the sale of hothouse fruits, at a term rental of $39,000.

Residence Leased for $51,000.

J. B. Moos has leased, through the Hool Realty company, to Joseph M. Finn his residence at 540 Stratford place for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $51,000. The house was erected by Mr. Moos about two years ago at a cost of $60,000; it is three stories high and contains about thirty rooms.

The same brokers have leased for Charles Hermann to Arthur Reynolds, vice president of the Continental and Commercial National bank, his residence of fifteen rooms in Glencoe for a term at an annual rental of $5,600.

John R. Magill & Co. have leased for Mrs. Anna L. Sears to Bernard & Picht, for post cards and photographic supplies, the store at 25-27 West Washington street for a term rental of $27,000 from March 1; for the same owner to George Allen, for optical goods, the store at 37 North Dearborn street at a term rental of $6,000 from Feb. 1; for Fannie McMahon, trustee, to W. S. Lung, for Chinese merchandise, the store at 419 South Clark street at a term rental of $13,500.

George P. Chiagouris & Co. have leased for Enos W. Shaw to John Fourkas the store at 106 North La Salle street, for restaurant, for a term rental of $18,500; for Fred H. Wilmeth to Frank Hanis, for restaurant, the sore at 1116 South Michigan avenue at term rental of $10,450.

American Steel Company Buys Big Factory Site

An important transaction in manufacturing property was the sale by the American Hide and Leather company to J. H. Benjamin, president of the American Steel Spring company, of the property at the southeast corner of Sangamon and Cornell streets, comprising about 23,000 square feet, improved with six and three story buildings containing about 90,000 square feet of floor space. Th property was sold for a stated cash consideration of $82,500.

The buildings are being extensively remodeled, and when completed will be occupied by the steel company. Hugo D. Loeb represented both parties.

The Salter Manufacturing company, cabinet makers, has acquired from F. Mortensen, its president, the property in Oakley avenue, ninety feet south of Kinzie street, 120x124 feet, west front, for an indicated consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000. The company is located at 339 Oakley place.

34 Acre Greenhouse Plant Purchased for $67,500

Record was made this week of the transfer by Hoerber Bros. company, florists, to Ernest C. Ambling of the greenhouse property of thirty-four acres in the township of Maine, between Desplaines and Riverview, for an indicated cash consideration of $67,500, according to the revenue stamps on the deed.

3 TO 5 BILLION SHORTAGE IN U. S. BUILDING

Declares Big Campaign for New Structures Must Be Pushed.

In the course of an exceedingly interesting address recently delivered by Paul Steinbrecher before the first annual convention of the Indiana Real Estate association at Terre Haute on "Real Estate Conditions in the Period of Reconstruction," he said:

"The building situation is of immediate concern, and most directly affects our business. There exists today a structural shortage of from three to five billions of dollars. This should be met at once.

"Every encouragement should be given to stimulate necessary building either of a public or private character. Idle labor and unused materials during the reconstruction era can be converted into permanent wealth, offering both earning power and revenue to the community in the form of taxes. We should not allow labor to be wasted, nor materials to be left unused.

"Prices of labor and materials in Europe are higher than they have been in years, and some are higher than in this country. Building materials in the United States have advanced fully 60 per cent, but the reaction has already set in. Heating and plumbing materials, brick and cement are all lower, and together with other building materials will continue lower when there is real activity in the building trades.

"The problem is to encourage the production of materials at fair prices and to discourage any form of profiteering. Full publicity given to prices and materials with careful analyses and comparisons between present prices and those before the war will have a tendency to keep prices down to where they should legitimately be.

"Building costs will be higher than they were in the past, and are likely to remain higher. But prices in general will be lower, and with more neutral deflation of wages we should readjust ourselves to a remarkable era of industrial and commercial activity.

"Such activity will, of course, affect real estate very favorably. It will usher in an unusual investment market; there will be a good demand for desirable vacant property which is ripe for improvements; houses and apartment buildings will be the first to be built in ever increasing numbers, and then stores and office buildings, factories and warehouses will again be erected."

LOOP DEAL NETS $20,000 PROFIT UPON $105,000

While there were not many transactions in business property, there were some of much interest, particularly one closed in the down town district late in the week. While it was of no great magnitude, it had a special interest as a profit of $20,000 is said to have been taken on an investment of $105,000, after a brief ownership.

The transaction covers the property at 218-20 West Monroe street, 45x189 feet, and adjoins the property at the northeast corner of Monroe and Franklin streets, belonging to the estate of Marshall Field.

It is under a lease from Edwin H. R. Green to the United Garage Co. for ninety-nine years from 1915 at a graded rental of $6,500 to $10,500, and the fee was first sold by Mr. Green to William B. Frankenstein of Willis & Frankenstein for a reported consideration of $105,000, and subsequently sold to A. J. Franks for a reported $125,000. Willis & Frankenstein represented the seller and David C. Simon the purchaser. The property passed into the possession of the late Hetty H. R. Green in 1876 as the result of foreclosure proceedings.

Harold E. Foreman, vice president of Foreman Bros. Banking company, appears as the purchaser of Lawrence avenue business property. He has acquired from Alexander Beifeld and Morris Hirsch the property at 3338-46 Lawrence avenue, being fifty feet west of Christiana avenue, lot 100x125 feet, south front, improved with a building containing six stores, for an expressed consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000.

Mr. Foreman conveyed in part payment seventy-five feet of vacant in Lawrence avenue, fifty-eight feet west of Bernard street. The vacant property was resold to A. I. Levinson for $19,000 cash. G. A. Boerste & Co. were the brokers.

Study New Housing Bill to Oust the Tenements

Building contractors and real estate men are much interested in the new housing bill introduced in the senate by Senator Kessinger, which promises practically to eliminate the city building department and the assumption of its duties by the city health department. The bill is a thorough revision of the one introduced last year, and the claim is made for it that it will eliminate the Chicago slum district within the next fifty years or sooner. It limits the height of all buildings used for housing purposes to eighty feet, except public institutions and hotels. The bill is modeled after the Michigan code.

Realty Club Opposes Increase in Tax Rate

At a recent meeting of the Realty club of Chicago resolutions were adopted protesting against the city council's effort to get the state legislature to authorize increasing the corporate tax rate from $1.10 to $2.35. It is declared the increase means a burden to real estate and that the present tax laws need revision, so as to make every person subject to a personal property tax.

FLAT PROPERTY TRADING LEADS WEEK'S ACTIVITY

$365,000 Transaction Most Notable of Many.

Probably the feature of the week's market was the activity in apartment property, and particularly large properties, the number of transactions being the largest for a long time past. While many of the transactions are trading propositions, there continues to be a steady increase in the number made for investment purposes.

Week's Chief Deal.

The largest deal of the week involved the Boulevard apartments on the east side of Grand boulevard between Bowen avenue and Forty-second street, 255 feet with a frontage of 166 feet on Bowen avenue and Forty-second street.

They have been sold by Jesse Darling of Eugene, Ore., to Alfred L. Thomas, for an indicated consideration of $365,000, subject to an incumbrance of $240,000, there being $125 worth of stamps on the deed. The buildings, which are only three years old, contain 114 apartments, ranging in size from one to four rooms, and sun parlor, and four stores. The building has a gross annual rental of $57,000, and it is said that all the apartments are occupied, with a large waiting list.

Mr. Thomas originally purchased this property in November, 1917, and shortly exchanged it for 6,000 acres of clear timber land in Oregon, some cash also figuring in the deal. In the present transaction, it is said that Mr. Darling received some stock in the Thomas Lumber company, in addition to some clear agricultural land in the Lake Basin district of Stillwater county, Mont. E. B. Kingman of Eugene, Ore., and J. J. O'Connor represented both parties to the transaction.

Cash Transaction.

A big cash transaction covered the high grade twelve apartment building of five to eight rooms in Lafayette parkway, 859 feet east of Sheridan road, which has been conveyed by Peter D. Reynolds and wife to Mrs. Theresa Paschen for an indicated consideration of $118,000, subject to an incumbrance of $60,000. The building has a gross annual rental of about $15,000 and has a frontage of 125 feet. Altogether there are 286 feet, north front, with a depth of 130 feet, and an east front on Lincoln park. The building is about three years old. Thomas E. Sullivan & Co. were the brokers.

Elzie J. Warren sold to Charles Peterson the twenty-four flat building, lot 112x140 feet, at the southwest corner of Farwell and Lakewood avenues, for an indicated $102,000, subject to $81,000. The apartments contain four, five, and six rooms with gross annual rental of $15,900. Mr. Peterson conveyed in part payment the six flat at 936-38 Galt avenue, 57x127 feet, for an indicated $33,000, subject to $22,500; also the store and flat property at the southeast corner of Lincoln avenue and Sedgwick street, for a reported $31,000, subject to $15,000. J. E. Renninger of Whiteside & Wentworth was the broker.

Drexel Boulevard Deal.

Sherman T. Cooper sold to Walter Witherbee the high grade six flat building of seven rooms and three baths at 4735-37 Drexel boulevard, lot 80x122 feet, for an indicated $72,000, subject to $40,000, the building having a gross annual rental of $9,300. The business property at 1209 West Sixty-third street was conveyed in part payment at a valuation of $15,000, subject to $11,000; also a residence and vacant. F. W. Grapperhaus was the broker.

The thirty flat building at 5109-17 Winthrop avenue, 100x150 feet, was conveyed by William F. Woodruff of Rockford to Herbert Calvert, who acquired a one-third interest, and Charles Friedrickson a two-third interest for an indicated $105,000, subject to $40,000.

The eighteen apartment building of four and five rooms, lot 54x147 feet, at the northeast corner of Wilson and Ashland avenues, also the store and flat building at 658-60 West Division street, with combined rentals of $8,500, were conveyed by Eleanor F. and Martha J. Woodruff of Rockford to J. C. Hermann of Noblesville, Ind., at a reported consideration of $65,000, subject to an incumbrance of $41,100. E. E. Stults of E. R. Haase & Co. represented both parties and will have charge of the property.

H. G. Eiszner Purchases Home in River Forest

Henry G. Eiszner, secretary of the John Eiszner company, coopers, has purchased from Edwin G. Wood the attractive residence property in Jackson avenue, near Chicago avenue, River Forest, for an indicated consideration of $22,000, subject to $7,000. The house is an eight room brick on a lot with a frontage of 100 feet.

James J. Parker & Co. have sold for Mrs. Edith O. Eckels of Washington, D. C., to Dr. Charles A. Elliott, the residence property at 5537 Woodlawn avenue, lot 37½x179 feet with ten room dwelling for a reported consideration of $17,000, giving in part payment a residence at 7017 Constance avenue, 51x125 feet. They also sold for E. J. Magerstadt to Otto Boheim of Albert Pick & Co., the 11 room house and garage at 5222 Woodlawn avenue at a reported $12,000.

Theater Building for Forest Park Planned

Plans are being prepared by Architect Henry L. Newhouse for a store and theater building to be erected at the southeast corner of Madison street and Desplaines avenue, Forest Park. It is to be erected by A. Harris.

Traction Investors Must Organize.

Investors in street railway securities have been facing a difficult problem ever since the wages of employés were given a big advance last year on orders from Washington. The increase wiped out most of the profit in some cases, all of it in others, and in still others caused a deficit.

The obvious and the only real remedy was a corresponding increase of fares. This was obtained in about 400 cities of small or moderate size, but in the large centers of population more difficulty has been encountered. Several great traction systems are now in bankruptcy, while half a dozen others are only a few car lengths ahead of the bankruptcy court.

The reason for this difference of attitude is principally a matter of size. In a small town everybody can grasp the idea that the street railway is a local business enterprise which is necessary and that it cannot operate unless it makes a living profit. In the large cities the traction companies seem to be greater than the comprehension of many minds; and instead of being considered essential parts of the community they are regarded as evil monsters from outside whose demands for a living wage are absurd.

The fact is that the "traction barons" are principally small investors, including a considerable proportion of widows and orphans. The only way for them to save their property is to drive a true idea of the situation into the minds of ratemaking authorities and of people in general. The easiest method of accomplishing this result is to organize.

Northern Texas Electric.

G. M.—The Northern Texas Electric company has been enjoying great prosperity in the last two years. In 1917 it earned more than ever before, interest being covered three times and 18¼ per cent being earned on the $3,150,000 of common stock. The 6 per cent dividend on $4,000,000 of preferred was covered more than three times. Last year gross earnings showed a good increase. Net declined by a fraction of 1 per cent, but the surplus applicable to dividends increased a little. The bonded debt is moderate and is being reduced by a sinking fund.

Brief Answers.

G. M. B.—The Farmers' Buying union is unwilling to tell who are its backers. The only reference it gives is a small bank which has its account. The bank seems to know nothing whatever about it, except that the account has not been overdrawn. Such complete reticence suggests need of caution.

W. H.—The Pan American Petroleum and Transport company owns a majority of the stock of the Mexican Petroleum company and also controls a fleet of tank steamers. It reported earnings in the first half of 1918 at the rate of 10 per cent a year on common stock. Its future depends on various unknown factors.

Cashing In on Industry's Economies

THE more people who are working for you, the greater is your opportunity for profit. If each person produces a small profit for you, the aggregate will be a substantial profit. Industry and commerce both recognize the truth and the value of this principle. In order to keep down costs and still keep profits coming, the American manufacturer and the American merchant have adopted the principle of volume production and volume merchandising. In reality this principle is at the basis of the large department store, is the main source of profit in the steel business, and has been the main principle in keeping the automobile at a price within reach of the average man. The specialty shop must get bigger prices than the department store. The small steel company cannot compete in price with the volume-production organization. The automobile manufacturer who builds a thousand cars a year gets four times as much for his product as the manufacturer who builds 100,000 cars. When the Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Fairmount Coal Company were organized they absorbed the smaller mines because the owners of the small mines realized that there were such economies effected by the consolidation as would make it unprofitable for them to operate independently.

An Opportunity to Make Big Volume Organization Work for You

The Waterbury idea is one in which the big volume plan of operating is applied to the business of agriculture. A thousand people like yourself will represent capital in this enterprise, and organization will produce the profits. So perfectly is this plan worked out that we are able to give you an investment for $2,500 that would ordinarily cost you $5,000. We are able to give you profits superior in volume and more certain in continuity than you could possibly get operating independently on a small volume basis.

It will cost you nothing to investigate the WATERBURY plan.

It is impossible for us, in any reasonable size advertisement, to explain the underlying principles or the multiplicity of details in connection with this investment. We do not employ high pressure salesmen to worry you, but we have a few trained men who really understand the investment, who will call on you if you request it. Should you prefer to read our literature first, you simply need to indicate that and we will mail it to you promptly.

In this age, when we are changing into a new order of things, the Waterbury investment stands by itself, in perfect harmony with the world idea that every man should get the maximum from his money and his efforts. This investment is in the nature of an endowment which will accumulate value with every month and every year, and will eventually ripen into a perennial profit that will be pleasingly substantial.

WANTED

DISTRICT MANAGER to organize and develop an Illinois territory for THE OWEN LIGHT AND POWER PLANT—a full automatic plant that easily out-demonstrates and out-performs all other plants.

Here is an unusual opportunity for the right man—profitable from the start, with a constantly increasing volume of business and net earnings. The minimum volume of business which we require from a territory pays the District Manager $500 a month—it is possible to double that or more.

The District Manager is paid on a contingent basis, with a reasonable amount of financing if needed.

The man who will land this position must be more than a salesman—he must be able to sell and teach how to sell—he must have a good knowledge of business principles and be willing to make his headquarters in his territory.

The results we require are now being accomplished by other men. The Farm Lighting Plant business is a new business developing very rapidly, and offers the right man a permanent business and an income far beyond that of an ordinary salaried position.

700 Almond Trees in Sunny California working for you—paying you a nice profit each year—small first payment

Health—Wealth—Happiness—Independence

ASK THE MAN WHO HAS BEEN THERE

Number of Orchards limited

The Almond Orchard acreage which this Association owns is naturally limited because it is the CREAM of ALL the Almond Orchard property in California, in the BEST SECTION for Almond Culture, which expert horticulturists agree is near Paso Robles.

The first portion of our Almond land which we offered, known as "Property No. 1," has all been taken up, and the balance of our acreage suitable for growing Almonds for profit is being allotted rapidly. We do not mean by this that it will be necessary for you to come to a decision AT ONCE, but we do suggest that you start your investigation IMMEDIATELY.

Starting with a very small investment—as low as $100—you can have 700 sturdy, profit producing Almond Trees working for you in California—on your own ten acres—trees of selected stock, planted, cultivated, and cared for without cost to you for four years. After the four years the Association will care for your Almond Orchard at practically cost, so that it will never be necessary for you to move or spend any time in California unless you so desire.

Almonds a sure-profit crop

The Paper Shell Almond, such as we grow on our land, is a sure profit crop. California produces nearly 99% of the Almonds grown on the North American Continent, and this 99% is sufficient to supply ONLY 15% OF THE DOMESTIC CONSUMPTION. This simply means that Almonds are scarce and will be scarce for many years to come. The Law of Supply and Demand regulates the price of any commodity, and the general consumption of Almonds in this country could easily be increased far in excess of the present consumption, and even with the present consumption 85% OF THE ALMONDS CONSUMED IN THIS COUNTRY TODAY ARE IMPORTED.

Next Pleasure-Investigation Trip Leaves Saturday, March 8

If you join our Pleasure-Investigation Trip leaving Chicago on March 8 and do not find this investment to be exactly as presented in our booklet, "Inside Information"—and you will have thirty days in which to make your investigation—we agree to refund your Railroad and Pullman Fares, also any initial payments you may have made. If you select some one to represent you and this person does not find this investment to be as represented in our Booklet, we will refund any initial payment or payments you may have made.

Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles

2H-1422-1426 Lytton Bldg, Chicago, Ill.

The entire Almond Crop has been sold IN LESS THAN ONE HOUR in recent years—right on the ground—no freight or other charges being paid by the Almond Orchard Owner. The 1918 Almond Crop brought 25½c per lb.

For over 35 years there has never been an Almond Crop failure in the Almond District near Paso Robles. The Almond Tree is hardy—Almonds do not need to be harvested immediately upon ripening—they can be stored indefinitely—California Banks and Trust Companies do not hesitate to loan large amounts of money on well developed, bearing Almond Orchards.

The Almond is California's biggest profit earner. If there is a safer, surer, more profitable crop, we do not know of it. The men who form our Association tested Almond Culture for over seven years—tested it with their own time, money and experience—before they offered you this money making plan. Consider this, too—over 75% of the new Almond Orchards being planted at Paso Robles this spring are OWNED BY MEN AND WOMEN who are Almond raisers, and who are planting ADDITIONAL ALMOND ORCHARDS from the profits they have made from their present Almond Orchards.

Not necessary for you to go to California

Our third Pleasure-Investigation Trip leaves Chicago for California next Saturday, March 8th, at 7:35 P. M., on the California Limited, over the Santa Fe Railway. You are invited to join this party, under the terms of our Money-Back Agreement reproduced on this page. You are URGED to go if you can get away at this time. You are CAUTIONED not to delay investigating if you are unable to make the trip now.

It is not necessary for you to visit California now or later, unless you wish to do so. It will never be necessary for you to live in California unless you choose to do so. You can continue in your present business, and for a small payment down and the balance in easy monthly payments, enjoy a princely yearly income from your California Almond Orchard. It is not necessary that you know anything about Almond Culture—it is not necessary that you spend the time and money to visit the property—all this has been taken care of for you in advance.

You are offered the opportunity to make money at a long distance, without physical effort or loss of time on your part. No one who had previously purchased one of our Almond Orchards and later visited the property has demanded the refund of their initial payment or canceled their purchase. No one who visited our Almond Orchard Property before purchasing HAS FAILED TO INVEST IN ONE OF OUR ALMOND ORCHARDS.

What you will find

If you can go on our next Pleasure-Investigation trip, here is what you will find:

You would talk to the members of the Chamber of Commerce of Paso Robles, and they would tell you that there is no better Almond land anywhere—that our Active Field Manager, Mr. Nehrhood, "owns and manages considerably over a thousand acres of orchards—he is honest and efficient in his work and located here many years ago after carefully sizing up the situation—before coming here he planted many thousands of acres in other portions of the state, and should be qualified to judge the matter—he is a good, safe man and one well fitted for what he is doing."

You would then talk to Mr. C. A. Staunton, Horticultural Commissioner for San Luis Obispo County, in which our Orchard land is located. You would also talk to Dr. Clements, Agricultural Commissioner of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. Both of these experts examined our property, and in a letter from Mr. Allan A. Murray, of the Real Estate firm of Murray & Terry, 40 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, who visited our property recently, he says: "I have been told very emphatically by Mr. Staunton, as well as Dr. Clements, that the nursery stock set out by Mr. Nehrhood is in reality the finest they had ever seen in California."

Then perhaps you would talk to the Mayor of Paso Robles, to the Bank Officials, to some of the prominent business men—to people who own Almond Orchards—and when you came back you would tell us that we had UNDERESTIMATED rather than OVERESTIMATED our proposition.

We invite you to investigate our Almond Orchard property, the Almond Culture industry, our organization for planting and caring for your Almond Orchard, the standing of our Association and our Officers and Directors.

Just a few advantages

Paso Robles is about midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco—on the famous El Camino Real or King's Highway—about an hour's ride to the mountains or the Pacific Ocean—situated on the main line of the Southern Pacific Railway.

Paso Robles is noted for its scenic beauty—its Half a Million Dollar Hotel, natural hot sulphur, lithia and mud baths—its $25,000 Municipal Bath House—bathing, limitless outdoor recreations, fishing and hunting—and California sunshine over 300 days in the year.

If you visit Paso Robles under our Money-Back Agreement, you will be the guest of this Association while there without any expense on your part. Every facility will be afforded you to make a thorough, rigid investigation.

Nearby you will visit the Almond Orchards owned by Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox Ball Team fame—and the extensive Almond Orchards owned by Paderewski, the world-famous pianist.

Should you decide later to reside in California, your 10, 20, 50 or 100 Acre Almond Orchard will be located in the Garden Spot of America, where the summers are not hot, and there are no cold, clammy rains—where there are no thunderstorms, no hot nights, no sunstrokes, never any snow or ice—where you can wear the same weight of clothing the year around—where fragrant flowers are perpetual—where the air is pure and clean—where malaria, asthma and neuralgia are unknown.

Compared with any place in the East, the cost of living at Paso Robles is EXCEPTIONALLY LOW. You will enjoy the fresh fruits and vegetables every month in the year.

Read these reports

We are receiving letters and telegrams from those who went on the last Pleasure-Investigation trip to Paso Robles. Here is one from a lady who has not returned as yet, so we have not had an opportunity to ask her permission to publish her name and address—but the original telegram is on file at our office for your inspection:

"Have spent several days here making fullest investigation of Almond District, including your properties. Your orchards are by far the best I have seen in the entire district. Have sent you additional check so the tract I purchased from you will be planted this year. Mr. Nehrhood certainly is an expert. Have met people here who had orchards planted by Mr. Nehrhood four years ago, and they are greatly pleased with the results. Paso Robles is a beautiful place, and I am going to remain here. Every representation made in your advertising and printed matter is fulfilled here."

Here is a telegram from a CALIFORNIAN who joined the party—Mr. A. Elba, 600 Sunol St., San Jose, Calif.: "Have just completed inspection of your properties as member of investigation party. The trees in your orchards are easily double the size of other orchards of the same age, and we inspected thousands of acres of the best orchards. Every detail of the work you are doing is carried out with the utmost thoroughness. Wish I could increase my purchase. Every member of the investigation party is satisfied."

The last party also included a Canadian, Mr. A. McMillan Corebay, Manitoulin Island, Canada, who wires us: "I am pleased and more than satisfied with my investigation of the properties and development work of the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles. In fact, I would not have believed that everything pertaining to this organization and their properties was as good as it is unless I had seen it with my own eyes. I have driven over one hundred miles through the Almond district here and they have by far the best orchards that I have seen, due to the fact that their field manager, Mr. Nehrhood, is an unusually capable man, and the soil of their property is unusually rich."

The following is from E. Lindbloom, 136 Toledo Ave., Detroit, Mich.: "As member of investigation party which left Chicago February 15, I have satisfied myself on every point. All statements made in your book, Inside Information, are actual facts, stated in a conservative manner. The Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles is an efficient organization, which would be a credit to any industry. Am more pleased than I can say with my investment."

Dr. Samuel Bell, 504-508 David Whitney Bldg, Detroit, Mich., wired: "I have today carefully examined the orchards of the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles and find them exactly as represented. I find all the representations made to me are conservative."
